OPEN REBELLION

THE IRISH SITUATION HOURLY GROWING MORE GRAVE.

LONDON, March 7.—A Conservative whip has been issued summoning the members of the House of Commons to be in readiness to support the Government at the finish of the debate on the cloture to-morrow. The Parnellites and Radicals are concerting arrangements to have reliefs ready for a continuous sitting.

Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, has caused the circulation of a report among the Conservatives to the effect that he is ready to introduce an Irish crimes bill on Monday if Sir Michael Hicks Beach fails to do so.

John Bright refuses to assist in the negotiations of the Unionist Radicals with the Gladstonians, and has protested against severing connection with the Hartington Unionists. He continues opposed to any scheme for an Irish Legislature.

The Parnellites propose to call the attention of the House to articles in the London Times charging Mr. Parnell, Mr. Sexton, Arthur O'Connor and others with guilty knowledge of and complicity in a series of murders in Ireland. The Times began the series of articles entitled "Parnellism and Crime" with an outspoken denunciation of the League leaders as having intimate, notorious and continuous relations with avowed murderers. One passage is as follows: "The National League movement is based upon a scheme of assassination, carefully calculated and coolly applied. Murderers provide their funds; murderers share their inmost counsels; murderers have gone forth from League offices and set their bloody work afoot." This violence of language pervades the whole attack, which is designed to assist the passage of a crimes bill.

United Ireland publishes the names of the six jurors who voted for the acquittal of Mr. Dillon and his associates in the conspiracy trial. In view of this fact, Major Saunderson will ask in the Commons that the Government afford special protection to the jurors who voted "guilty."

To Appeal to the World.

DUBLIN, March 7.—The Dublin Municipal Council have adopted a resolution to appeal to the free peoples of the world to prevent the British Government from carrying out their "threats of outrage against the Irish people." Lord Mayor Sullivan and others spoke during the meeting at which the resolution was adopted, and all violently denounced the Government.

Another Change.

LONDON, March 7.—It has been learned from reliable sources that Charles Dalrymple, Member of Parliament for Ipswich, will succeed Mr. Balfour as Secretary of State for Scotland.

THE FISHERIES DIFFICULTY.

Seizure Cases Proceeding—Retaliation Not All It Was Pictured.

HALIFAX, N.S., March 7.—The fishery seizure cases will be resumed in the Vice-Admiralty Court next Saturday when witnesses will be called in the case of the Portland schooner Ella M. Doughty. The first witnesses to be examined will be on behalf of the prosecution to prove violation of the treaty of 1818 and the Dominion Customs laws.

It is believed the evidence in the David J. Adams case is all in and that when the witnesses in the Doughty case have all been examined the argument of both will be heard by Chief Justice McDonald.

Retaliation May Work the Other Way.

NEW YORK, March 7.—A Washington special to the Journal of Commerce says the impression is beginning to prevail in diplomatic circles that Mr. Phelps, United States Minister to England was really, but unintentionally, acting in the interest of Great Britain, when he wrote a letter to Secretary Bayard to the effect that England was not then willing to agree to any negotiations that might appear hostile to Canada, and would prefer that the United States should inaugurate a policy of retaliation, so that England could have an excuse for interference. The indications now are, it is said, that the only effect of the enforcement by the President of retaliatory laws would be that Canada would promptly respond, in like manner, with the approval of England. It is, therefore, said to be by no means certain that any further action will be taken by either party.

They Don't Like Mr. Quigley.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 7.—On Sunday morning the office of Capt. Quigley of the cruiser Terror was found suspended in Independent Hall at East Gloucester with a British flag attached, union down. The City Marshal cut it down.

BY WAY OF CHICAGO.

This Information Was Given in The World Four Days Ago.

CHICAGO, March 7.—A special from Winnipeg says that intelligence of the first of the series of accidents from snow slides in the Rockies has just been received. Last Thursday a snow slide in Selkirk struck a snow plow train, carrying it down an immense gorge and completely burying it. While digging out seven bodies other Superintendent Green and six men, all employes, were found smothered to death. Two of the men buried were named Ryan and Spark. The Canadian Pacific Railway officials refuse to give the particulars, and are making special efforts to keep the accident quiet.

Violations of the Game Law.

OTTAWA, March 7.—Complaints have been made of the open violation of the Game Act in the vicinity of Canoluan on the Canada Atlantic. A large number of deer have been slaughtered recently in open and are held in Deputy Ryan's possession, while a number of the finest deer are permitted to run at large and have slaughtered several deer.

BEECHER STILL LIVES.

BUT HIS DEATH IS MOMENTARILY LOOKED FOR.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The crowd around the front door of Mr. Beecher's house in Brooklyn still continues and hundreds of people stop to read the bulletins on the post of the stoop. The dying man is existing on his great vitality. This is sufficient to keep him alive for a considerable time. He is given nothing to eat, but hypodermic injections of brandy are administered occasionally. All day long messages of sympathy have been pouring in upon the family. Some of these came from England, where Mr. Beecher has many friends. Great interest was everywhere manifested in the dying preacher's condition. In Wall-street frequent bulletins were posted and the newspapers offices were besieged for information.

Dr. Searle said to-day: "Mr. Beecher is gradually failing and is now in a worse condition than at any time since he was stricken. He lives simply because the hemorrhage pressure which now exists is not sufficiently marked to compel the nerves which supply the heart, and vital organs to cease. Mr. Beecher's face was very livid this morning and showed a most unnatural color. His pulse is drawn up all on the left side, showing that he suffers great agony. He has loss of sensibility on the left side, his arm, eye, and limbs being entirely paralyzed. His right side is all right. He moves his right arm and occasionally makes gestures as if he were dreaming that he was dictating, before any audience. He also moves his fingers. His mind is greatly emaciated."

After Rabbi Jacobs had left the Beecher residence to-day he said: "The man dying in that house yonder cannot be recognized as the great preacher. He is truly and simply a mere breathing machine."

He suffers No Pain.

NEW YORK, Midnight, March 7.—A telephone message from Brooklyn announces that the members of the Beecher family have been summoned to the sick room. Mr. Beecher is entirely unconscious, and suffers no pain. His condition is that of one in a troubled dream.

The Last Bulletin.

NEW YORK, March 7.—At 10 o'clock this bulletin was posted: Mr. Beecher is slowly sinking, but we do not think he will die to-night. [Signed] W. S. SEARLE, M.D.

At 10.30 the house was closed for the night.

At about 11.30 p.m. Major Pond announced that the family were all gathered about the sick man's bedside momentarily expecting his death.

Meeting in Plymouth Church.

BROOKLYN, March 7.—The meeting of the parishioners of Plymouth Church was held in the lecture room, commencing at 8 p.m. The room was crowded with male and female members of the congregation, and not a few friends from other churches, and there was scarcely a dry eye to be seen during the proceedings. A touching letter from Mrs. Beecher was read, which closed as follows: "Oh! beloved, pray that his departure may be speedy, that we may not long be agonized by this struggle between life and death. Pray, if he must leave us, that before another day dawns he may receive his crown and be forever with the Lord." The meeting closed with the benediction.

SIR JOHN ON HIS OWN STRENGTH.

The Premier Claims 130 Seats Against 66—Algoma Still in Doubt.

OTTAWA, March 7.—A prominent Conservative who had an interview to-day with Sir John Macdonald gives the following as the Premier's own estimate of his majority in the new House:

"53 Ministerialists have been elected in Ontario, 14 in Nova Scotia, 10 in New Brunswick, 4 in Manitoba, and 2 in British Columbia, while of the 65 members from Quebec we are certain to be supported by 37 and probably 38. In all, there are already 120 Ministerialists to 80 Opposition, a majority of 34. There may possibly be only 52 from Ontario altogether. If we carry the remaining seats, the majority will be about 45. A majority from Quebec will not be less than 9. You can rely on this."

Algoma Still in Doubt.

Major White, one of the Conservative workers sent up to Algoma, was at the Queen's last night. He claimed that Dawson was elected by a majority of over a hundred. He arrived in town yesterday from Algoma. His figures are:

Dawson's majorities: Killarney 6, Little Current 18, Sudbury 3, Port Arthur 152, Rat Portage 5, White River 7, Sault Ste. Marie 28, St. Joseph's Island 5, Cockburn Island 42, Tarantorin 7, Korah 5, Goulas Bay 7, Manmaise 11, Spanish River 14, Gore Bay 36, Mudge Bay 11, Chapleau 8, Biscotasing 3, Port William 31, Barrie 3, Campbell 2, The Ducks 6. Total 380.

Burk's majorities: Manitowaning 43, Shegwindah 17, Thessalon 88, Day Mills 3, Bruce Mines 13, Garden 20, Otter Tail Lake 3, Missisagua 1, Port Findlay 33, Algoma Mills 6, Rainy River 4, Meldrum Bay 7, Allen 1, Bayfield 4. Total 215.

Dawson's majority so far 135, with four or five places to hear from.

About 9 last night James Conmee, M.P.P., received the following telegram:

SAULT STE. MARIE, March 7.—Burk's majority on North Shore, including St. Joseph's Island, Ducks, Cockburn and Manitoulin as far as heard from 35. Places to hear from: Michipicoten, Michael's Bay, Manitou, Bidwell, Providence Bay.

The World and Mr. Burk were present when this message was received. Mr. Burk said that he still believed he was 31 ahead. But neither he nor Mr. Conmee were inclined to be jubilant over the matter; Major White, on the other hand, was singing very loud.

The Recount in Halton.

MILTON, March 7.—The Conservatives of Halton hoped to count out Mr. Waddle, who was returned by a majority of nine votes in the recent contest. Judge Miller held the recount on Friday and Saturday, but the dissatisfied ones were disappointed. Mr. Waddle's original majority of nine remains. Three ballots for each candidate were thrown out and two of the rejected ballots for each candidate were counted.

THE SMUGGLER'S BRIDGE.

Government Engineers Taking Steps to Break the Jam.

OTTAWA, March 7.—The ice jam in the St. Lawrence, extending from Croil Island, below Morrisburg, to a point ten miles up the river, still continues. The destruction and loss created by the floods on both the American and Canadian sides will be enormous. Major Anderson, Chief Engineer of the Marine Department, has again gone to the scene with instructions to report to the Minister of Marine. He will visit Farran's Point and Croil Island with the object of adopting means to break the destructive jam. The ice forms a perfect barrier near the Island, almost completely blocking up the river. The water in the flooded district is nine feet above high water mark.

Heavy Failure at Halifax.

HALIFAX, March 7.—The suspension is announced of B. A. Smith, a large wholesale and retail dry goods merchant. Smith has been in business for a great many years, and up to a few years ago was reputed of considerable wealth. Within the past two years he has lost heavily, through the dishonesty of others; these losses, it is stated, amounting to about $70,000. His liabilities are estimated at $90,000, and his assets exceed that amount, but a great portion is put down as pretty bad. The creditors are mostly in England, but a considerable amount is owing to firms in the upper provinces.

LIVELY WAR TALK.

DE LESSEPS TO HAVE AN INTERVIEW WITH BISMARCK.

BERLIN, March 7.—Considerable amusement has been caused here by the efforts of international gossips to give a diplomatic meaning to M. De Lesseps' visit this week. There is, however, a marked disposition in court and political circles to make the visit an occasion for a notable display of friendship toward the French people. Throughout his stay M. De Lesseps will be treated almost as a royal visitor, so eager is Berlin to show its good will toward France. It is rumored that this German trip was arranged in order to create a better feeling between Germany and France through the cordial manner in which M. De Lesseps will be received. He will thus, perhaps, act as a peacemaker, but that he is charged with any special mission regarding Egypt, etc., is regarded as ridiculous. It is rumored that the Emperor will confer some decoration on him during his stay here.

The fact is that it is firmly believed in France that war between Russia and Austria cannot be much longer averted. In any event, cool-headed men believe the spark has already been struck in Bulgaria. All diplomatic efforts of both France and Germany are directed toward localizing this coming Austro-Russian war. If Germany should be drawn into this war public opinion in France, which is now distinctly peaceful, would become warlike, and French armies would appear in Alsace-Lorraine with the swiftness of the fall of an avalanche. Consequently it is of vital importance to ascertain under what conditions Germany would be able to keep herself aloof from the Austro-Russian campaign. Upon this point it is thought that M. De Lesseps, although intrusted with no special mission, will have a full and frank conversation with Prince Bismarck.

It is believed in Government circles here that Germany will remain neutral in the event—not probable according to military authorities—of Austria defeating Russia; but that if Russia defeats Austria and pushes her victories up to the walls of Vienna, public opinion in Germany would compel her to draw the sword in defence of the German population of Austro-Hungary. M. de Lesseps thoroughly personifies France. He is untrammelled by any official position, and a frank conversation between the grand Francais and Prince Bismarck would be good for both France and Germany.

THE GERMAN ARMY BILL.

Herr Richter Announces His Intention of Again Voting Against It.

BERLIN, March 7.—Gen. Bronsart Von Schellendorff, Minister of War, introduced the Septennate bill in the Reichstag to-day. In his speech presenting the measure he said: "Let us forget what has passed. There is no doubt about the acceptance of the bill, but the greater the majority it receives the more significant will be its success. Therefore, we ask you to vote for the bill in as strong force as possible. This will be the finest fruit the session will ripen."

Herr Bonniger said: "My friends, I absolutely favor the bill. The elections have decided the matter, which has a national character, especially in view of the state of foreign politics. At such a moment it is necessary to sink all political differences and abandon mere party tactics. Let us drop the question whether greater danger threatens us from the east or from the west. One thing is certain the Emperor's unalterable love of peace inspiring the peaceful German policy and the steadfast endeavor of the Government to maintain peace on the continent. The Reichstag has no direct influence upon foreign affairs. It can, however, strengthen the Government by promptly granting everything necessary for the defensive strength of the Empire."

Dr. Windthorst said he believed the bill would be rapidly passed, and would not require discussion in Committee. He reserved for the Centre party, until the entire results of the re-ballots should be known, the right of defining its position.

Herr Richter, the New German Liberal leader, said he maintained the stand taken by him before the dissolution of the last Reichstag. He would reiterate his former motions, and if they should be rejected would vote against the Septennate Bill. After announcing that he would again submit a proposal for an Imperial income tax, he proceeded to argue that the fixing of the peace effective force had nothing to do with the country's being prepared for war. His party, he said, had always supported national objects and would continue to do so. As for the Septennate, it might prove to be a permanent measure. Although he was conscious that his party was in a minority he would endeavor to urge the necessity of a two years' service. Herr Singer, on behalf of the socialists, condemned the bill on account of the great financial burden it imposed upon the people. Dr. Reichensperger reserved his objections until the second reading of the bill. It was then agreed to take the second reading at a plenary sitting. There was no proposal to refer the bill to a committee.

THE BULGARIAN REVOLT.

The German Consul Demands the Custody of Three Prisoners.

VIENNA, March 7.—The Tagblatt says the Bulgarian Government has obtained documentary proof that the Russian Minister at Bucharest was at the head of the Bulgarian conspiracy.

What Will Russia Do?

BERLIN March 7.—Much anxiety is felt as to whether or not Russia will allow the execution of the Bulgarian conspirators to pass unnoticed.

The Regents Charged With Cruelty.

PARIS, March 7. The Temps asserts that the political prisoners arrested in Sofia for participation in the recent revolt were whipped with knouts during the entire night following their arrest, that M. Karaveloff is now dying from the effects of the knouting he received and that five officers have already died from the effects of their punishment. The Temps says the Bulgarian regents hope they will succeed by the exercise of such cruelty in terrifying those meditating a revolution, and in this way prevent a new uprising. The regents, the paper adds, trust that Russia will not interfere and intend soon to proclaim the absolute independence of Bulgaria.

Protecting Russian Prisoners.

RUSTCHUK, March 7.—The German Consul has informed the authorities that he is instructed to demand that the persons of Col. Filoff, Major Panoff and Lieut. Kossimoff be consigned to his charge as Russian subjects. Panoff has already been shot, and Filoff and Kossimoff, owing to wounds, have not yet been tried. The German Consul has sent Bollman to Gulrgevo.

Protected by the German Consul.

SOFIA, March 7.—The German consul at Rustchuk, whose protection was sought by Captain Bollman, one of the leaders in the recent revolt, and who claims to be a Russian subject, has been requested by the Bulgarian authorities to surrender the refugee, and has refused on the ground that his Government has not instructed him to do so.

The London Elopers.

ROCHESTER, March 7.—Mrs. John S. White and Albert Lascombe, from London, Ont., were arrested here. The two eloped from that city about a week ago and were finally traced here. The woman deserted a husband and six children. The husband of Mrs. White reached this city yesterday, and the matter was settled by a money payment.

LONDON, March 7.—The Queen will sojourn six days at Cannes prior to her visiting Aix les Bains.

INSURANCE RATES.

It is understood that a public meeting will be held on Friday evening to consider the question of improved fire protection in relation to the rate of insurance. It is proposed to submit to the consideration of the business men and property holders who may be present, consideration of the conditions on which the Board of Under-writers will advance the insurance rating of the town from C. to B. One is the procuring of improved fire appliances which have already been ordered and the purchase of a chemical standard engine of which the proposed cost (of both) will be, it is estimated, in the neighborhood of $5,000. The average amount of insurance placed on the stock of business men is estimated at five thousand dollars, and the reduction of the insurance rate will effect a saving in the payment of premiums of about $2.50 per year on this amount. The question to be decided is whether the saving is sufficiently in excess of the extra amount of taxation which the expenditure involved will produce. Of course the general public outside the "charmed circle" will derive their recompense for an increase of the rate of taxation in the added feeling as well as fact of increased immunity from the danger from fire. The whole question will doubtless be ventilated at the proposed public meeting, with facts and figures, adduced by those who have taken an interest in the promotion of the project, and the decision on the subject will rest with those concerned after they have been acquainted with the full facts of the case. The insurance rates of a well built town like Peterborough should not be much in excess of the general average rate, which for the past seventeen years throughout Canada has been 23 cents per $100. Beyond the mere monetary saving effected by a more favorable rating, the commercial standing of the town would be improved and an advance of rating from C. to B., should be worth striving to secure, provided, always, that the cost is not disproportionate to the value of the advantage to be derived. It is to be hoped that there will be a large attendance at the meeting proposed, and that the subject will receive that full and fair discussion which its importance demands.

AN ONWARD STRIDE.

The Globe, as a Canadian daily journal, has long been facile princeps, and a recent "burst of speed" has left all its competitors on the wrong side of the distance pole. Its latest departure is a development of enterprise and energy calling forth a sentiment of astonishment even in this pushing age. It is no less a feat than superseding the post office department, to a large extent. The morning edition of the Globe is now carried by special fast "Globe train," and it arrives in London, 150 miles from Toronto, in time to be laid on the breakfast tables of its Forest City readers. This feat, unparalleled in the management of Canadian journalism, has passed from the domain of experiment into a fixed fact. It has been demonstrated that it is possible and practicable to safely send a flying express train, laden with newspapers fresh from the press, at lightning speed over a great line of railroad, without danger to or derangement of the regular traffic. The outlay required in bringing this enterprising attempt into practice has been heavy but the financial results are already satisfactory, and we may expect, in the years to come, the Globe's special train an every-day occurrence, exciting no more remark than the frequent examples of enterprise to which the public have become accustomed in the past history of this great journal. For the Globe is a great newspaper, one of the leading journals of this continent. Not only is this true, as applied to its business and news management, but as an exponent of Liberal principles, the Globe, though sometimes the proper subject of criticism, has yet, in the main been a tower of strength to the cause of good government, ever faithful to the traditions of the Liberal party, ever showing an uncompromising hostility to misgovernment and corrupt political method. The Globe is to be congratulated on its exceptional enterprise, and the public are to be congratulated on the fact that its yearly subscription has been reduced from $7 to $5, and the price per single copy from three cents to two cents. May the Globe's special fast train be an abiding emblem of its advance in prosperity and public usefulness.

A Full Quorum at Last.

After Three Months Rest, the Board of Education Tackles a Pile of Accumulated Business.

At the meeting of the Board of Education Monday night, every member was present, as follows:—Chairman Stevenson, and Messrs. Wrighton, Errett, Dumble, Deane, McWilliams, Muncaster, Keadry, A. Rutherford, Sproule, English, Weir, Stratton, Dr. Burnham, and T. Rutherford.

The minutes of last meeting in December and notices of numerous postponements, for want of a quorum, being read and adopted, the following communications were disposed of:—

From Mr. John Corbett, Secretary of the S. S. of the School board, giving notice that Mr. R. W. Muncaster had been appointed High School trustee; and from the town clerk, stating that Messrs. J. R. Stratton and James Stevenson had been appointed to similar positions on behalf of the town.—Received.

From Mr. John Stirling, Miss Nicholls and Miss Keele, asking for increases of salary.—Committee on Appointments.

From the Toronto Chemical Work Co., setting forth the wonderful lubricating qualities of Cedar Oil.—Received.

From Miss Aldridge, resigning her claim to Miss Errett's position, provided she was advanced to the next vacancy.—Received.

From Mr. Rowan, asking not an increase of salary, but a continuance of his present wages.—Committee on Appointments.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were presented.

The accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

Following is a table of the attendances at the schools during February:—

	Aggregate.	Average.
Collegiate Institute	182	163
S. Ward School	229	201
West Ward School	164	137
Central School	671	554

FINANCE.

Mr. KENDRY presented the report of the Finance Committee, which showed a debit balance account of $1,482.92, $639.96 being proportion of High School and $842.96 the proportion for public Schools. The deficit was owing to unexpectedly large demands by the Education Department for increased accommodation, philosophical apparatus and library in order to maintain the present standing of the Collegiate Institute. The report was adopted. Mr. Rutherford first asked the cause of the deficit. The chairman of the Committee explained that it was largely due to the shortage of last year's estimates.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education, Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,—I beg to report that since your last regular meeting for business the examinations for promotions have been held, and the report from the various rooms indicate fair progress during the past term. The method adopted for conducting these examinations, I am convinced, will ensure a steadier rate of progress, as by the present method, the teacher to whose room promotions are made becomes accountable for the standing of the pupils at the time of promotion as well as for their progress afterwards. And no teacher can raise the plea afterwards of unfitness for promotion at the time the pupil is passed up, as at that time each teacher is largely the judge of the fitness to be promoted.

One hundred and ten candidates wrote at the entrance examinations. Ninety-three of these were from the town and Ashburnham schools, and seventeen from schools outside the town. A very large number of these were successful.—Forty-two from the town Public Schools, five from the Convent School, six from the Separate School, three from the Lakefield schools, three from the Ashburnham school, three from School Section, No. 2, Smith, and others from other county schools. Many of the candidates did remarkably well, manifesting careful training. In penmanship, progress is only moderate; this subject requires more attention on the part of pupils and teachers. Reading was generally good. Literature, English Grammar and History may be reported weak. Arithmetic appears to have received greater care than in past years. I am persuaded that too many subjects are taken up in a term.

I beg further to say that since the schools opened in January I have visited all the rooms and marked methods of teaching and of government, and apparent progress. The West school is in a most satisfactory state in every respect. The methods are excellent, government good, and the general conduct of pupils reported very good. The advancement is very marked. Your Board is fortunate in the staff of this school. I am glad to be able to report that, in the South Ward, school progress is very marked. The senior classes are admirably conducted and progress under Mr. Stirling's management is very visible. He is a careful teacher, and has excellent methods. This school will soon take a foremost position. Progress in the upper divisions is sure to be followed by progress in the lower divisions.

The Central Schools continue reasonably progressive, with exceptions, which must always be expected. The attendance is large, but some times affected by the weather. I have no marked irregularities to report. The management of the Central is good; progress fair; no complaints of importance were reported to me. Penmanship is still in the background, but the teachers report hindrances from not having had ink in the early part of the term. This has been remedied.

I would respectfully recommend that the boo a lately purchased by your Board be covered with linen or cotton, so as to be permanent; paper covers are soon torn off; the difference in cost between linen and paper would be a mere trifle compared with the saving effected.

I would also invite special attention to the unfitness of the basement room of the small central building. It is unfit to even stow away unruly children in as a punishment. Some improvement is urgently needed. It is calculated to produce melancholy, bad temper, ill health, weak eyes and other serious evils, and the best way to effect the needed improvement is to erect a new one. Respectfully submitted.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. STRATTON,
P. S. Ins.

Mr. DUMBLE objected to one expression as "The Central School continues reasonably progressive with exceptions." He enquired the meaning of it.

Mr. Stratton satisfied Mr. Dumble by stating that he referred to a few children, and not to any teachers, the teachers were all doing very well.

Mr. RUTHERFORD enquired how often the Inspector visited the school, and was told that, with one exception, every school and room was visited each month.

The report gave every satisfaction and was adopted.

The Chairman called for the transaction of whereupon Mr. Rutherford pressed his motion, left on the table at the last meeting as a notice of motion, urging the appointment of Miss Aldridge to the vacancy in the staff of the Central School, at present filled by Miss Errett.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS,

Mr. DUMBLE objected to the motion. The report of the Committee on Appointments, appointing Miss Errett, has been approved of by the Board, and it was nonsense to overthrow the report now. Besides, Miss Errett has been much longer in the school. Mr. Dumble was supported by Mr. Errett.

Messrs. Deane and Keadry supported Mr. Rutherford, claiming that, as Miss Aldridge held a second-class certificate, she should have the position.

The motion was lost on the following division; YEAS—Messrs. Deane, Wrighton, Keadry, A. Rutherford and T. Rutherford—5; NAYS—Messrs. McWilliams, Errett, Sproule, Dumble, Weir and Stratton—6.

ASHBURNHAM PUPILS.

Mr. DEANE presented a motion which legislated that all pupils from Ashburnham attending our High and Public Schools be charged the sum of $20 per annum, the same as county pupils.

Mr. STRATTON moved, in amendment, seconded by Dr. Burnham, that the matter of school fees for Ashburnham children be referred to a committee composed of Messrs. Rutherford, Keadry, Dumble, Deane and the mover and seconder.

The amendment was lost and the original motion carried.

APPROPRIATION.

Mr. DUMBLE presented a by-law to make an appropriation of $12,000 for current expenses, which was adopted.

NORTH WARD SCHOOL.

Mr. DUMBLE broached the subject of building a North Ward School, but the movement took shape in the form of a motion by Mr. Keadry, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that Mr. Deane be added to the Property Committee, and that they be instructed to select and report on the probable cost of a proper site for the erection of a public school in North Ward.—Carried.

AMERICAN SCHOOLS.

While the above motion was preparing Mr. A. Rutherford, at the solicitation of Mr Dumble, recounted a bit of his experience during his recent visit to Milwaukee. The Principal of one of the schools had taken him in charge and conducted him through the school, which included a Kindergarten room, in which were a number of little children, who seemed to be deriving great benefit. Their penmanship he had especially admired, and this was due to the fact that every teacher was required to be a good writer before being given a position. Mr. Rutherford said he happened in about lunch-on time. The little folks spread out their meals on little plates and sat together, and if one was short the others made up the deficiency, thus learning lessons of generosity. There were eight grades taught, who knowledge higher than those taught in our common schools. As regarded teachers and their salaries, Mr. Rutherford said they were not promoted from one room to another as in Canada, but were given an increase of salary while retaining their old positions. A teacher who gets $400 here would receive a salary of about $700 there. The principal of the Milwaukee school got $1,500 per annum.

Mr. DUMBLE—"Did you notice their ventilation?"

Mr. RUTHERFORD—"Yes, I did. They haven't any at all." (Laughter). Mr. Rutherford went on to say that the school he visited was attended by 900 pupils. He asked the Principal regarding the ventilation, and had been told by the gentleman that when the architect had planned the building he didn't think about the ventilation. There was none at all, Mr. Rutherford's brief experience created a favorable impression.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

Mr. Dumble then moved, seconded by Mr. Errett, that $25 be appropriated for publishing the financial statement in the town papers.—Carried.

The board then adjourned.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. sample bottles to try, only 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and dealers, in the United States and Canada. eodw4

Don't Do It.

Don't rock and rein your lungs with a tight, harrowing, distressing cough when a few doses of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam will loosen the phlegm, soothe the irritation, and heal the sore throat and bronchial pipes, and may avert that destructive disease, consumption. 2w9d

Variety Without Variety.

Variety is the spice of life, but yet every man who wears patched pants wants the patch put on as precisely the same color, and put on that it will not show.

Humorous.

The most humorous man is not always the happiest; the man who has scrofulous humor or any obstinate humor of the blood, does not feel very lively, at least not until he is cured, which, by the way, Burdock Blood Bitters will do in the most troublesome of blood humors. 2w9d

MOTHERS TAKE NOTICE.—West's Cough Syrup contains no opiates, opium or any minerals, and can be given to the youngest and most delicate child with perfect safety. Casting His Horoscope.

Col. Sumter McBride, of Austin, Tex., while in New York on a visit, read the advertisement of clairvoyant in a morning paper. He went to the female fortune-teller to have his horoscope cast. She cast horoscopes with a dirty pack of cards, which she spread out on a table. "You will marry an unusually wealthy lady and be very happy. Everything in your past, present, and future is an open book to me." "I suppose you know everything about my future?" said the colonel. "But only about your future, but about your past and present."—"It's wonderful, incomprehensible. Good morning, madame." "Hold on there. A dollar, if you please," said the female wizard, holding out her hand. "Well, that is strange. You know everything about my past, present, and future, and you didn't know I left all my money with the clerk of the hotel before I started out to have my fortune told. It's wonderful, incomprehensible," remarked the colonel, as he passed out.—Texas Siftings.

What Are Cruel Punishments?

When men, under the impetus of the indignation and horror that are occasioned by the commission of crimes that bear the stamp of deliberate cruelty or atrocity, undertake to apply what are popularly deemed adequately severe remedies, their action generally embodies results that, to the mind of those versed in matters of social or governmental science, are as mischievous in their tendency as the evils sought to be remedied. It not infrequently happens, in cases of crimes of deep atrocity, that citizens resolve to avenge the wrong immediately, by lynching the offender. The folly and wrong of this method of meting out punishment in a civilized community are now universally conceded by calm-thinking and intelligent men. Again, it will happen that this same spirit of impatience at the slow processes of law and of distrust in the ordinary legal methods of punishment for crime will find its expression in an equally wrong and illogical method, to-wit, the adoption of legislation providing cruel methods of punishment for certain crimes, in the belief that the evil of their frequent perpetration may be remedied in that way. Upon reflection, it will be found that both methods have their origin in the same erroneous conception of the scope and object of punishment for crime.

Under the designation "cruel punishments," I include all such penalties for crimes as are designed to inflict direct physical suffering, accompanied by circumstances of ignominy. The whipping-post is an example. The infliction of such penalties proceeds upon the theory of retaliation, and, for this reason, is improper and vicious. The legitimate province of all laws relating to penalties for crime is punishment simply. Anything that is inflicted beyond this, whether against law, as by mob violence, or by legislation, as in the case of retaliatory punishments, exceeds the legitimate scope of penalties for crime. There may be scriptural precedent to the contrary, but we must not adopt as a divine precedent, applicable to all nations, those rules which were laid down for a particular people, in a remote and barbarous age. Many things that are faithless, treacherous, unnatural and cruel, find a seeming sanction and precedent in the Mosaic law. Punishment, in its proper conception, means the protection of society, as represented by the State, against the inroads of the individual upon its welfare, or, as it is called in criminal-law phrase, "the peace of the State." It is only when the encroachments of the individual upon the rights of others amount to a public wrong that they are punishable criminally, and then it is only the wrong to society, and not the sin, that is cognizable by the tribunals. —Lewis Heckheimer, in Popular Science Monthly for April.

A Mender of Clothes.

"When well-to-do men fail to die without leaving property, their families are often compelled," said a lady connoisseur in charitable work, "to do something to help themselves. This is very hard for women who have been trained up in idleness. Some teach music and others teach school, but those ways of earning a living are already overcrowded. As for domestic service, it is simply impossible to make living wages at it. I have known of women who made money by preparing cakes and preserves. Many paint pictures, Christmas cards, and make other fancy articles, but they are hurt by the competition of women who do the same thing without the necessity of earning money, and who are willing therefore to sell for almost any price. I know of one practical young woman who supports herself in a singular way. She does the mending for a number of families. She is proficient in darning and in other ways of repairing clothing, and she makes visits at regular intervals and repairs all the clothing that needs repairing."—New York Sun.

Worth Remembering.

Every inspiration of the lungs, every pulse-throb of the heart, every leap of the blood, even the very thoughts must speed through the brain, all of these wear faster the finest and most delicate tissues that must be constantly renewed if health is to be that beautiful harmony of functional effort which constitutes health. Nature's remedy in the cure and eminently wise one, of expelling, by proper purgation, the humors which cause disease, and Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" are nature's great ally in the cure of digestive disturbances, and as unfailing remedy for constipation and its pernicious effects. 6d-w10

Providing for the Contingency.

"Is this your fourth or fifth marriage?" she asked in a loud voice of an old woman on the car.

"Hush! Don't speak so loud! This is my fifth, but he's in poor health and I may want to marry again."

Right in the city of Hamilton, where it is manufactured, there has been over one thousand dollars worth sold in the last year retail, and the great majority of the sales are by one recommending it to another. For sale at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle by John McKee, Druggist. eodw10

Ungrateful Humanity.

A writer says: "Some people would sooner help a stranger than a friend." Yes, and nine times out of ten he will get more thanks for the help.

Strictly True.

In every respect and attested by the testimony of thousands that Putman's Painless Corn Extractor is a sure and painless cure for corns. The claim that it is just as good made by those endeavoring to palm off imitations for the genuine only proves the superiority of "Putman's." Use only Putman's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure, Safe, Painless. 6dw10

Important.

It is of the utmost importance that some good household remedy should be kept within handy reach in case of pain and accidental injury. The most useful remedy of this kind is undoubtedly Hagyard's Yellow Oil, for internal and external use in all painful complaints 2w9d

LOCAL NEWS.

Strike of a Government Official.

It is not often that Government officials strike, but this county has an example. Several months ago the sudden death of Mr. Dowd, postmaster of Ennismore, vacated the office. Since that time his niece, who for months before performed the duties of the position, has continued to be de facto postmaster of Ennismore, but she did not wish to retain the position and she has been corresponding with the Department for months, urging an appointment, which would relieve her of duties she did not wish to perform. But the elections were on, and Postmaster-General Carling was fighting for life and for his seat, and no attention was paid to her request. She was "put off with an eternal promise, till patience ceased to be a virtue," and on Monday the "strike" came. The mail forwarded from Peterborough was not distributed, and no mail from Ennismore was made up or forwarded. In this case red tape has wound itself up. The public inconvenience arising from the carelessness and dilatoriness of the Government will not be very extensive, but it will be as serious an individual annoyance to the persons incommoded as if the whole postal service of the Province were shut down.

Opera House.

Last night's bill of fare seemed to be the food required by our citizens as a house nearly full greeted the Harry Lindley Co., by tumultuous applause and hearty laughter evidenced their appreciation. The drama "Over the Hills to the Poor House" is new here and its plot is thoroughly interesting and its moral excellent. Miss Laura Booth is an artiste of excellent face and figure and her elocutionary powers are admirable. Mr. Lindley as the nigger is as grotesque and humorous as usual. Mr. Macdonald gave evidence of strong tragic force and the rest of the dramatis personæ were fully competent to their roles. To-night's bill is also novel to our citizens being the first production here of a society play "Flirtation" which is sole property of this company and may be termed a companion play to "Divorce." It is one particulary interesting to the female sex to whose sympathies it appeals, although the motif is strong and dramatic. The Cow which is to be given away will parade our streets to-morrow. The management announces a matinee Saturday afternoon.

The Fight for the Medal.

Two rinks of Peterborough curlers leave for Ottawa at noon to-morrow, via C. P. R., to play the Truro, Nova Scotia, scopers for the Governor-General's medal. The rinks are strong ones, and though their opponents are experts at the roarin' game, our laddies have high hopes of bringing the medal to Peterborough. They have been practising assiduously for the past week, and are in good fighting trim. To-morrow evening a friendly match will be played with the Capitol curlers, and on the day following the battle with the Blue Noses will take place. Following are the Peterborough rinks:

Judge Weller,	H. M. Allen,
S. Hay,	A. McNeil,
R. S. Davidson,	C. McGill,
W. G. Ferguson, skip.	T. Rutherford, skip.

In Memory of the Mile.

Mr. Sidney Blade, a veteran of the Canadian contingent of Voyageurs of the Gordon Relief Expidition, has received information from Col. Denison, Toronto, that there has arrived for him a clasp as a reward for his services in the battle of Ker-ben-kan, at which it will be recollected General Earle fell. Mr. Blade was the only Peterborough member of the Canadian contingent who accompanied it as far as it went, and the only one who smelt powder. Poor John Sherlock would have been another if he had lived. These two volunteered amongst others for the second six months of service. Mr. Blade will in a few days receive his clasp for distinction at the battle of Ker-ben-kan.

The Women of India.

The Rev. E. C. B. Hallem, M. A., will give an address on "Work Among the Women of India," in the Baptist church on Tuesday, March 8th, at 8 o'clock p.m. Mr. Hallem has had 27 years experience in missionary work in India. His addresses are most interesting, dealing only with facts and exhibiting curiosities in connection with the address. A collection will be solicited at the door to defray expenses.

A Lark at Lakefield.

Fully one hundred young folks from town attended the Lakefield carnival on Monday night, and had it not been for the Peterborough contingent the carnival would scarcely have been a success. Lakefield supplied only about a dozen skaters in costume, while of spectators the visitors were in an overwhelming majority. A fine time was had by all, the prizes being won by Mr. Harry Myers and Miss Eva Thompson, of town. Afterwards an adjournment was made to Dion's Hotel, where, after satisfying the wants of the inner man and enjoying a social chat, the busses were loaded and started for home, where they arrived after a jolly sail through the chain of small ponds and rivulets of slush which covered the road.

A Musical Gainotte.

Flaring postern announce that Griff and Wigg, Harry, Bill and Jim, the wonderful Salvation Army quintette, will be at Peterborough on Saturday and Sunday, 12th and 13th when "a flood of heavenly glory and music" is expected. Griff, Wigg & Co., will hold a grand musical parade on the streets Saturday night, after which a meeting will be held in the barracks.

Turnbull is now showing an immense stock of carpets and floor oil cloths, all new patterns; intending purchasers should not fail to see them.

Illustrated Lecture.

Mr. D. W. Campbell will give a lecture on the great and beautiful sights of London, illustrated by 100 large dissolving views, in the school room of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, on Thursday evening, March 10th, at 7:30 o'clock. The lecture is instructive and interesting, and is highly recommended by the clergy and press. Admission, 25c.; children 10c.

Improving Their Store.

Messrs. W. Fairweather & Co. are making some noticeable improvements in the appearance of their large store on the corner of George and Simcoe streets. Plate glass windows have been put in, and a new glass double door of unique design is being hung. Mr. J. McLennan is superintending the work for Mr. Cox.

Supposin' a Train had Come Along.

Monday afternoon a couple of young men were crossing the C. P. R. track in a cutter, when lo! the veicle collapsed like a pair of suspenderless pants, and spilled everything over the track. While the bankrupt sled was being put together again by Mein & Logan, they borrowed a cutter and drove away to complete their journey.

All the spring shades in Satin Merveilleux now on sale at Turnbull's. If you want new goods, see them.

The Insurance Question.

A meeting of the business men of the town for the purpose of discussing proposed measures for reducing the insurance rates in town, will be held in the Council chamber on Friday evening, 11th inst. All interested citizens are invited to attend and give their views.

Recount Completed.

The recount in the recent Dominion election has been concluded, decision being reserved by His Honor Judge Weller. Mr. Dumble represented Mr. Cox, and Mr. W. H. Moore the Conservative candidate. Mr. Stevenson's majority of 23 will likely be slightly decreased.

Change of Date.

Miss Skinner's meeting which was announced for Wednesday has been changed to Thursday afternoon at the same hour and place.

"The Close of the Controversy."

To the Editor of the Daily Examiner:

SIR,—Mr. Sawyer has to give a parting shot (by way of good luck I suppose) and says that my contention is contrary to what he teaches in his College, etc. Now, I submit that if Mr. Sawyer does not teach as sound mathematics as the simple question not which he has been arguing upon, I would feel disposed to commend it, and if he deals with his College subjects as illogically as he has done with the question at issue, it will be sorry work for his pupils. It may be as well to quote what Prof. J. H. Goodwin, who is acknowledged to be one of the best, if not the best, authorities on the science of accounts, and referred to by Mr. Sawyer in terms of commendation, says about commercial colleges in order to not appear egotistical by advancing an opinion upon such a subject. In paragraph 910 of his work, published and copyrighted in 1881, we find the following: "Nearly all of the proprietors "of commercial colleges will, of course, "either directly or indirectly, procure a "copy of this work, and, availing themselves "of the instruction found therein, will make "such radical changes in their systems of "book-keeping, and their modes of teaching "the same, that the years 1881 and 1882 "will chronicle wonderful reformation in "these institutions; so much so that, "probably after eight or ten years "of refining and renovating, they "may be able to command the "respect, if not the patronage, of business "men. It is also to be hoped that in the "penmanship department, instead of teaching the pupils who make 'Pretty Birds,' "they will teach them a common sense, "straight forward, 'business hand writing,' "so that in time the expression 'business "college flourishes,' so often used among "business men, will become obsolete—a "thing of the past." By the foregoing we see that a man who has not had the privilege (?) of attending a Business College may become an accountant and therefore possibly it may not be considered presumption in me to advance the theory which has apparently exercised Mr. Sawyer so considerably, namely:—By deducting the average per centage from the sales, and then deducting that total from the amounts received in mine, a merchant could tell within a reasonable limit what quantity of goods he had on hand and still be within the range of both "fact and possibility" and the idea be a sound one although not taught by the Peterborough Business College. I may inform Mr. Sawyer, through you, that the business men to whom I have shown this design like it for the reason of its being so simple and practical and therefore he cannot urge against me that it is all "theory." In conclusion allow me to say this correspondence should cease as I think the public have been sufficiently edified on the subject of "Mine Account" and will no doubt be glad to find that the combatants have passed beyond the horizon of newspaper warfare. I am, Sir,

Yours respectfully,
A. V. R. YOUNG.

[Both gentlemen concerned in this controversy have notified a equal number of lectures, and as the subject is not one of general interest to concern the public, so far as the AMINER is concerned, must now cease.—Ed. EXAMINER.]

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

A Young Man's Downfall.

GRAND RAPIDS, March 5.—In the United States Court this forenoon Frederick R. Hess, a young man aged 17, son of the postmaster at Clarksville, was sentenced to one year at the Detroit House of Correction, he having pleaded guilty of robbing the United States mails while acting in the capacity of assistant for his father. He commenced his work of rifling letters last October, but was soon after captured by Inspector Smith by the use of decoy letters. His father, who is a highly respectable citizen, is crestfallen over the downfall of his son.

Suicide in County Leeds.

FARMERSVILLE, Ont., March 5.—Maria Taskaberry, daughter of Mr. Richard Taskaberry, living near Elbe Mills, committed suicide this morning by cutting her throat with a razor. For the last year or two she has had occasional sick spells, and at times been out of her mind. This morning she got up as usual and assisted in getting breakfast, and while the rest of the family were eating they heard a noise upstairs as if something had fallen. Upon going up they found her lying on the floor dying, with her throat cut from ear to ear. The coroner said it was not necessary to hold an inquest, as there were no doubts of her insanity.

Committed for Trial.

WALKERTON, March 5.—The preliminary trial of James Keep and Henry Raymond, of Port Elgin, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Richard R. Webster, the Chicago millionaire, was completed here to-day. The magistrate held that Webster's death was accelerated by their neglect and they were committed for trial.

A Montreal Defaulter.

MONTREAL, March 6.—A young man named Cochrane, an employe of Mr. John Flanagan, proprietor of the Palace Boarding and Livery stables, Dorchester-street, has disappeared with $300 of his employer's money. He was sent to collect about $800 of accounts, and having collected nearly $400, gave his employer $52 and cleared out. It is supposed he has gone to New York.

Fire at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, March 5.—A fire occured here early this morning on Spark-street, which destroyed Uglow's book and stationery store, Ion's photographic saloon, McGiffin's outfitting store and Selwyn's millinery establishment. The loss is about $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA.

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,130.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sawyer were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit produced abundantly supports this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance with six per cent. per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—First Session.

TORONTO, March 9.

To-day a message was read from the Lieutenant-Governor asking for certain grants to carry on the civil government of the province. The House went into Committee of Supply and then into Committee of Ways and Means (Col. Gibson in the chair) and passed a credit of $250,000 through two stages for the purposes named in His Honor's message pending the bringing down and passage of the estimates. The credit is limited to April 15 next. The credit will receive its third reading to-day.

Mr. Morodith asked the Provincial Treasurer when he expected to bring down the estimates.

Hon. Mr. Ross: "In a few days."

Mr. Meredith: "This week?"

Mr. Ross: "No, not this week; probably early next week."

The Government notices of motion ratifying the recommendation of the Provincial Secretary to include the Belleville Hospital and the Peterboro Protestant Home among the charitable institutions receiving provincial aid, as provided for in the Charity Aid Act, were allowed to stand.

Mr. Meredith said he did not oppose this recommendation, but he was of opinion that this class of public expenditure was growing very large. He would like time to look at the Public Accounts to obtain information, under this head, which would be of benefit to the House.

Mr. Creighton and the Commissioner of Public Works had another tilt respecting returns about the new Parliament Buildings. Mr. Creighton wants more information than Mr. Fraser maintains is in the possession of his department. He told the member for North Grey that it was merely child's play to move for any more returns. The return brought down on Monday, and ordered to be printed, would contain all the information that could possibly be given the House.

Mr. Creighton said he would wait and see the printed contents of that return. In the meantime it would do no harm to leave his second notice of motion on the paper.

"It's all child's play," repeated the Commissioner of Public Works.

The House rose at 3.40.

The Standing Committees.

The Standing Committees were organized yesterday, with these chairmen:

Private Bills—Col. Gibson (Hamilton).
Railways—Hon. T. B. Pardee.
Public Accounts—Col. Clarke (E. Wel.).
Standing Orders—Dr. Widdifield (N. York).
Privileges and Elections—Mr. Harcourt (Elgin).
Municipal Law—Hon. A. M. Ross.
Printing—Mr. Balfour (S. Essex).

The permanent chairman of the Committee of the Whole has not yet been selected, although Col. Gibson filled the position yesterday when the House sat in that capacity.

ELEVATED RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

Three Men Killed and Seven Seriously Injured.

NEW YORK, March 8.—An accident occurred this morning on the Third-avenue elevated road, resulting from people clambering down upon the foot path alongside of the down track. The trains on the road had been blocked because of a large fire on the Bowery in Nicoll's clothing establishment. The blocking of the trains resulted in a pressure at all the stations, but the largest crowds gathered on the Fourteenth and Eighteenth-street stations on the down-town side. The crowds for the most part consisted of laborers and shop-girls going to work. Between the stations named several trains were blocked and the passengers, becoming impatient, left the cars and, clambering down on the narrow path alongside the track, began making their way to the Fourteenth-street station to get to the street. When about [illegible] had gone [illegible] the train, [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] warning [illegible] to [illegible] since the [illegible] the [illegible] Fourteenth-street platform [illegible] the [illegible] guard rail which [illegible] the track. DIVORCE CASE REPORTS.

During recent months the newspapers on both sides of the Atlantic have given publicity to some hideous revelations of the Divorce Court and have been filled with disgusting details of several causes celebres, and the peculiar character of the reports has seriously stirred the consciences of many thoughtful men. Revolting details of the most degrading vice have been published broadcast, and it cannot but be admitted that these reports are calculated to do serious injury to the innocent and guiltless. Of course men of the world know such things occur, but the great question is, how far is it necessary that such reports should be given to the public? It must be conceded that absolute prohibition of the publication of divorce court cases is not likely to be granted, nor do we think it would be well to give the court functionary the power of withholding all information from the press. This would be a stringent measure, although only after all other attempts to cure the evil had altogether failed. There are many cases unquestionably, the outlines of which, at least, should be made public and this very publicity is a punishment which the chief actors richly deserve.

The memorial which was signed by Gladstone, Cardinal Manning, Archdeacon Farrar and other well known names in literary and social circles in London, struck the right note and observed the due mean between extremes on either side. In cases likely to cause a public scandal, secrecy of legal proceedings might result in an absolute failure of justice, and even should this not occur, there would grow up in the mind of the public a general suspicion against the verdicts and judgments of the Divorce Court. There are some offenders against public and private morality where publicity is the best and most effective weapon of the law. Besides it might be possible, were all cases tried secretly, that collusion in obtaining divorces would occur and great injury be done to the innocent.

Prohibition of the mere reports is not only a dangerous weapon to put in force, but we believe it is quite unnecessary. It is not the knowledge that such and such cases been put into court that does injury to the family, or creates mischief. It is the publication of disgusting, filthy details from day to day, that must be condemned, and here the danger lies to public morals. No one can dwell on the full accounts of vicious evil practices without receiving serious moral injury. He that touches pitch must be defiled. It is common to hear, "although such things are in the papers to read them is not necessary." This is simply absurd. We see no reason why the press of the country should be turned into a continual source of temptation, which only the pure and the strong minded can escape. The newspapers of our own country would have a far greater power of doing good if it were quite clear that the principles on which they are conducted is not merely commercial. In Canada we have not reached the same depth as the papers of the United States, but we are travelling rapidly in that direction. Surely enlightened and clever newspaper proprietors know better than to subordinate morality to self-interest. If only brief abstracts of these reports were given and all sensational readings and descriptive accounts set aside, great good would be effected and a check given to the purient curiosity which is aroused by detailed evidence and lengthy comments.

It must be admitted, however, that the remedy lies altogether with public opinion. We should be sorry to see even the slightest approach to a censorship of the press and we do not advocate it in any degree. The sense of public decency, the pressure of the public will, can effect enough to enter a protest against a growing evil and we are quite sure this will be sufficient to bring about the necessary improvement.

Wheat at $15 a Bushel.

A Company having its head office in London, Ontario, has been transacting business with farmers of Oxford, Brant and Wentworth Counties, on terms that are, to say the least, startling. The agent of the Company sells to a farmer not less than ten and not more than thirty bushels of "Red Lion" wheat, at the price of $15 a bushel—payment to be made in notes—and the farmer receives a bond by which the Company agrees to take from him double the amount of wheat he bought from the Company, also at $15 a bushel, but with a commission of one-third deducted. The farmer is to get his pay in notes. The capital stock of the Company is stated at $25,000. There are various provisions in the bond, such as that if the purchaser of wheat fails to raise the amount specified in his bond the amount shall be furnished him free of charge; also that the $15 per bushel is to be understood as a speculative value.

The world will have no pity to spare for any man who come to grief by dealing in wheat at a nominal value of $15 a bushel, when the actual value of wheat in the market is 80 cents a bushel. The wealth of the country is produced by labor, and not by printing and signing documents to the effect that something worth 80 cents shall be assumed to be worth $15. When did a Canadian farmer ever get rich by any of these short cuts?

Work Among the Women of India.

An Interesting Lecture on the Subject—The Heathen Hindoo Women and the Work of Evangelization Among Them.

About 150 persons assembled in the Baptist Church Tuesday night to listen to a lecture on the above subject by Rev. E. C. B. Hallem, the occasion being the anniversary services of the Ladies Missionary Society in connection with the church. Rev. Mr. Ratcliffe occupied the chair, and after song and prayer, introduced the lecturer of the evening.

REV. MR. HALLEM, who was for 27 years a missionary in India, and who is at present pastor of a church in Dundas, Ont., on rising, said the lecture was not entitled "The Women of India," but rather, "Work Among the Women of India." Thirty years ago he first landed on the shores of India, and found that the women of that country had nothing to do with the religious movement. Christianity had been introduced 100 years ago, but the women dared not enter the congregation of men. Such was the state of things when he first visited India; now everything is different. The speaker pictured the sad and dreary lives of Indian women, their abject slavery, with confinement in the most uncomfortable parts of the house, and their necessary withdrawal from the sight of man. But the Hindoo gentry were compelled to adopt this system in self-defence against the Mahommedans. At one time Indian women were allowed to walk out, decked with but when the Mahommedans came, if one dared to step out unveiled, she was taken before the Mahommedan magistrate, stripped of her jewels and sent home—nay, worse; if she was beautiful of countenance, she was never seen again; she was spirited away to the Mahommedan's harem. In order, therefore, to protect their wives and families, the Hindoo gentlemen were obliged to adopt this same system. This system included the giving in marriage of young people without their ever seeing each other. Gossip was an important function of the Hindoo women, for they had no better occupation in their secluded lives. They knew considerable of Indian life, but nothing more. Thus, it will be seen that the influence of Indian women was a great obstacle to the cause of Christianity. In that benighted land the greatest opposition was experienced from all sides. The speaker related several incidents showing that the great difficulty of the work among the men was the influence and prejudices of the women. The question thirty years ago was, "How shall we find entrance to these homes?" Now the question was, "How shall we find enough teachers to carry on the good work." The missionary work in India is

NO EASY TASK.

The young ladies who go out from this country have hard work. In the afternoon they are driven to the native part of the city, and there, in squalor, filth, and amid repulsive surroundings of every sort, visit from house to house till late in the evening. So disagreeable are the narrow, reeking lanes and cesspools, that a bottle of Eau-de-Cologne or smelling salts has to be carried around for frequent use. It is also difficult to enter some of the houses. Many are willing to receive the teachers only on condition that they receive secular instruction; if it were suggested that the Bible be taught them, they frequently declined all intercourse. So much for the Zenana work. Zenana, the speaker explained, was a Persian word denoting whatever refers to women. Among the lower classes of Hindoo women the work was entirely different. Hindoo women of low caste went about as do women in Canada—unveiled and with every liberty. They displayed a painful amount of ignorance and intellectual depravity. For these, village schools are established, and by means of the missionaries and their wives, and educated native women and girls, a great amount of good is being done.

These were the means adopted for spreading the Gospel among all classes of the women of India.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT ADJUNCT

in the work were the Christian medical practitioners; they, however, could not get into the Zenana, but could only operate among women of the lower classes. For these purposes lady doctors were desirable; lady doctors could enter the home and use their influence with the ladies of the Zenana. The speaker related an amusing case of the efforts made of a Hindoo gentleman to have a doctor diagnose his wife's case by examining her pulse, and looking at her eyes and tongue through a slit in the curtain. He was not allowed to see her face. A college had recently been started at Bombay for the purpose of educating young women in medicine. These lady medical practitioners could not compete with the missionary sisters in the good work, but when the heart was softened under affliction, the christian lady doctors could wield a vast influence for good.

There were 21,000,000 of widows in India, and these poor creatures were condemned to life-long solitude. Hindoo widows were never allowed to re-marry, and the baneful effects of the Indian system of marriage were palpable enough in the case of the widows. For instance, two children are married by their parents, and if the little boy dies, this infant-wife becomes a widow before she arrives at the age of womanhood, and is never permitted to enjoy domestic life.

But the results of the missionary work could not be estimated. There were a great many willing and ready to throw off idolatry as soon as opportunity offered, but they were ruled by the intense prejudices of the majority. The doctrine of baptism was touched upon. As to the qualifications of those who should undertake the work, first, there should be deep piety. The heart that is not itself converted cannot show the way to piety. Then a fair degree of culture and education were necessary. Next to that was placed the ability to sing. The Hindoos were and some teachers who were not singers, had been failures, because the songs were entirely new, and a person without a fine ear for song could not get the tune. A good singer was sure to succeed. Then a good sound wiry constitution was necessary. Last, but not least, is an intense sympathy with the natives and an entire absence of fastidiousness and show of dislike of surroundings. An exhibition of delicacy and fastidiousness would forever lose one's influence among them.

This work was women's peculiar duty. Prejudice in Indian women was the greatest obstacle to Christianity among men, and it was the duty of American women to remove those prejudices. Woman's work in India was the most important of any in the world. None but women could do it. The speaker urged the ladies to take a deeper practical sympathy in the cause, and put forth their best efforts towards the evangelization of heathen Hindoos.

HINDOO CURIOSITIES.

At the close of the lecture Rev. Mr. Hallem exhibited a number of Indian curiosities, including a small caste of a Zenana woman of middle life, nose rings, bracelets, anklets, finger and toe rings, etc., of bone, brass and metal. The rich were gold. He showed a lady's dress, consisting of about five yards of white cloth with red borders, in which a Hindoo woman would, in a few moments, clothe herself with a skilful degree of handiness, after exhibiting the lady criticised holiday dress, of the same material, was also exhibited. The lecturer showed the Krishna cup, a cunningly devised affair, connected with which was a pretty legend. This legend states that a Brahmin woman, with her little babe, chased by evil spirits, jumped into the Ganges as an only means of escape, the babe's legs dangling over her arms. The moment the babe's feet touched the water the Ganges divided and the woman passed over between two walls of water. In remembrance of this the Brahmins devised this cup. It was of brass, with the figure of a babe sitting on top. Water poured into this cup would not run out until the child's feet were touched, immediately upon which the liquid would trickle out until exhausted. Rev. Mr. Hallem also sang a Hindoo song.

VOTE OF THANKS.

Mr. Jas. Stratton in a few well chosen remarks moved a vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was seconded by Mr. Graham and carried. The chairman took occasion to refer to the lecture in telling terms. A cordial vote of thanks was also passed to the members of the choir for their aid in the evening's entertainment, and to the chairman for the able manner in which he presided. The proceedings closed with singing and prayer.

A silver collection was taken at the door which amounted to in the neighborhood of $20.

Rev. Mr. Hallem is a fine speaker, and his lecture was an exceedingly interesting one, no less than the subject of his remarks, which contained a great deal of information.

A National Cattle Trail.

I have said that the annual drive from Texas will probably be from 750,000 to 1,000,000 cattle. A large proportion of these will be stock cattle—cows, heifers, and young steers. Where are these cattle to be held until fit for market? At the Cattle Growers' Convention, held in St. Louis, November, 1884, the Texas cattle-growers were unanimous in advocating the creation of a national cattle trail, six miles wide, and extending from Texas to our northern boundary. The Northern graziers opposed the proposed trail on the ground that the Texas cattle were infected with a disease known in the business as the Spanish fever. They asserted—and truthfully, —that the driving of through Texas cattle along the trail would infect their herds. The Spanish fever does not injure Texas cattle; but all native cattle—that is, all Northern stock, no matter what their blood—catch the disease by grazing on the ground over which through Texas cattle have passed, and they generally die. Here were two parties disputing about a fact that both knew to be a fact, both cunningly endeavoring to conceal their real hopes and fears. There are Territorial and State laws in force in the West that forbid the driving of through Texas cattle on to many ranges. A national law enacted for the purpose of providing a cattle trail would override these local laws, which many lawyers pronounce unconstitutional, and open the Northern grazing ground to the Texas cattle. The Southern stock-growers want the trail created so that they can drive young steers that are strong enough to endure the severe winters of the Northwest through to the bunch and buffalo grass pastures of Wyoming and Montana in one season, and so avert overstocking their home range, which is secure from invasion of Northern herds, as no native cattle can be driven on to the grazing ground of Texas and live. The Spanish fever stalks abroad there. The Northern men assert and re-assert that the opening of the trail would endanger their herds. They ignore the fact that the first heavy frost, kills the Spanish fever, and ends all danger. They endeavor to conceal their real reason for opposing the opening of the trail, which is the danger of overstocking the Northern grazing ground if the Texas men are allowed to drive their surplus young steers there. They dread having from 200,000 to 300,000 young steers annually driven North to feed on a range that they all realise will, under the present land laws, be speedily overstocked, and eventually destroyed, and destroyed by the greed of the cattle men.

Underlying all talk of renting the public lands, or of buying them, and of any and all schemes concerning the disposition to be made of the public domain that emanate from the cattle-growers, is the determined purpose to secure the land, and to place it under the control of the cattle-growing associations, and then limit the number of cattle that shall be allowed to graze on it. The spectre that is ever present to the Northern cattle-growers is overstocking. All talk of their desire to conserve the public domain is false. They desire to secure absolute possession of the range; and if they succeed, they will as surely stop agricultural settlers from entering the arid belt to acquire low-lying farms along the streams as if they owned the land in fee-simple. —Frank Wilkeson, in Harper's Magazine for April.

A Tramp's Great Feat.

As the South-bound freight train left this station Tuesday afternoon, a number of our citizens were eye-witnesses of a scene that made the blood in their veins run cold. A tramp was trying to "beat" his passage on the train and attempted to get on a brakebeam. He missed his reckoning and his feet dragged on the track between the rails. The train was moving about six miles per hour. To let go was certain death. He struggled frantically to get his feet on the brake-beam, but failed. Meanwhile, the spectators were horrified, and many turned their eyes away from the scene. At last, by an almost superhuman effort, he got both feet up between his hands against the brake-bar of which he had to hold, and, after swinging several times until his body had gained sufficient momentum, he let go with his hands and shot out from under the car head first, and landed on his back on the side of the embankment, down which he rolled into a mud puddle. His face was devoid of color when he arose, the palms of his hands were bleeding, and he trembled as if suffering from a severe chill. His adventure and marvelous escape aroused the sympathies of those who witnessed the knock at "death's door," and a collection of several dollars was promptly taken up and given him. He was a robust young man of about 25 years of age, and owed his life to his strength and agility.—Gridley (Ohio) Herald.

Worth Remembering.

Every inspiration of the lungs, every pulse-throb of the heart, every sweep of the arm—even our very thoughts as they speed through the brain, all create waste matter that must be constantly removed if the aim is to be that beautiful harmony of functional effort which constitutes health. Nature's remedy for the same all eminently wise one, of expelling, by proper purgation, the humors which cause disease, and Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" are nature's great ally in the cure of digestive disturbances, and an unfailing remedy for constipation and its pernicious effects. d&w10

Injured Spine and Partial Paralysis—Cured.

58 Paddington Grove, Battersea, Park Road, London, W., England.

I met with a serious accident, resulting in a severe shock to the system, injuring my spine and partially paralyzing one side of my body. I was admitted to St. George's Hospital, Newcastle Road, where I remained 109 days. I was unable to stand or even sit up. The physicians decided that my chance of recovery was to undergo an operation, to which I objected and took my discharge. Being carried home, I was in a short time unable to turn myself in bed. Procuring a supply of St. Jacobs Oil, I caused it to be rubbed freely on back, legs and feet. I am now able to walk, am free from pain, and my bodily health is daily improving. WILLIAM THOMAS.

After using half a bottle I was able to resume my duties in forty-eight hours. RALPH DERMODY, Actor.

LOCAL NEWS.

Legal Intelligence.

The following case was disposed of at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, Saturday:—

HATTON v. BERTRAM—Judgment. Appeal from the judgment of Proudfoot, J., at the trial upon the construction of a will dismissed with costs and held that a devise of the property "now known as Walkerfield," spoke from the death and included property added to Walkerfield after the will was made. Lash Q. C., and E. H. D. Hall (Peterborough) for the appeal. J. Maclennan, Q. C., and Moss, Q. C., contra.

With regard to the above the Globe says: "In Hatton v. Bertram the point decided was a nice one and may be very shortly stated. To the average layman the decision will no doubt be a surprise. A testator devised to his daughter "that part of my property known as Walkerfield, being the property I now reside upon, containing 50 acres more or less." After making the will the testator acquired some land adjacent to Walkerfield, and added it to that property. The contest was chiefly upon the meaning of the word "now," and it was held that, as it clearly appeared that the testator bought it to form part of Walkerfield, and as the will spoke from the death, "now" meant at the time of his death, and the after acquired property passed under the devise to his daughter."

Opera House.

The piece produced last evening, both as regards acting and toilettes, was infinitely superior to anything we have had of late, and the audience seemed more than delighted with the lessons given in "Flirtation." To-night inaugurates another change of bill and gives our citizens an opportunity of witnessing a genuine sensational drama, with its great fire scene—and special features. The Phœnix should draw, as the Ottawa Free Press thus speaks of its rendition: "In the drama the notable features are Mr. Lindley and Mr. Walters, the former as a Protean artist, rendering several characters most artistically, and the latter giving the best Jew we have witnessed here, whilst the ladies are more than equal to the requirements." We should not forget to announce the matinee. The cow will be given away on Saturday evening, and doubtless a heap of fun will ensue.

A Terrible Weapon.

A long-handled, cruel looking Arab spear reclines against the wall in Mayor Stevenson's office, to whom it was presented as a souvenir by Mr. Sidney Blade, who received a medal and clasp for services as a Nile voyageur from this district. It was picked up by him on the battle-field of Kirbekan, Feb. 10th, 1885, where General Earle fell. The spear has a shaft of light wood about five feet long, bound round at intervals by coils of brass wire, while the blade is a piece of thin beaten steel, about 9 inches long, with keen edges all round, in the form of an elongated trowel. At present the spear is clean and bright, but who can tell how many times its cruel, deadly thrust has sent a British soldier to his long home, and suffused the glittering steel with the heart's blood of a brave red-coat, before the savage who so skilfully wielded the awkward weapon was himself laid low?

Temperance Convention.

The annual convention for 1887 of the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance is being held in Toronto to-day and on Thursday. The sessions of the convention will be open to the public. A full report of work done, with practical suggestions for further operations, will be submitted by the Executive Committee, and it is expected matters of great moment will be discussed by the Alliance. A large attendance of members is expected, as the proceedings will be of unusual importance.

Illustrated Lecture.

Mr. D. W. Campbell will give a lecture on the great and beautiful sights of London, illustrated by 100 large dissolving views, in the school room of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, on Thursday evening, March 10th, at 7:30 o'clock. The lecture is instructive and interesting, and is highly recommended by the clergy and press. Admission, 25c.; children 10c.

Turnbull is now showing an immense stock of carpets and floor oil cloths, all new patterns; intending purchasers should not fail to see them.

Social.

A social under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Church will be held at the residence of Mr. Bruce Ferguson, Stewart street, on Friday evening, March 11th, at half-past seven. Refreshments will be served during the evening and a good musical programme provided. Admission 25 cents. 4d

Here's Something for Peterborolites.

Remember, the cheapest and freshest groceries can be obtained from W. J. Morrow, Town Clock Grocery, Opera House block. Heads of families will please bear this in mind.

Grand Lodge.

A meeting of the Joint Committee of the Oddfellow's lodges in town, to organize for the reception of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, which is to hold its annual session in Peterborough this year, is to be held in Mr. F. E. Henderson's office this evening.

Insurance Rates.

The question to be discussed at the public meeting on Friday evening is one of the first importance to the business men of Peterborough and the citizens generally. The proposals made are such as of course involve an extra expenditure of money by the tax-payers and the one great question to consider is whether the benefit to be derived will be equal to the expenditure. We should all like to see the rate of insurance lowered, but whether the present effort will bring it about or not, there is one thing certain and that is there will be no increase in the cost of Belleghem's splendid furniture. D. Belleghem the Famous Furniture Factor, is willing to insure satisfaction both in price and quality and style, in all furniture purchased of him. Call and see his superb and extensive stock. The insurance rating of the town may be "B" or "C," but the rating of Belleghem's furniture is "A 1" forever.

Hallelujah Jail Birds.

Tuesday evening Capt. Bertha Smith, Lieut. Wood, the Cadet, (ladies,) and a couple of male soldiers from Lindsay, who were imprisoned in that town for several weeks, visited Peterborough, and were tendered a hearty welcome. In the evening they paraded the streets in prison uniforms, and at the barracks recited their experiences of prison life—their close confinement to narrow, dark cells, and the daily routine of skilly and soup, soup and skilly, etc. They managed nevertheless to extract germs of humor that created profuse laughter from their "tale of woe." The meeting was conducted by Adjutant Bolton and attracted a large crowd.

The Blue Noses Withdraw.

Mr. C. McGill, secretary of the Curling Club, received a message yesterday from the Truro curlers, stating their inability to get a team together, and their consequent withdrawal from the contest for the Governor-General's medal. Later on another telegram was received from the Governor-General's secretary, calling upon the Peterborough club to proceed to Ottawa to play the curlers of Lindsay, who come next in order to Truro, for the medal. The Peterborough men left at noon to-day, and will play a friendly match with the Ottawa curlers to-night. The medal game will be played to-morrow.

Cancelled by Death.

By the lamented death of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, the Brooklyn divine, the citizens of Peterborough have lost forever a great intellectual treat, as Mr. J. A. Goddard, of Belleville had arranged to have Mr. Beecher lecture in Peterborough, Belleville and Ottawa some time during this month. Mr. Goddard was making preparations for his appearance when he received a letter from Mr. Beecher's agent postponing for the present all lecturing engagements. His sudden death has forever deprived us of this rich treat.

Market Moms.

There was a very fair market this morning. Potatoes were plentiful at 70 to 75c. per bag; apples, 75c. to $1.00. Beef went at 4 to 5½ and 6c.; pork, 7 and 8c. There was considerable wood, the best quality going at $4 per cord. Inside there was little doing, butter going at 21c. per lb., and eggs 15c. per dozen.

Reducing the Slush.

Chairman Cahill, of the Street Committee, has had men at work the last two days cutting gorges through the snowbanks and icebergs along the principal streets in town, for the purpose of carrying off the surface water to the drains. A good effect is noticed in consequence.

Miss Mahoney has just returned after a two weeks absence in the wholesale Millinery markets where she has been picking up all the latest styles and novelties. Ladies will find every thing new in millinery at Turnbull's.

Charlotte Street Church.

Sunday Last of Anniversary Services and Celebration—Sunday Sermon by Rev. T. Manning—The Entertainment Tuesday Night.

On Sunday special services were held in the Charlotte street Methodist Church, in commemoration of the anniversary of the Sunday school. On Sunday morning, worshippers on entering the church saw there about 200 members of the school ranged on graded seats flanking the pulpit platform on either side. The musical portion of the service was contributed entirely by the children both at the morning and evening services and their excellent rendering of hymns and anthems, reflected great credit on their training and added greatly to the interest and impressiveness of the services. Rev. Thos. Manning of Oshawa, former pastor of the church, occupied the pulpit morning and evening, and his addresses were replete with his old time eloquence earnestness and matured thought. The sermon in the morning was especially addressed to the subject of the occasion. In spite of the unfavourable weather there was a large attendance during the day. On Tuesday evening was held in the body of the Church, which was filled with a large audience while the children held their vantage ground of prominence on the raised seats. The programme was inaugurated by the opening chorus by the school, and this was followed by the repetition in unison of the Lord's Prayer, followed by a brief congratulatory address by Rev. F. H. Wallace, pastor, who occupied the chair and introduced the succeeding programme which was presented with great acceptability. It consisted of about fifteen numbers, comprising recitations, dialogues, solo and chorus singing, etc. Many of the little performers acquitted themselves with great credit. Space will not permit particularizing. Mr. Manning was warmly received and in a pleasant, instructive address, emphasized with his wonted ability the principle of the importance and propriety of doing right for right' sake, contrasting the effect and merit of actions arising from a sense of duty as opposed to impulse and eloquently and earnestly elaborating his position.

The programme was brought to a close by a finely presented and effective musical tableau, "The Red, White and Blue."

A vote of thanks, moved by Mr. J. L. Hughes and seconded by Mr. E. B. Stone, was tendered the officers, children and teachers of the school for the fine entertainment provided.

A collection, followed by the benediction by Rev. Mr. Manning, brought to a close a most instructive and successful entertainment, and concluded the anniversary services for 1887 of the Charlotte street Methodist Sunday School. The net financial proceeds of the services amount to about $50.

Peacefully Gone Home.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher Unconsciously Sinks Into Eternity, Never Regaining His Faculties After the Fatal Illness Seized Him.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher died at 9.30 this morning. As the end approached, the family of the dying pastor could be heard weeping and sobbing. Dr. Searle stood by the bedside, holding one of Mr. Beecher's hands, and at 9.30 he said: "Mr. Beecher is no more; he is dead." It is difficult to describe the scene at this moment. Notwithstanding that his death was looked for, that it had been expected hourly, it seemed to come with such crushing force that the family were perfectly prostrated with grief. Mrs. Beecher, who had held out so bravely from the first, was utterly broken down, and when supported by her son Harry, as she tottered from the room, looked as if it would not be long before she would follow her beloved husband.

As a mark of respect to his memory, flags on all public buildings were placed at half-mast and Mayor Whitney had the City Hall bell tolled for half an hour. The committee appointed by the officers of Plymouth Church to take charge of the funeral made the necessary arrangements this morning. Many years ago, John S. Howard gave Mr. Beecher a portion of his plot in Greenwood Cemetery, and members of Mr. Beecher's family who have died have been buried there, but the committee will probably now select another plot. Nearly a hundred telegrams of condolence poured into the house-hold within an hour after the death. President Cleveland and Governor Hill were among the first to send such messages.

To Arms! To Arms!

An Appeal to Young Ladies to "Fall to in the Work of Love.

Young ladies there is a work for you to do. God calls for it, society looks for it and duty demands it. Buckle on the armour of perseverance and self-denial, and sally forth with shield in hand and sword unsheathed to the call of Christ, and "Home and Native Land." Young ladies, we want you to come out and help us in this work of transformation. We have a good opening now in the Young Woman's Mission, through which we may pass to the bedside of the sick and dying with the refreshing flowers of thoughtfulness to the home of the poor and destitute with the garment of warmth and bread to revive, to the inebriate father and hopeless mother with a word of comfort and cheer, and also to seek employment for those who are discouraged with the buffeting of this cold world. Girls, will you give this your earnest thought and grateful attention?

More than Claimed.

"For the past four or five years," says Mrs. Emery, of Cottam, Ont., "I have been subject to kidney troubles. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. It has done me more good than what was claimed for it. I can recommend it to all suffers from like diseases." 2w9d

Doubly Benefited.

There is no one remedy known that has more curative power over dyspepsia and liver complaint than Burdock Blood Bitters. "I had liver complaint and my husband was so bad with dyspepsia that he could not labor. One dozen bottles of B. B. B. has enabled us both to attend to our usual work," reports Mrs. John A. BEECHER'S BURIAL.

ARRANGING THE DETAILS OF THE FUNERAL.

BROOKLYN, March 9.—After the brief and strictly private service at the house to-morrow morning the body will be taken to Plymouth Church, where it will lie in state until to-morrow at 10.30 a.m., when funeral services will be held simultaneously at the church and at the Academy of Music. The body will then be taken to Greenwood Cemetery and placed in a vault until a suitable lot is provided for interment.

Rev. Charles H. Hall of Holy Trinity Church, Brooklyn, will officiate at the church. The services at the Academy will be of a more public character, and many prominent people will take part in the speaking and otherwise. The arrangements for this service are not quite completed. The 13th regiment, N.G.S.N.Y., of which Mr. Beecher was chaplain, will escort the body from the house to the church and thence to the cemetery. Company G will act as body guard. This company is mostly composed of members of Plymouth Church. This afternoon the children of the three Sunday schools lately under Mr. Beecher's supervision will view the body at the church, and afterward the general public will be admitted. The family will not wear any sign of mourning, and no crape or similar drapery will be used in any way in connection with the funeral ceremonies.

Dr. Parker's Tribute.

LONDON, March 9.—The Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker, pastor of the City Temple, whose guest the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher was during his recent visit to London, publishes a tribute to Mr. Beecher's memory. He says he does not hesitate to pronounce Mr. Beecher the greatest preacher who ever lived, and continues: "We, who have bowed with him in prayer, know with what might of humility, penitence, faith and love he stormed the Kingdom of Heaven. His moral fearlessness was consistent throughout. It was in vain to threaten Mr. Beecher. Having made up his mind, no further woe was better prepared to face loss, infamy or desertion. I never heard him say one unkind word of any enemy. When Mr. Beecher left my house he put his arm around my neck, kissed me, and said, 'Good bye, old fellow; I love you.' Those were the last words I heard from Mr. Beecher's lips. My house is larger and brighter because Mr. Beecher tarried there. Mr. Beecher and his wife used to call themselves two old folks. Verily, they might have been young lovers, so devoted were they to one another. I wish to be at Mr. Beecher's grave in spirit to take one short look at the place where his body lies, and thereafter to look steadily upward to the Heaven to which he has ascended."

The "Severe Simplicity" of the Coffin.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The body of Mr. Beecher was embalmed to-day. The undertaker said that Mr. Beecher's face gave evidence of his having suffered great pain. The face was not pinched but it had flattened out much. This will not mar the statue. Mrs. Beecher is almost prostrated and fears are entertained that she will not long survive her husband. In accordance with Mr. Beecher's often expressed views, the casket is extremely plain. No glittering silver or gold, with the exception of the handles, which are of oxidized silver, mars its severe simplicity.

Mourning for the Dead.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The City Hall of Brooklyn and many other public and private buildings throughout the city are draped with mourning to-day in token of respect to the memory of Mr. Beecher.

AN OHIO TRAGEDY.

A Desperate Springfield Lover Commits Murder and Suicide.

The affair occurred in the parlor of the girl's house. Miss Jude was sitting in a chair and Bowser standing beside her. RETALIATION BLUSTER.

A despatch published in the EXAMINER a day or two ago presented a phase of the United States Retaliation Bill which was not suggested during the passage of that measure. It was to the effect that the bill was passed in order to give England an excuse to interfere in the matter. Respecting this the Montreal Herald remarks as follows:—

"The United States Retaliation Bill amounts to nothing at all, but not for the reason above stated. No action will be taken by the United States, but not because Minister Phelps or any other minister has been acting in the interests of Great Britain, as is here alleged. The Retaliation Bill, so called, is not a blow at Canada; the United States Congress or the United States' Government does not know Canada, or any other British colony, officially or diplomatically. When Congress undertakes to exclude Canadian products it really excludes British products. Canada and the United States can engage in no Legislative battle: the tug of war must come between Great Britain and the United States. The President of the United States knows that when he throws down the gage, as the Retaliation Bill provides he may do, it must be to Great Britain, not to the colony, Canada. Hence his difficulty.

The shrewd Senators knew what they were about. They limited the area of foolery as much as possible. They did not wish to have the world laughing at the United States any more than was necessary. The row had been caused by fishery matters; they threw a bone to the New England fish merchants; they made these blustering people happy for the time; and then Congress adjourned and left them to learn the truth gradually. Before many weeks have passed the fish capitalists and skippers of New England will awake to learn that Canada, in this very interesting connection, means the British Empire and that the President of the United States cannot coerce Canada unless he is prepared to coerce Great Britain. The sooner the fish merchants and the skippers reach the same conclusion the sooner will the fishery difficulty be settled.

IN the death of Henry Ward Beecher a great man—according to the American standard of greatness—passes away. Mr. Beecher, while a professed minister of the gospel, was at the the same time a prominent figure in American politics, in which, as for instance in his advocacy of the abolition of slavery, he performed great things. As a politician he was what might be called a success, but as a minister of the Gospel he fell far short of the apostolic standard. Of his greatness as a preacher there are no two opinions, that is, defining preaching as a mere pulpit oratory. By the brilliancy and elocutionary eminence of his pulpit efforts he succeeded in keeping the congregation of Plymouth Church up in full numerical standing, and this in the face of personal scandal that would have wrecked the career of any man with his personal influences. While he achieved this his mutable and hazy religious opinions unsettled or assailed with doubts the orthodoxy of many a true believer. It would seem that the activity of his great intellect was continually evolving new theological opinions, and that he was above the pettiness of considering whether they could be squared with the teachings of Divine Revelation. Rev. Mr. Beecher filled a large place in the world, and thousands among English speaking people will bewail with genuine grief his removal, yet the belief may be excused that for real sound lasting evangelical results, the ministry of many a humble unlettered backwoods preacher will in the day and place, when and where, mere eloquence and ingenuity of theological invention stand a poor chance against unswerving singleness of purpose and earnestness of effort in the discharge of a great trust, will receive the meed of greater acceptability. The wide difference between divine and human standards of merit reconciles millions of patient toilers in the lowly path of duty, to the loss of what, in the eyes of the world, is considered greatness.

Peterboro' Protestant Home.

Annual Meeting—Funds Wanted to Raise the Roof—Number of Inmates at Present, 39—Mrs. Dillon, the Matron, Praised.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Protestant Home Wednesday afternoon there were present:—Mrs. Vernon, President; Mrs. Gilmour and Mrs. Hazlitt, Vice-Presidents; Mrs. Geo. A. Cox, Treasurer; Mrs. J. G. Hall, Secretary; Mrs. B. Ferguson, Mrs. J. B. McWilliams, Mrs. W. J. Green, Mrs. (Rev.) Wallace, Mrs Dunlop and Miss Roger.

The Secretary read her report as follows:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Nothing very remarkable has transpired in the annals of this institution during the past year. The most noteworthy feature is the number of very aged ones now sheltered in the Home; no less than five between the ages of 80 and 90, one 90, four over 70; two almost completely bedridden, one palsied and two partially paralysed. Present number of inmates twenty, including four little girls. There have been no infectious diseases and no deaths, although more than once some of the aged ones have been very near death's portals. Fewer this past year have come and gone for a day or so, partly from want of accommodation, partly through the inadvisability of receiving emigrant servants who have no claim on the Home.

It is considered most desirable that the roof of this building should be raised, thereby increasing the accommodation and giving separate wards to the men and women, in order to do this we would require finances; it would take at least in the neighborhood of $200 or $300. Are there any among our wealthy, those enjoying ample competence, willing to help in this praiseworthy work? Our resources, it is well known, are most uncertain, still, year by year, the Home holds out, sheltering the lonely, helpless and homeless, a quiet, comfortable haven to not a few weary ones.

We are open to contributions of all kinds—money, provisions, vegetables, furniture, bedding, clothing, etc. A few easy chairs, such as rockers, would be much appreciated by the aged. Spring will soon be ushered in and we would thankfully receive flowers or seedlings, anything to make the Home attractive and add to the happiness of those who must soon bid adieu to time.

How shall we sufficiently thank Mr. Gallelly for the beautiful cantata got up in the Opera House last June, for the benefit of the Home, or the young ladies for the admirable way in which they acquitted themselves? It was one of the most charming entertainments ever given in town. Mr. Gallelly, largely endued with the milk of human kindness, is ever at home in the midst of children, and we would say in the expressive words of his own vernacular, "May his bicker aye be fou to skellin." Sincere thanks to those who engage in religious exercises Sabbaths and week days, to those who so thoughtfully and delicately devote a portion of their valuable time singing the "Sweet songs of Zion," which to a inmate a greatly enjoyed sacred music frequently touches a cord, when the preaching of the word and prayer has no effect. Our heartfelt gratitude to the medical practitioners for their great kindness in attending whenever requested gratis, to the gentlemen of the press for their papers and insertions free of charge, to the Mason's, "Scarlet Chapter," Foresters and Orangemen, through J. B. McWilliams, and to all others who have contributed in any way to further the interests of the Home. "Inasmuch as ye did it to one of the least of these ye did it unto me."

The Xmas donations were liberal and displayed a great deal of kind thought, the generous donors no doubt enjoyed their own festal board and homes all the more, in that they fulfilled the Scriptural command "Go your way, eat the fat, drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared, and thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, the stranger, the fatherless and the widow.

Mrs. Dillon, our matron, deserves our warm approval for the neatness and order in which the Home is kept, and the happy gift she has of putting things to the best account.

We would again welcome amongst us Miss Roger, our former able secretary, and desire to thank God for the preservation of the "daughters of the Manse," in their perilous journeyings. Miss Roger's sterling worth is well known in many a home in Peterborough, where in the sacred, dismal hour of mourning she has proved herself invaluable as a sympathising, unselfish, practical friend.

We deeply regret the loss of Mrs. Wallis, one of our lady managers, who ever befriended this establishment by her means and advice, she was always ready to help on the Lord's work, and to do all she could to advance the happiness of others, courteous, pitiful, considerate and unobtrusive, she was one rarely met with, and we desire to extend our heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved ones, her lovely example and gentle life, will serve them in some measure as a beacon light, guiding them on to a better world.

If at times we should meet with ingratitude from those we benefit, our Saviour experienced the same, let this be no barrier to us strewing with kind words and deeds, the burdensome pathway of others. It will be subject of no regret at a dying hour that we mingled the tear of sympathy with the sad, the afflicted and the sorrowful.

Respectfully submitted,
JANE GIFFORD HALL.
Secretary.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Constipation, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symtoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottle, 10 cents. Try it. eodw6

Doubly Benefited.

There is no one remedy known that has more curative power over dyspepsia and liver complaint than Burdock Blood Bitters. SOCIALISTS EXCITED.

Hysterical Scenes Around the Bier of Anarchist Neebe's Dead Wife.

CHICAGO, March 9.—There was a remarkable scene yesterday afternoon at the bier of the wife of anarchist Neebe. While the room was filled with sympathizers of both sexes a blonde little woman bent over the coffin and burst into loud lamentations. With clasped hands and streaming eyes she shrieked: "They murdered her. She was murdered by those hangmen. Grinnell and Gary were her executioners; she in her coffin, her husband in jail—both victims of the capitalistic bloodhounds."

The people present became highly wrought up, and during the remainder of the day in the death-chamber there was no cessation of curses against "those hangmen." The sidewalk in front of Neebe's house was crowded with excited people. A committee had been formed to make arrangements for the funeral and they decided to postpone it if possible, until Sunday, and make it the occasion of a socialistic demonstration.

WHAT NEXT?

Grave-Diggers at New York Threaten to Strike for Higher Pay.

NEW YORK, March 9.—One hundred and fifty grave-diggers in Calvary Cemetery, Long Island, threaten to strike unless their wages are increased. They now are paid at the rate of $1.75 per day, but claim that they only make three-quarters time. The trustees of the cemetery will not deal with the committee of the Grave-diggers Union, which is connected with District Assembly 49, Knights of Labor, and a strike will probably occur to-morrow. Superintendent Moore to-day said he didn't care very much whether the Knights of Labor refused to make any more graves or not. He said there were hundreds of men around just aching to dig graves for other people at $1.75 a day, and he could have a full force on the old stand an hour after the Knights had left.

Speculation Spells a Priest.

MONTREAL, March 9.—Rev. Abbe Archambault, P.S.S., for many years attached to St. James' parish, who has been in the habit of purchasing real estate and getting into financial troubles, has been compelled to leave the city, being unable to meet claims when due. A seizure was put on his library and he goes to Burlington, Vt.

An Ottawa ex-Alderman's Suits.

OTTAWA, March 8.—The suits brought by ex-Ald. Brown against a number of prominent citizens, charged with recording their votes in the recent mayoralty election, came up in the Division Court this morning. Judge Daniel, who presided, dismissed the first four in which the evidence was offered, and the remainder were then withdrawn by Brown. The Judge held that it was not sufficient to prove merely that a voter had twice applied for mayoralty ballots to secure conviction, but it must be proved that he twice marked these ballots and deposited them. Brown had announced a couple of days ago that charitable institutions were to get the net proceeds of these suits, each of which was for $40.

Fire at Woodstock.

WOODSTOCK, March 8.—About 1 o'clock this morning a fire was discovered in the cellar of Tuthill's grocery store, which was fortunately soon subdued, but not without considerable loss to stock and building, and also to Perry's photograph shop, immediately above. All are insured in the Waterloo, Western and Economical.

A Conductor Killed.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., March 8.—This morning Angus McDonald, a conductor on the Michigan Central Railway, while stepping from one car to another slipped and falling upon the track was so badly injured by the car wheels that he died in a short time. He leaves a widow and family.

Cardinal Gibbons' Titular Church.

ROME, March 8.—Cardinal Gibbons shows a marked tendency toward choosing Santa Maria in Trastevere as his titular church. The church is the oldest and most interesting of the Roman basilicas. The Cardinal will take possession probably on March 20.

Peterborough Markets.

Reported by W. H. Wingfield, Grain and Produce Dealer & General Grocer, George St.

MARCH, 9th, 1887.

Rather unexpectedly, the wheat market is again booming. Whether it will continue is very doubtful. Chicago has suddenly jumped up on May wheat about 9c., from lowest to the highest point. The English market higher, affected by Chicago. On this market spring wheat has been selling from 80 to 81c., and in some cases 82½c. was paid, with fall bringing 80 to 81c.; little doing in barley, offerings small, 40 to 55c. being about range of prices; peas, quiet, 50 to 53c.; oats, less offering, selling 29 to 30c.; rye, 46c.

On the market, eggs are down 14 to 15c.; fresh butter, 20 to 22c.; keg butter, dull and lower, 17 to 19c. about the price, and dull at that. Other commodities unchanged.

There has been a decided drop in the price of hides and skins—of from one to one and a half cents per pound. The demand is slow.

Worth Remembering.

Every inspiration of the lungs, every pulse-throb of the heart, every sweep of the arm—even our very thoughts as they speed through the brain, all create waste matter that must be constantly removed if there is to be that beautiful harmony of functional effort which constitutes health. Nature's remedy is the sure and eminently wise one, of expelling, by proper purgation, the humors which cause disease, and Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" are nature's great ally in the cure of digestive disturbances, and an unfailing remedy for constipation and its pernicious effects. 6d-w10

We cannot point to one instance where it did not.

"Where does it have the largest sale?"

Right in the city of Hamilton, where it is manufactured, there has been over one thousand dollars worth sold in the last year retail, and the great majority of the sales are by one recommending it to another. For sale at 50c and $1.00 per bottle by John McKee, Druggist. 6dw10

Worthy of Confidence.

The praptration sold by druggists known as Hagyard's Yellow Oil is worthy of all confidence as a household remedy for pain. It has been over a quarter of a century in the market, and never fails to cure or relieve rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, quinsy, deafness, burns, scalds, bruises, frost bites and internal or external pains and injuries. 2w9d

An Anxious Cop.

A Simcoe constable is a very anxious that a man whom he handcuffed at Lorette the other day and has not seen since should return the handcuffs.

Don't Do It.

Don't rack and ruin your lungs with a tight, harrowing, distressing cough when a few doses of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam will loosen the phlegm, soothe the irritation, and heal the sore throat and bronchial pipes, and may avert that destructive disease, consumption. 2w9d

Important.

It is of the utmost importance that some good household remedy should be kept within handy reach in case of pain and accidental injury. The most useful remedy of this kind is undoubtedly Hagyard's Yellow Oil, for internal and external use in all painful complaints. 2w9d

Neither One.

A cracked bell is not good to call men together, nor is a minister of cracked reputation fit to persuade others to holiness.

Strictly True.

In every respect and attested by the testimony of thousands that Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is a sure and painless cure for corns. The claim that it is just as good made by those endeavoring to palm off imitations for the genuine only proves the superiority of "Putnam's." Use only Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure, Safe, Painless. 6dw10

Numerous.

The most humorous man is not always the happiest; the man who has scrofulous humor or any obstinate humor of the blood, does not feel very lively, at least not until he is cured, which, by the way, Burdock Blood Bitters will do in the most troublesome of blood humors. 2w9d

LOCAL NEWS.

Telephone Patents.

The Bell Telephone Company's officials say that a great deal of unnecessary importance has been attach (through misleading reports sent from Ottawa,) to the last decision of the Minister of Agriculture, voiding the Blake transmitter patent. This was not an original patent for a transmitter, but only for an improvement on its method of construction and is only one of the numerous patents held by the Company on this class of instruments; and the setting aside of this does not by any means allow the public to manufacture or use Blake transmitters, and will make no difference whatever to the Company. The decision was given on evidence put in two years ago, and was anticipated by the Company, which did not contest the case at all. In the case of the Edison patents, after all the evidence for the petitioners had been heard, the Bell Company's counsel moved to have the petition dismissed without the necessity of bringing forward evidence for the defence on the ground of absence of proof. The Minister stated that he would consider this and announce his decision on this point in a few days.

American Canoe Association.

A meeting of the newly-formed Northern division of the A. C. A. will be held Friday evening, 18th inst., at 8 p.m., in the office over the Canadian Express Company's office, George street, (which Mr. Cox has kindly placed at the disposal of the committee), for the purpose of electing officers for the year and making necessary arrangements for the Stony Lake camp, which is exciting no great an interest in Canadian towns that there will probably be a larger turn-out than in 1883, while a number of Americans have also decided to attend. An earnest invitation to this meeting Friday night is extended not only to all present members of the A. C. A., but to all who were members in 1883, and those new ones who may wish to join the Association. To those who enroll themselves at or before this meeting, it is proposed to grant the privilege of having a voice in the election of officers. Special privileges have been granted this Division by the General Executive Committee on the right to re-enroll former members without payment of initiation fee or back dues, and in the matter of the Divisional Purser receiving fees. Let there be a large and enthusiastic attendance at Friday night's meeting.

Almost a Disaster.

Tuesday afternoon a party of four persons, an old lady and gentleman and two younger people, were driving from Lakefield, and when approaching the railway crossing their horses became frightened at an approaching train and dashed ahead with uncontrollable speed. At the crossing the sleigh "struck a snag" and was upset, pitching the occupants out. The old lady received severe injuries, the young man was landed on the railroad within a few inches of the rails, while the young lady was rolled down the embankment and nearly into the river. Fortunately the engine driver noticed the accident and stopped his train within a short distance of the young man, who was lying helpless for the moment. The old man was not much hurt. It was a close call for all parties.

Peterborough Canoe Club.

A week or more ago a number of young men met together for the purpose of forming a Canoe Club, and the following officers were elected: Commodore, John Millar; Vice-Commodore, Harry Stock; Treasurer, Gordon J. Smith; Secretary, Albert Dixon; Assistant-Secretary, A. Scott; Managing Committee, Messrs. A. H. Turner, A. E. Thompson, Wm. Dayman and Wm. Hill. Wednesday evening the executive committee met for the purpose of drafting a constitution, by-laws, etc. The Peterborough Canoe Club starts under favorable auspices, having a membership already of between 80 and 100.

Opera House.

Last night's house was a decided increase, and the performance gave unqualified satisfaction, many of the acts being recalled. To-night there is another change of programme in the production of "Ishmael, the Zingara," in which Miss Laura Booth is said to be exceptionally fine, according to our exchanges. There will be a matinee on Saturday, at 10 and 20 cents. The cow interest is beginning to loom up brightly, as the animal, which is really a fine specimen, paraded the streets to-day. That and the sewing machine, chances for which are given each evening, will be drawn for as announced. The genial comedian is tendered a benefit Friday.

Miss Mahoney has just returned after a two weeks absence in the wholesale millinery markets where she has been putting up all the latest styles and novelties. Ladies will find every thing new in millinery at Turnbull's.

Something Unusual.

In these days people expect bargains and feel justified in obtaining all they can for the money. Mr. John Erskine has decided to let the whole of his present stock of Staple and Fancy Dry Goods go at Wholesale cost price. This is something unusual in bargains, and should be availed of by everyone. Terms strictly cash. Read his advertisement for minute.

Smashed Under a Falling Shed.

Wednesday afternoon a shed behind Mr. M. Halpin's toppled from the weight of ice and snow and, carrying in the debris three horses. One of them, a valuable filer belonging to Mr. William Meher, sustained serious injuries, but under the care of Dr. Sculthorpe will likely recover. Of the other horses, a mare belonging to a farmer, one was so badly injured that it could not be removed from the wreck and remains in Mr. Halpin's stables. Mr. Meher's cutter was also demolished by the falling wreck.

A Comfortable Retreat.

A visitor to the Peterborough Protestant Home yesterday afternoon was struck with the prevailing air of comfort and scrupulous cleanliness everywhere observable. There are at present some 20 inmates, and they are to all appearances really "old folks at home." Mrs. Dillon keeps the Home in first class order. A report of the annual meeting appears elsewhere.

Illustrated Lecture.

Mr. D. W. Campbell will give a lecture on the great and beautiful sights of London, illustrated by 100 large dissolving views, in the school room of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, on Thursday evening, March 10th, at 7:30 o'clock. The lecture is instructive and interesting, and is highly recommended by the clergy and press. Admission, 25c.; children 10c.

Threatened His Father.

James Whitehair is not his father's white-haired boy. At the police court this morning it was shown that he was guilty of cruel and unfilial conduct towards his blind and aged parent a week ago to-day. He was bound over in $500 to keep the peace for a year.

Handsome mantle cloths in silk and velvet brocades with new trimmings to match at Turnbull's.

A Literary Treat.

On Monday evening, 14th inst., Mr. Barton Earle will give a talk on Tennyson's "Princess," in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. At the close of the talk a class will be formed to take up the study of English Literature. Both talk and class will be open to ladies as well as to gentlemen. There will be no charge for either.

Social.

A social under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Church will be held at the residence of Mr. Bruce Ferguson, Stewart street, on Friday evening, March 11th, at half-past seven. Refreshments will be served during the evening and a good musical programme provided. Admission 25 cents. 4d

A Nice Little Surplus.

Mr. Joe Daly, Treasurer of the Peterborough Driving Club, reports a net balance on hand, after all expenses in connection with last week's races have been paid, of $50. This will furnish the nucleus of the fund for ice races next winter.

A Chance for Agents.

By reference to our advertising column it will be seen that agents are wanted in this district for the United States Life Insurance Company. A good chance for persons desiring an opening in this kind of business.

A special meeting of the Town Council will be held to-morrow (Friday) at 3 o'clock p.m., when the civic appointments for the year will likely be made.

Oddfellow's Opening Operations.

Encouraging Reports from Grand Secretary Champion—A Well Attended and Pleasant Meeting.

A special meeting of Joint Committees of the Oddfellow's Lodge and Encampment was held Wednesday evening in Mr. E. E. Henderson's office for the purpose of organizing for the Jubilee observances at the Grand Lodge in Peterborough, on the second Tuesday in August. On motion of D. D. G. M. Henderson, Mayor Stevenson was unanimously elected chairman. Mr. A. McNeil was appointed Secretary of the Committee, and Dr. R. W. Bell Treasurer. A committee to draft the sub-committees was appointed, composed of Bros. A. McFarlane, Dr. Bell, S. Clegg, D. H. Moore and E. E. Henderson, who submitted the following:—

Railway Committee.—James Stevenson, M. P., (chairman), J. R. Stratton, M. P. P., A. McNeil, J. J. Hartley, and D. H. Moore.

Reception and Hotel Billet Committee.—E. E. Henderson (chairman), S. Clegg and A. McFarlane.

Entertainment Committee.—A. McNeil (chairman), S. Clegg, D. H. Moore, H. W. Watson, James Hendry, J. Nugent, W. F. Green, J. D. Craig, A. McFarlane, T. Workman.

Finance Committee.—W. Clexton (chairman), Jos. Mills, R. W. Errett, S. Clegg and D. H. Moore.

Printing Committee.—E. E. Henderson (chairman), J. C. T. Lacy and J. J. Hartley.

Hall Committee.—Dr. Bell (chairman), —. Kidd, D. H. Moore, J. E. Stratton, M. P. P., S. Clegg and A. McFarlane.

Committee on Cantons Militants.—J. C. T. Lacy (chairman), T. Workman, R. Munro, J. D. Tully, A. McFarlane, D. H. Moore, Dr. Bell, S. Clegg, E. J. Lee, and H. Long.

There will be between three and four hundred delegates to be provided for apart altogether from the military branch of the order, which will number, it is expected, six companies, 42 strong each. It will be necessary to provide this latter body with a large building which will be converted into a temporary barracks, or a marquee, in one of the parks. The committee confidently expect thousands of visitors from the attractive programme they have prepared, one of the chief features of which will be the grand military display by the Cantons Militants. The public will be fully advised through the press of the progress of preparations.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Sixth Parliament—First Session.

Toronto, March 9.

The House sat from 3.15 till 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was a full House. Twenty-six private bills were introduced and read a first time. Among these was one introduced by Mr. Stratton, to declare and define the boundary between the town of Peterborough and the township of Smith.

Mr. Wood (Hastings) moved for an order of the House for a return of the number of standard logs cut by local mill owners by authority of the Crown Lands Department from the timber of limit holders during the year 1886.

Mr. Wood championed the cause of the mill owners, whom he alleged were unfairly treated.

The Commissioner of Crown Lands explained that the department compelled lessees of limits to allow mill owners to cut all timber required for local use but none for export.

LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA.

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

Dear Sir,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,130.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLachlan.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance with six per cent. per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

VIEWING THE BODY.

THE REMAINS OF HENRY WARD BEECHER LYING IN STATE.

NEW YORK, March 10.—In spite of the rain the streets in the vicinity of Beecher's house were crowded with people this morning. A large number of floral emblems were received before the private services commenced. Two wreaths of white roses, lilies of the valley and smilax were received which bore the cards of Ellen Terry and Henry Irving. The coffin rested in the centre of the parlor, and was surrounded with a bank of flowers. The remains were dressed in a suit of black broadcloth, with frock coat buttoned up and the right hand laid across the breast. The features were natural and there was a smile upon the face. Early in the morning, and before the services, Mrs. Beecher stood by the coffin for some time. She bent over the remains and, after imprinting a kiss upon the cold lips, was led back into the room. At 9.30 Rev. C. H. Hall commenced to read the burial service from the ritual of the Episcopal Church and a quintet sang. "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Beyond the Sighing and the Weeping," and "Come, Holy Spirit." While the services were in progress in the house, Company "G," known as Plymouth Company, of the Thirteenth Regiment, was drawn up in front of the house. Only the members of the family and a few intimate friends were present during the services at the house.

None of the family of the deceased Brooklyn divine were dressed in black. Mrs. Beecher bore up wonderfully during the ceremony, and was quite calm. Just before the remains were carried out of the house the rain ceased and the clouds passed away. At the conclusion of the services Dr. Hall spoke for fifteen minutes, and was very much affected. The casket was then taken to Plymouth church, escorted by the 13th Regiment, which filed into the church and viewed the face of the dead. The public were then admitted. The decorations were very elaborate, consisting of flowers, ferns, evergreens and palms. No mourning emblems were to be seen.

Thousands View the Remains.

NEW YORK, March 10.—All the afternoon the long line of people passing through the church to view the remains continued to increase, and the rush was so great to gain admittance that the police could not keep the line. It was therefore found necessary to increase the force of officers around the church doors. It was with the utmost difficulty that the regular worshippers could get inside the edifice. The throng comprised persons of all classes. As the day advanced the line of people extended until it reached Fulton-street, then down one side of the next block and up the other, with another wing across Henry-street. It was estimated that nearly 20,000 people passed before the catafalque during the day. All this time there was music on the grand organ. There were so many wreaths and bouquets left on the bier that a special place had to be made near the platform at the foot of the pulpit to receive them. When the church is closed to-night it will not be opened until 9.30 o'clock to-morrow morning. At the close of to-morrow's services, at which Dr. Hall will officiate, the remains will be viewed until 4.30 o'clock, when the public service will be ended, the burial being a private one on Saturday morning. Overflow services will be held to-morrow morning at the First Baptist Church, the Church of Our Saviour and the First Presbyterian Church.

The Dead Man's Will.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The will of Mr. Beecher was read this afternoon. It is probable it will be filed for probate soon. It authorizes the members of the family to settle among themselves the division of what there is left.

To-night the Beecher residence was brilliantly lighted and everything about the house was made as bright as possible. The members of the family wore no emblem of mourning, in accordance with the often-expressed wish of Mr. Beecher.

ACCUSED OF HERESY.

A Canadian Student at Yale Complained Against a Professor.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 10.—Rev. Alexander N. Duncan, a graduate of McGill University, of Montreal, who is taking a course of study at the Yale Theological Seminary, has made a formal complaint against Prof. John E. Russell Winkley, Professor of Biblical Theology, alleging that his teachings are heretical, in that he denies the divinity of Christ. The Yale professors generally discredit the allegations and intimate that Mr. Duncan seeks notoriety. Mr. Duncan, who is 26 years old, formerly had charge of a church in Canada and entered the senior theological class last fall.

He was found there by detectives and returned voluntarily.

GEN. BULLER SPEAKS.

A BRITISH GENERAL'S OPINION OF AFFAIRS IN IRELAND.

LONDON, March 10.—A sensation has been caused by the publication of Gen. Sir Redvers Buller's evidence before the Land Commission. It appears that Gen. Buller testified that what law there was in the Counties of Kerry, Clare and Cork was on the side of the rich and he expressed the opinion that it would be a serious matter, until their grievances were redressed, to attempt to suppress by force the tenants' right to openly associate for the protection of their interests. A majority of the tenants, he said, struggle to pay their rents and where they could did pay; but in a great many cases the rents were too high. He said there would never be peace in Ireland until there had been established a court having strong coercive powers over bad landlords and protective powers over poor tenants.

The Pall Mall Gazette declares that the facts attested by Gen. Buller came like a flash of vivid lightning, revealing the naked horrors of organized injustice in Ireland. It says: "No crime which the moonlighters or dynamiters can commit will be comparable to the criminality of giving another day's grace to the foul fabric of legalized wrong erected on Irish soil—a fabric which the Tories now seek to buttress by further misdeeds."

Plan of Campaign Dangerous.

LONDON, March 10.—Earl Spencer, speaking at Cambridge last night, said he regretted that the plan of campaign had been adopted. It was a dangerous movement, but he thought it only fair to say that the Government was in a great measure responsible for the adoption of the plan, because it had refused to consider Parnell's bill. He denied that the Irish leaders in Parliament had ever sanctioned the commission of crimes, and the Government would never secure law and order by repressive measures.

The Case of Terry, the Draughtsman.

LONDON, March 10.—Lord George Hamilton, First Lord of the Admiralty, replying in the Commons this evening with reference to the dismissal of Draughtsman Terry for selling naval secrets, said that in the interest of the public it was not desirable to reveal the name of the person who obtained the information, or the object for which it was bought. He was unable to state whether Terry could be indicted for perjury.

THE AMERICAN EXHIBITION.

The Promoters Ask the Prince of Wales to Preside Over the Speculation.

LONDON, March 10.—The Duke of Westminster and the Duke of Argyle have withdrawn from the honorary council of the American Exhibition owing to the manner in which their names are mentioned in a petition to the Prince of Wales to accept the presidency of the council of the exhibition and also, they state, because they have learned that the exhibition is purely a private speculation. The petition to the Prince, which the managers are handing around for signatures, assures the Prince that the Americans hold him in high esteem, and humbly begs that he will be graciously pleased to accept the honorary presidency of the council of the exhibition, which will be a living proof that Americans desired to aid in the celebration of the Queen's jubilee. That the Prince will decline the office is a foregone conclusion.

THE B. & O. DEAL.

The Details of the Transfer are Not Known, but it Has Taken Place.

BALTIMORE, March 10.—Robert Garrett this afternoon virtually admitted to a prominent Baltimorean, that there was considerable truth in the newspaper talk of a big railroad deal. He would give no definite idea of the particulars of the scheme, but from his remarks the inference was drawn that the Baltimore and Ohio Railway has become a factor in a syndicate that is to control something like a national railroad reaching from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and probably from New York to the extreme west. It is generally believed that the biggest railroad deal on record has been or is about to be made and that the passage of the Interstate Commerce Bill hurried the affair to a settlement.

Another Statement.

NEW YORK, March 10.—The Tribune says: "The negotiations for the transfer of the control of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway to a New York syndicate have not yet been carried to a successful issue. It is reputed that the option obtained from President Garrett by Alfred Sully expired yesterday and that Mr. Sully was unable to raise money to meet the first payment of $1,000,000.

BANQUET TO MR. BEAUGRAND.

The Citizens of Montreal Honor the Retiring Mayor.

MONTREAL, March 10.—Mayor Beaugrand was tendered a banquet in the Windsor Hotel this evening by the citizens, on the occasion of his retirement from the civic chair. About 500 sat down and Mayor-elect Abbott presided. The feature of the evening was the presentation by the 65th Battalion and the Montreal Garrison Artillery to the ex-mayor of a handsome French ormulu chiming clock, inlaid with California marble and bronze and gold, and of a handsome tea service to Madame Beaugrand by the citizens of Montreal.

The Political Crisis in Italy.

ROME, March 10.—Premier Depretis stated in the Chamber of Deputies to-day that King Humbert, on account of the difficulties attending all attempts to form a new ministry in the present conjuncture of affairs, had refused to accept the resignations tendered by the present ministers. The ministers, Signor Depretis added, would, therefore, remain in their respective offices for the present and the Government would expect a formal vote by the Chamber approving their course.

DEATH OF JAMES B. EADS.

The Great Engineer Dies of Pneumonia at Nassau.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Capt. James B. Eads died at Nassau, New Providence, on March 8 of pneumonia.

[James Buchanan Eads was born in Lawrenceburg, Ind., May 23, 1820. After leaving school he was clerk in a dry goods store and subsequently clerk on a Mississippi steamer, in which position he studied engineering and its cognate sciences. He was fertile in invention, and in 1842 he invented a diving-bell for recovering sunken cargoes. During the war, at the suggestion of Lincoln, he designed and constructed a fleet of ironclads for river service, and in 1862 he designed and constructed six turreted iron vessels, and was the first to apply steam in the manipulation of heavy artillery. His greatest works are the steel arched bridge over the Mississippi River at St. Louis and the jetties at the outlet of the Mississippi River, which will stand as lasting monuments of his engineering skill. It would be difficult to enumerate the many projects in which Mr. Eads had part, and his advice was always valued regarding great mechanical works. His later years he spent in planning a ship railway across the Isthmus of Panama, and pressing the matter on the attention of Congress.]

FRIDAY, MARCH 11, 1887.

THE CITIZENS' PART.

In Thursday's issue of the EXAMINER appeared a report of the meeting of the Oddfellows connected with the fraternity in town, held for the purpose of arranging for the holding of the annual session of the Grand Lodge of the Order in town the coming August. It will be seen by the composition of the several committees, that these responsible functions are in good hands, and, that satisfactory arrangements will doubtless be perfected. While Oddfellows, as Oddfellows, are expected to take an active and leading part in such arrangements as may be necessary, there is something, for the citizens generally, to do. The occasion will be an important one. It is estimated, that for a week, between three and four hundred delegates will be domiciled in the town, and, adding to these, the usual entourage of sympathisers and friends, and also about 250 members of the Canton Militants, (a uniformed branch of the order, corresponding to the Knights of Pythias of the Masonic Order), there will be a temporary addition during a week, of between six and eight hundred persons to the population of Peterborough. In addition there will be, the influx from day to day of strangers to witness the grand spectacles of the competitive drill of the several uniformed corps. The presence of so large a body of strangers involves a strong demand upon the hospitality of the citizens of Peterborough, whether or not they be Oddfellows. The brethren of the order who were concerned in securing Peterborough as the meeting-place of the Grand Lodge, while they were animated by a fraternal spirit, also acted as citizens and were anxious to bring Peterborough, its situation, importance and resources, more prominently before the people of Ontario. And the coming grand session will do this effectively. Every city, town, village and hamlet, from Sarnia to Montreal, inclusive, will be represented by influential delegates, who will, after their sojourn among us, carry back to their respective abodes favorable reports of the town. And the more hospitably they are treated, the more glowing will be their reports. Thus it is seen that every citizen is interested in maintaining the credit of the town. Knowing the public spirit of the citizens, we feel sure that we need not call in vain upon them to strengthen the hands of the several committees of the Oddfellows. The local brethren will be put to large expense, and since, apart from the enjoyment of fraternal privileges, the people of the town at large will enjoy as much of the benefits of the holding of the grand session here, the duty of the latter to extend every possible substantial, as well as moral encouragement, to the brethren of the Oddfellow order, is one that cannot be honorably evaded.

PREACHING AND PRACTICE.

The Montreal Star admits the charge that the Civil Service Departments, at Ottawa, are "overmanned," and admits that this involves a great addition to the necessary expenditure for efficently carrying on the public business. And then naively asks and answers the question:—

"How are things going to be improved? Well, bell the cat, in other words, infuse into the community a moral repugnance to the idea of public offices being used to purchase political support. Infuse into Governments a repugnance to purchasing support, and an indifference to office, except in so far as it enables them to work for the public good by open and honorable methods."

In suggesting the remedy the Star places itself in the position of the typical physician, who declines to show confidence in his medicines by taking them. What part has it, as a typical Tory journal, taken in infusing into the Dominion "Governent a repugnance to purchasing support?" It has aided and abetted all its schemes and has done its journalistic best to secure a renewal of power for a notoriously corrupt administration, which has made an iniquitous speciality of "purchasing support." It is morally certain that we can expect, from the Star and its political ilk, no assistance in reforming an abuse which it so frankly admits.

On Wednesday a deputation representing forty jailers waited upon the Government to demand a vacation once a year. One of the deputation urged that he had been continuously confined for thirteen years without a single holiday. The demand is one that should receive consideration. Hamilton Helpers.

The Hamilton Helpers have been secured by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to carry on a series of Gospel Temperance meetings for one week beginning March the 17th. After which the White Bros. will continue the meetings for another week. They will be held in the different Churches and a collection will be taken up each evening to meet the actual expenses. We might here add a few clippings from the Bowmanville papers regarding the "Hamilton Helpers," as they are not so widely known here as the White Bro's., whose untiring zeal as Gospel Temperance workers, has won for them a place in the sacred memory of all true Christians. From the Bowmanville Sun:—

Gospel Temperance Meeting. The advent of the band of Temperance Revivalists popularly known as the "Hamilton Helpers," into Bowmanville has been the means of arousing fresh enthusiasm in the temperance ranks. For the past week they have been working under the auspices of the Royal Templars and Sons of Temperance and have held large and enthusiastic meetings in the town hall, which have undoubtedly been of great benefit to all present, while the melodious and inspirited singing of Messrs. Stead and Dunnett, as the great centre of attraction, fully proving them to be admirable vocalists, not merely lip singers but heart singers also. Meetings during the week have been largely attended and the earnest addresses and rousing songs of the "Helpers." have done much to awaken fresh interest in the temperance cause in our midst."—Con.

Compellable Witnesses.

An Important Decision Regarding a Much Strained Point of Law.

Saturday afternoon an important decision was given by the Chancery Divisional court in Toronto, under the Canada Temperance Act, in the case of the Queen v. Fee. Mr. Justice Ferguson had quashed the conviction without hearing the Crown, owing to a mistake as to the day for which the motion was set down. Counsel for the Crown afterwards appeared and desired to show cause, but the learned judge referred the matter to the full court. Objection was made to the court hearing the case owing to the well-known rule obtaining in civil cases since the Judicature Act, that the decision of a single judge sitting for the court cannot be reviewed by the Divisional Court. But the court held that this did not apply to criminal cases like this one, and that the practice of such decisions being re-heard, which was in vogue before the Judicature Act, should be still continued, more especially as in appeals from orders quashing convictions there is no appeal to the Court of Appeal. (See the decision of the latter court in the Queen v. Eli.) The Divisional Court accordingly decided to entertain the motion and proceeded to discuss the merits. Mr. Justice Ferguson had in quashing the conviction merely followed the order of Judge Galt in the Queen v. Halpin, 12 Ont. Reports, 320, and by that of course the full court was not found, even if Mr. Justice Ferguson was. The point decided in that case is one of great importance, and shortly stated is, that under sec. 123 of the Canada Temperance Act, by which the accused is made a competent and compellable witness he is not bound.

TO CRIMINATE HIMSELF.

The identical point was decided in the same way by the Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island in the Queen v. Connolly, 4 Canadian Law Times, 301, but the Chancery Division has now reached an opposite conclusion, as it holds that the defendant in a Scott Act prosecution is bound to answer, even though by so doing he criminates himself. This will, of course, be a great aid to persons engaged in working out the Scott Act, as it will render convictions much easier. From this decision there is no appeal, so that the law may be taken as settled, unless some adventurous person manages to bring the matter up on habeas corpus before the Court of Appeal. The Chancellor, who delivered the judgment of the Court, dealt very exhaustively with the subject, justifying the decision upon English authority. He pointed out that it was one of Bentham's theories of law, that the accused should be compelled to testify against himself, and quoted a remark of his upon the maxim, nemo tenetur seipsum accusare, to the effect that if a number of burglars and highwaymen formed an association for the purpose of furthering the interests of their profession, nemo tenetur, &c., would naturally be the first rule or by-law they would pass.

Fraserville.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The following is the report of S. S. 9 and 4, known as Fraserville school, for the month of February:

Fifth Class.—Written examinations in geography, history and arithmetic.

Martha A. Widdis obtained 82 per cent. in geography, 95 per cent. in history, and 40 per cent. in arithmetic. Grace Emerson obtained 60 per cent. in geography, 93 per cent. in history, and 60 per cent. in arithmetic. James Laing, 88 per cent. in geography, 26 per cent. in history, and did not write on the arithmetic examination. The work in the fifth class was satisfactory during the past month.

Senior 3rd and 4th Classes.—First five being mentioned—Bessie Goodfellow, Maude Laing, Martha Atchison, James Steers and Jennie Bothwell. Owing to the number in this class the competition is strong, and at times encouraging.

Junior 3rd Class.—First four mentioned—William Halloran, Annie Cunningham, David Cunningham, Wm. Cunningham.

2nd Class.—First five mentioned—Albert Atchison, Benj. McCannon, Richard Emerson, Wm. O'Hara and Frederick Goodfellow.

Part Second.—John Thompson, Ida Patterson, Alex. Cunningham, Jas. Morton and Annie Patterson.

Omemee.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Many of our farmers came near getting lost in last Saturday's storm returning from the Peterborough market.

Our doctors are kept quite busy treating scarlet fever, which is, however, of only a mild form, very few cases proving fatal.

The Tories of Omemee and Emily can't understand John A.'s big majority being so much reduced, after the exertion and practices they resorted to in the recent elections to sustain him.

Our new teacher, Mr. Orr, recently of the Collegiate Institute, Ottawa, bids fair to give satisfaction, filling the next position to the principal.

Worth Remembering.

Every inspiration of the lungs, every pulse-throb of the heart, every sweep of the arm—even our very thoughts as they speed through the brain, all create waste matter that must be constantly removed if there is to be that beautiful harmony of functional effort which constitutes health. Nature's remedy is the sure and eminently wise one, of expelling, by proper purgation, the humors which cause disease, and Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" are nature's great ally in the cure of digestive disturbances, and an unfailing remedy for constipation and its pernicious effects. 6d-w10

Don't Be S.

Don't rack and ruin with lungs with a cough, harrowing disease through a cold or few doses of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam will break the cough. Further the irritation and heal the sore throat and bronchial passages and may avert that destructive disease, consumption 2w9d

Important.

It is of the utmost importance that some good household remedy should be kept within handy reach in case of pain and accidental injury. The most useful remedy of this kind is undoubtedly Hagyard's Yellow Oil, for internal and external use in all painful complaints 2w9d

Strictly True.

In every respect and attested by the testimony of thousands that Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is a sure and painless cure for corns. The claim that it is Putnam good made by those endeavoring to palm off inferior for the genuine only proves the superiority of "Putnam's." Use only Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure, Safe. Painless. 6dw10

Humorous.

The most humorous man is not always the happiest; the man who has scrofulous humor or any obstinate humor of the blood, does not feel very lively, at least not until he is cured, which, by the way, Burdock Blood Bitters will do in the most troublesome of blood humors. 2w9d

ST JACOBS OIL
THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY WILL SURELY CONQUER PAIN!

In the Old World and New.

Breaks and Bruises Healed.

Shattered, Tortured and Cured.

Mr. James White, 152 Broadway, New York, writes: "My horse ran away and broke my shoulder, arm and elbow, splitting the socket in four parts. It was set and healed, but rheumatism set in, and for eighteen months I suffered tortures. I commenced using St. Jacobs Oil, and in a short time my arm was cured.

Crushed Under a Building—Cured.

511 Seventh St., Louisville, Ky., U. S. A.

While helping to remove a frame building of the City Railway Co., it fell over on me, pressing me to the ground and spraining my back. I was carried home on a stretcher, and the doctors attended me two weeks, when my wife persuaded me to use St. Jacobs Oil, and the pain was soon gone entirely. JASPER BROWER.

Burned Hand—Cured.

Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

Your St. Jacobs Oil is certainly a very efficacious preparation, as it has cured me of a severe burn of the hand, after other remedies had failed to relieve me, and it has been used by other members of my family with very good effects.

THOMAS MURRAY, Ex-Alderman.

Injured for 14 Years—Cured.

Mr. C. T. Peirce, Sidney, N. S. W., fourteen years ago was thrown from a horse, and so injured his hip that he was unable to go about without the aid of a walking stick. Recently, he used St. Jacobs Oil. The result was marvelous. After applying half a bottle he found that he could walk with ease, and, by continuing the remedy, he is now free from pain and well.

ST. JACOBS OIL is an absolute cure for all bodily pains for which an external remedy may be applied. It never fails. It acts like magic, and a trial of it has convinced the most incredulous. It is sold by Chemists and Dealers in Medicine, throughout the Dominion of Canada. Price fifty cents per bottle. The Charles A. Vogeler Co., Baltimore, Md., U. S. A. LOCAL NEWS.

The Modern Babylon.

The school room of St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, was well filled last evening. Mr. D. W. Campbell gave an exhibition of scenes in and around London, and the audience were well repaid for their money and trouble. He opened with a short description of the immensity of "The Modern Babylon," and went on to show Buckingham Palace, Whitehall, the Horse Guards, Hampton Court Palace, and the famous Windsor Castle. Three splendid exterior views of Windsor were given, and many interior views, including the Grand Drawing Room, some of the state apartments, and St. George's Chapel, both within and without. The interior of this chapel was simply superb, showing the banners and stalls of the Knights of the Garter. Then followed beautiful and life-like views of Westminster Abbey, showing amongst other things the celebrated chapel of Henry VIII, the banners and stalls of the Knights of the Bath, the shrine of Edward, the Confessor, the tombs of Queens Mary and Elizabeth of England, and Mary, Queen of Scots, the Poet's Corner, and the coronation chair. A series of views of some of the principal streets were next given, showing the great monuments, Nelson's monument on Trafalgar Square, London Bridge of three hundred years ago and of to-day, the Royal Exchange and Mansion House. Among the famous buildings shown were the Bank of England, which covers over three acres of ground and employs a staff of about 1,100 clerks, etc.; the general post office, an enormous building which employs altogether about 30,000 men, the British Museum, and the Smithfield Market. St. Paul's and the Tower were also splendidly illustrated and described by the lecturer. The Bloody Tower, the Horse Armoury, the Modern Armoury, and the spot on which many of England's greatest sons had lost their lives were fully described by Mr. Campbell. The church and pulpit in which John Wesley first preached, the tomb of Wesley and of his mother, and the tomb of John Bunyan, were also given. Portraits of Mr. Gladstone, Lord Salisbury, Lord Wolseley, Mr. Parnell, the Prince and Princess of Wales and Her Majesty the Queen, brought the exhibition to a close.

Commended by Peterborough Business Men.

We, the undersigned desire to express our appreciation of the work done by Mr Bannell Sawyer and staff in Peterborough Business College and to counsel young people everywhere to come and learn from them how to transact business, keep accounts, write a good hand, and obtain a good sound business education generally.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At the regular meeting of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, of Peterborough, held on the 6th day of March, 1887, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted :—

Whereas, it hath pleased the Almighty in His infinite wisdom to remove from amongst us, Dr. John O'Sullivan, an honorary member and a generous benefactor of our society;

Be it therefore resolved, that while bowing in reverential submission to the Divine Decree, we deeply deplore the loss which society in general and the suffering poor in Peterborough, in particular, sustain through the death of their devoted friend and physician;

And resolved that in this the hour of their supreme affliction, we hereby tender to his sorrowing widow and child our most sincere and heartfelt sympathy;

Resolved, also, that copies of this resolution be forwarded to Mrs. O'Sullivan, the local papers and the London Catholic Record.

Signed on behalf of the Society.

In Sackcloth and Ashes.

Peterborough, Oh, My Peterborough, How Art Thou Fallen!—Thy Laurels Have Departed Forever.

Cleaned out—scooped—twice defeated in 24 hours! And the medal lost! There it is in a few words. Peterborough curlers went to Ottawa Wednesday noon and returned Thursday night. They went for the express purpose of crushing Lindsay—but they didn't do it; vice versa Thursday forenoon and afternoon the rival clubs contested for the Governor-General's medal, which was won by Lindsay. After the match both clubs dined with the Governor-General. The contest took place on the Governor-General's rink, two rinks playing in the forenoon and two in the afternoon. Mr. T. Rutherford's rink tussled with the so-called "invincible Flavelle rink" in the forenoon, and up to within the last four ends had a good lead. Reckless playing and over-anxiety did the rest, with the result of a majority of 2 for Lindsay. In the afternoon Ferguson and McMurtry skipped for Peterborough and Lindsay. This was a walk-over for the latter. Score :—

Opera House.

Last evening an increased attendance testified to the popularity of Harry Lindley's excellent company, and the bill of fare was admirably presented. In Cynthia Trip, Laura Booth shone more brilliantly than in anything else she has pourtrayed; enthusiastic applause greeted her exertions. The rest of the cast ably filled the requirements. To-night some of the prominent citizens tender Harry Lindley a complimentary benefit, when he offers a recherche bill commencing with the five act play "The Galley Slave," than which there is not a more fascinating story in the dramatic catalogue. Miss Booth as Francesca Remein has one of those interesting but intense characters to which she imparts such force. Mr. Walters, also sings, and Lindley appears in force. This is the last night but one of the Company, as they open in London next Monday. There is a matinee on Saturday afternoon and on Saturday night the cow, which has figured so prominently, will find a new owner. We are requested to say that the number must be represented in the audience or another number will be drawn.

Honeymoon Hospitality.

Thursday evening the members of the Fire Brigade band, at the invitation of Mr. Joseph Crowe, Ashburnham, a fellow-bandsman who lately joined the ranks of the benedicts, serenaded Mr. and Mrs. Crowe at their residence, and afterwards, with the friends of the newly-married couple, entered upon a hearty jollification and house-warming. Mrs. Crowe spread an excellent repast for her visitors, who enjoyed themselves thoroughly, and departed with the unanimous expression that in his wife Mr. Crowe had found a jewel for whom he was a worthy setting.

The Scott Act in Port Hope.

They are rushing the Scott Act in Port Hope. W. H. Little and Wm. Kirk, of Garden Hill; Hugh Kent, of Baileboro'; Walter Stenson, of Centerville, and George Owens of Port Hope were charged before the Port's police magistrate yesterday with violating the temperance act. Little, Kent and Stenson pleaded guilty and were each fined $50 and costs: Kirk was discharged; Owens was fined $100 and costs for a second offence.

Easing the Hog's-back.

The excavations for the miniature Trent Valley Canal on Hunter street having been partially filled in, a hog's-back of bare boulders and mud has been left half-way across George street, and in order to make sleighing possible at that point, several loads of snow were drawn and spread over the stony desert yesterday.

Death-rate Among Doctors.

Dr. Bristol, of Napanee, was stricken down by apoplexy Monday and died next day. This is the fourth sudden death from apoplexy in this district within a few weeks, in which physicians have been the victims. The first was Dr. Abbot, of Belleville, then Dr. O'Sullivan, of Peterborough, Dr. Agnew, of Kingston, and now Dr. Bristol.

An Important Matter.

Remember the public meeting in the Council Chamber this evening for the purpose of discussing the fire insurance question. Let there be a good attendance of citizens, as the importance of the subject demands.

Band of Hope.

The Band of Hope will meet to-night at 7 o'clock over the China Hall.

Personal.

Prof. Sawyer has returned from Port Hope where he has been examining the students of the Port Hope Business College. Arrangements are being made for the granting of Diplomas. It is thought that upwards of 50 students will receive graduation honors at Easter.

Dr. J. A. Fife represents Peterborough at the meeting of Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance for the total suppression of the Liquor Traffic, now in session at Toronto.

This week Mr. T. J. Anderson, of Lindsay, says the Post, goes to Peterborough, where he has taken a position in the dry goods house of Mr. James Alexander. He will worthily add another to the successful young men of Lindsay who are working themselves to the front in places throughout the province.

Mr. D. B. McPaul, violinist, Prof. J. S. Parker, organist, and Mr. Thos. Dunn, baritone, of Peterborough, will assist at a grand popular concert in Lindsay, March 30th, under the supervision of Mr. McDuff.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Sixth Parliament—First Session.

TORONTO, March 10.

After private bills, Mr. Lee introduced a resolution favoring the abolition of tolls on roads held by Joint Stock Companies. He urged the Government to take action in the matter.

Hon. Mr. FRASER held it was a matter for municipal regulation. The debate after an animated discussion was adjourned.

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS.

Mr. CREIGTON renewed his attack upon the Government, in connection with the new Provincial buildings, by moving for additional papers.

Hon. C. F. FRASER pointed out that much of the information asked for was already in possession of the House, that some of Mr. Waite's reports to the Government were confidential, that his report on the plans of 1880 could not in justice to the architects, whose plans had been rejected, be brought down without their permission, that there was much verbal communication with Mr. Waite, but that all information which it was proper to divulge or important for the House to know, would be furnished.

This did not satisfy Mr. Meredith, and of course, Mr. Creighton could not be satisfied without the consent of his leader. The Commissioner of Public Works therefore moved in amendment to Mr. Creighton's motion that the return demanded be limited to correspondence with Architect Waite in reference to the plans prepared by him of the proposed new buildings and any agreement with him concerning his remuneration while engaged on the contract.

Hon. Mr. Fraser made a plain statement of the Government's position. The old plans were submitted to a critical examination by three experts and were found unsatisfactory. One of these experts was selected to prepare new plans. If a friend of the Government had been appointed to do the work, charges of jobbery and political favoritism would have immediately filled the mouth of every Tory orator in the Province. It was expected, until the last moment, that one of the old plans would be adopted. Mr. Waite had no reason to expect that he would be called on to prepare new plans. It was, therefore, unfair to assume that Mr. Waite's judgment was influenced by any expectation of personal advantage from the rejection of the old plans. But he was a competent architect, he had learned exactly what the Government required, and for sound business reasons he was asked to undertake the work of preparing the new plans. This in substance was Mr. Fraser's statement, and it was very apparent from the manifestations of approval that he would be strongly supported by the House.

The amendment passed without a division.

Missionary Work.

Two Local Missionary Societies Elect Their Officers—Satisfactory Progress.

At the annual meeting of the Mission Circle of the Baptist church Tuesday afternoon, satisfactory reports of progress in missionary work were read, and a social tea served. The following officers were elected:—

MRS. HUTCHINSON,—1st Vice President.
MRS. ALDRIDGE,—2nd " "

SIGNS OF CHRISTIAN UNION.

In the present day there are so many tendencies and movements in the direction of Christian unity which are hopeful for the future, that it is a pleasure for the journalist to record them as an encouraging sign for those who desire such a blessed work to prosper.

The last few years has witnessed in our own country the union of the Presbyterian and Methodist bodies, a consummation which, in the minds of not a few earnest Christians, was at one time considered a simple impossibility.

There are not wanting signs that the same spirit of unity exists in other lands, as witness the following facts. In the year 1885 a joint meeting of the English, Baptist and Congregational Unions took place, and the two bodies were perfectly willing to come to some agreement as to united action in places where the population is small. The unification of the Presbyterian bodies of England is now a fait accompli, and the Wesleyans and Primitive Wesleyans of Ireland have joined their forces with the full concurrence of the English conference. Notwithstanding many outward manifestations of opposition, observers see many movements and aims which denote a spirit of unity and the laying aside of old and obdurate prejudices.

Only a few months ago the leading Methodist organ in England announced what it called "the most important manifesto of opinion which it was ever the good fortune of a Methodist journal to make known to mankind." It asserted that many devout and amiable spirits were sighing for reconciliation and peace, and said it was permitted to publish four letters which heralded the millennium of Methodism.

The letters were from four distinguished ex-presidents of the English Methodist Conference and were in answer to this question, "Ought Wesleyan Methodists to propose reunion with the Methodist New Connexion?" Mr. Arthur, the oldest of the four, and the most influential, says he has long desired such union, and for the last ten years has not seen that any serious barrier existed. Another points out the difficulties in regard to church property and finance, but gives a guarded approval to the proposal. The remaining two believe that their divisions have been most unnatural and injurious and are most enthusiastic for the fusion of all the Methodist communities into one compact organization.

It must, of course, be conceded that in England such grand schemes are taken up and carried into execution with more deliberation and caution than in America, but we have no doubt whatever that even the extreme conservatism which exists in some of these bodies, must inevitably yield to the pressure of public opinion and sound common sense. Difficulties in this measure o union must be grappled with there as here, a few stiff prejudices must be surrendered and overcome, but this initial victory of Methodist re-union will, we believe, very soon be an accomplished fact. It is morally certain that these two large and influential bodies of Methodists must ultimately coalesce, and the letters we have referred to indicate that the time is not far distant.

It would be a matter of gratitude and thanksgiving everywhere among Christians, that any honorable course of procedure should lessen the number of parties and churches now existing. Division and disunion are the chief weaknesses of Protestantism, the scandal and disgrace of Christianity, and this streak of light in the horizon is another indication, we hope, that the period for the multiplication of sects is past its climax, and that we are all being nearly enough perhaps slowly, drawn closer to each other in faith and practice. May the good work be hastened in our day.

Deftly Detected.
There is no one remedy known that has more curative power over dyspepsia and liver complaint than Burdock Blood Bitters. "I had liver complaint and dyspepsia and was so bad when I began that he could not labor. One bottle benefited me so much that I bought another, and after using three bottles I was entirely cured." reports Mrs. John A. Campbell of Belleville, Ont.

—Mr. Jas. Storey, of Deny West, has been visiting in Peterborough recently.

BEECHER'S FUNERAL.

THE LAST RITES FOR THE FAMOUS BROOKLYN PASTOR.

BROOKLYN, March 11.—There is a clear sky and a bright sun. The remains of Beecher lay in state in Plymouth Church throughout the night. Flags were at half-mast on all public buildings and on nearly all business houses. The principal business places were closed from 10.30 until the close of the services at the church. None were admitted to the church but those holding tickets. About 10 o'clock all the seats were filled. The pulpit presented the appearance of a gigantic flower bed. Among those present were forty clergymen from New York, Rev. Dr. McGlynn, President Oleana of the Board of Aldermen; Lieut.-Governor Jones, Henry George, Senator Evarts and Col. Fackner of the 13th Regiment; committees from the New York Press Club, Cotton, Stock and Produce Exchanges, Union League Club and the pastors of the colored churches in Brooklyn. Mrs. Beecher and her children were not present. Drs. Hall and Halliday occupied the pulpit. The former read the opening sentences of the Episcopal burial service with a faltering voice. The choir, nearly hidden behind a bank of calla lilies, then sang a burial chant. Dr. Hall then read a Scripture lesson and the choir rendered an anthem in a beautiful manner, the quartet being supplemented by a large chorus. Throughout the church the people were visibly affected. Dr. Hall read his address from manuscript, and several times he interrupted himself by his emotion, and the tears of the congregation fell fast as the preacher spoke lovingly and trustingly of their departed pastor.

When Dr. Hall's address was finished a perfect burst of pent-up emotion succeeded and nearly everyone in the church wept. Dr. Halliday followed with prayers and the choir sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," after which the anthem "I Heard a Voice," which was composed for this occasion, was given.

Following this was the benediction, the recessional hymn, "Hark, Hark, my Soul," was sung, and the vast congregation departed from the church, leaving the remains of their pastor under the guard of Plymouth Company, who will constitute the watch until the body is taken to Greenwood to-morrow. When the congregation had dispersed the doors were thrown open to the public to view the remains. The Roman Coliseum would not have been large enough to hold all who would have liked to have been present to honor the illustrious dead. It was therefore necessary to hold services at the other churches.

Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage made the principal address at the First Baptist Church, taking for his subject: "It is a beautiful thing in human nature to show the disposition to speak well of the dead."

The Interment Will Be Private.

BROOKLYN, March 11.—There was no demonstration of the crowd passing into the church until late in the evening. At 10 o'clock the doors were closed and the police and militia, who had been on guard, filed past and took a final look at the remains. Each one was presented by General King with a flower from the bank that surrounded the catafalque. Mrs. Beecher and the other members of the family will visit the church at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning, after which the body will be removed to Greenwood. The interment will be private.

THE BULGARIAN QUESTION.

The Regents to Summon the Great Sobranje Immediately.

SOFIA, March 11.—It is expected that the regents will immediately summon the Great Sobranje and submit to it reports of M. Grecoff's mission to European capitals and of recent events in Bulgaria. They will ask the Sobranje to decide whether to form a supreme power for the Government of the country or to modify or confirm the present regima. They will also submit to the Sobranje the correspondence seized by the loyalist troops when the insurgent leaders were arrested.

Fourteen Rebels Shot.

BUCHAREST, March 11.—Advices from Rustchuk say that fourteen non-commissioned officers who participated in the recent revolt were shot this morning near Rasgrad, and that all the privates concerned in the revolt have been pardoned.

Condemned to Death.

RUSTCHUK, March 11.—A young Russian has been condemned to death for being concerned in the recent revolt and Lieut. Kissimoff has been sentenced to one year imprisonment for his connection with the outbreak. The German and Russian Consulates are said to be secreting refugee insurgents.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S BIRTHDAY.

Eighty Royal Families will be Represented at the Festivities.

BERLIN, March 11.—Prince Von Hohenlohe, Governor of Alsace-Lorraine, has ordered a grand celebration of the Emperor's birthday in Reichsland, the festivities to include military reviews and other pageants. The late Baron Von Manteuffel, when governor of the provinces, used to prohibit public celebrations, fearing hostile demonstrations.

The King and Queen of Saxony, the Crown Prince of Wurtemberg, the princes of the houses of Baden and Hohenzollern, Prince Louis of Bavaria, and the Dukes of Saxe-Coburg and Saxe-Eminingen, are coming to take part in the Emperor's festivities. It is stated that eighty members of royal families will be present. The Emperor is highly gratified at these universal marks of esteem. The Prince of Wales is expected on March 20. He will sojourn here one week. The Crown Prince [illegible] and Crown Prince of Sweden and Norway will also be present.

BRADSTREET'S REPORT.

A Government Report Quiets the Wheat Flurry at Chicago.

NEW YORK, March 11.—Speaking of the Chicago deal in wheat, Bradstreet's weekly report says: The deal in May wheat, based, as alleged, on an attempt to corner that month's deliveries at Chicago, has quieted under the influence of a Government report announcing 15,000,000 bushels larger invisible with 4,500,000 bushels heavier visible supply than one year ago. Nevertheless the ablest statisticans claim that the United Kingdom, France and other European importing countries will have to import about 130,000,000 bushels prior to August next with but 40,000,000 bushels available from the United States and probably not over one-quarter the quantity from other sources of supply. The failures reported to Bradstreets this week are as follows: In the United States this week 222; last week, 183; March 11, 1886, 211; 1885, 222; 1884, 211; 1883, 208. In Canada this week, 30; last week, 18; March 11, 1886, 24; 1885, 33; 1884, 43; 1883, 34; in the United States Jan. 1 to March 11, 1887, 2035; 1886, 2702; 1885, 2942; 1884, 2782; 1883, 2542; in Canada Jan. 1 to March 11, 1887, 271; 1886, 293; 1885, 344; 1884, 366; 1883, 319.

Redskins on the War Path.

GLOBE, A.T., March 11.—The Indians are committing outrages in the San Pedro Valley, and the situation may become serious. Several houses of settlers have been burned and fusillades fired upon.

LAW FOR THE RICH.

THAT IS GENERAL BULLER'S ESTIMATE OF THE IRISH SITUATION.

LONDON, March 11.—Gen. Buller declares that the version of his evidence before the Land Commission, published yesterday, was untrue. He denies that he made any statement about coercion. The subject, he says, was not even indirectly alluded to while he was before the Commission. A scrutiny of the official report, issued to-day, shows that the mistake arose from the blending of a passage in Commissioner Knife's report condemning further coercive legislation with a part of General Buller's evidence. The Conservatives assert that the Parnellites purposely diffused the error throughout the country to confuse public opinion upon General Buller's genuine evidence.

The Pall Mall Gazette denies that yesterday's statement was a garbled version. The discrepancy, it says, was a mere misprint. It is authentic that Gen. Buller said that in certain localities in Kerry, Clare and Cork an organized stand was being made against the payment of existing rents, but that rents were generally fairly well paid. A majority of the tenants, he said, were anxious to pay but wanted a reasonable allowance, while a great many others, who did not require any allowance, would pay if they dared. He feared intimidation was rampant in the country. The people, he said, had sympathy with the National League, because they thought it was their salvation. The bulk of the tenants had told him that the reducing of rents and the staying of evictions were directly due to the operations of the league. They believed that nobody did anything for the tenants until the league was established. He said it was no longer possible to enforce legal obligations in that part of the country.

Question—That hardly looks as if the law was all for the rich?

Gen. Buller—The law? There isn't much law there. A short time ago what law there was was really on the side of the rich.

Gen. Buller further said that the act of 1881, which was intended to remedy the state of affairs, had been a failure. He was not prepared to say whether the failure was due to the opposition of the league or to the fallen prices. The Parnellites and Gladstonians rely upon Gen. Buller's evidence to support their demand for the stoppage of evictions and the early production of land legislation.

Mr. Bright's Suggestion.

LONDON, March 11.—Mr. John Bright, writing to a correspondent says: "The rebel party in Ireland have all the talk and nearly all the press on their side. If a million loyal Protestants and a million honest, moral Catholics who are opposed to the agitators, but are compelled to keep silence by their bishops and priests, could unite their voices, they would greatly strengthen the Government and the cause of order. I am unable to point out how to do this, but it ought to be done if it is in any way possible."

The Stealing of the Naval Plans.

LONDON, March 11.—Lord George Hamilton, First Lord of the Admiralty, stated in the House of Commons this afternoon that no charge or allegation had been made by any admiralty official against the American Legation in London or directed against any American newspaper in connection with the recent scandal concerning the sale to foreigners of confidential information by an employe at the Chatham navy yard.

Differences on the Irish Question.

LONDON, March 11.—Serious differences on the Irish question have arisen among the Conservatives. Pressure has been put upon the Government not to introduce a new land bill, but to legislate in the direction of land purchase only.

Goschen's Land Purchase Scheme.

LONDON, March 11.—The Daily News says the only basis for the reports of dissension in the Cabinet is that Mr. Goschen favors a sweeping land purchase scheme, while his colleagues support a less heroic agrarian reform. This difference, says the News, is in a fair way of being compromised.

THE GERMAN ARMY BILL

Passed Without Debate by a Very Large Majority.

BERLIN, March 11.—The Septennate Bill was passed a third time in the Reichstag today, and was adopted without debate by a vote of 227 to 31. Eighty-four members abstained from voting. The announcement of the passage of the bill was received with applause. All the Conservatives and National Liberals and a few Centrists voted with the majority. The minority was composed of New German Liberals, Socialists and Alsatians.

The Pope's Message to Mollivan.

NEW YORK, March 11.—When the cablegram was received a few days ago from the Pope conveying his benediction to the faithful of the parish of St. Stephen's the impression got abroad that this was a commendation of the parishioners in their attitude toward Dr. McGlynn. The following is a translation of a cablegram received in Latin yesterday by Archbishop Corrigan from Cardinal Simeoni.

"The true origin of the benediction given by the Pope to the alumnus and the faithful parish is this: The Pope, on the occasion of his creation and coronation, received innumerable telegrams, and a response was given, according to custom, to them all only in politeness and compliment. SIMEONI.

Mrs. Beebe's Funeral.

CHICAGO, March 11.—Nearly all the societies connected with the Central Labor Union will attend Mrs. Neebe's funeral on Sunday. This means a turnout of nearly 20,000. One thousand women members of French and other Socialist societies agreed to form one detachment. German singing societies are voting to participate. The demonstration is expected to be the largest that the Socialists have ever yet made in the West.

The Political Crisis in Italy.

ROME, March 11.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day Signor Crispi's motion censuring the Government was rejected by a vote of 214 against 194. The Opposition considers that the smallness of the majority amounts to a vote of censure. It is reported that the Cabinet deems the majority obtained sufficient to enable the Ministry to remain in office.

Looking for Redress.

ZANZIBAR, March 11.—A large number of British and Indian subjects with their wives and families have arrived here from Tangi to seek redress through the English Government from Portugal for damage inflicted by the bombardment of Tangi.

Earthquake Shocks at Cannes.

LONDON, March 11.—A slight shock of earthquake was felt at Cannes at 3 o'clock this afternoon. More violent shocks were experienced at Ventemiglia and Diano-Marino.

Snow Storms in Britain.

LONDON, March 11.—Severe snow storms are raging in the north of England and in Ireland and Scotland. A number of vessels have been obliged to put back for shelter.

Churchill at Naples.

From Mr. E. E. Henderson, Secretary of the Oddfellows Celebration Committee, asking the Mayor to set aside the 10th day of August as a public holiday, on the occasion of the ceremonies in connection with the Grand Lodge of Oddfellows, which will be in session that day.—Granted.

Statement of Nicholls Hospital Trust, requiring $245.88 for the month of February. —Finance Committee.

From John Corkery, asking to have the Separate school rate collected by the town officials.—Finance Committee.

From E. Pearse, asking the town to appoint arbitrators in the matter of administration of justice between the town and county.—Received.

Charles E. Thorne, 46 Church St., Toronto, asking what inducements the town of Peterborough could give for an American firm to manufacture staple articles. If sufficient bonus or other inducements could be given to locate outside of Toronto, it would be done.—Finance Committee.

Statement of Peterborough Scott Act Association, asking the town to place to their credit $1,000 for fines collected, and to assure them half of those fines for cases in which information was laid by their inspector.—Received.

From Dr. Collins, asking to have Gilbert Peck placed in the Hospital, or that he be assisted in some way.—Refered to the Charity Committee.

From David Menzies, applying for rebate of taxes.—Court of Revision.

The Mayor called attention to the case of a man named Hanus, now in gaol, who was in arrears of taxes and unable to pay.—Refered to the Court of Revision.

THE SCOTT ACT.

Dr. Fife, on behalf of the Scott Act Association, addressed the Council, setting forth the claim of the Association and urging the granting of the request. If granted, the committee would warrant that it would be wisely spent in the enforcement of the Act. Rev. Mr. Tovell also spoke briefly on the subject.

Mr. Menzies proposed that it be referred to the Finance Committee, and Mr. Hartley moved that it be granted. Mr. McNaughton wanted the petition disposed of there and then, and favored the appointment of a special committee for the purpose. Mr. Yelland considered that the Council were in duty bound to grant this request, as it was largely owing to the efforts of the Scott Act Committee and their inspector that the fines had been secured to the town. If the Council wanted to have the Act enforced they could not do better than give it to the Association, besides, it was the latter's by right.

The Mayor said he had received a letter from the County Clerk demanding a further portion of the funds for Scott Act fines, threatening legal proceedings.

Mr. Yelland enquired if the money voted to the County had not all been given to Dumble.

The Mayor replied that it had not all been paid. Some $350 yet remained.

Mr. Hartley moved, seconded by Mr. McNaughton, that the matter be referred to a special committee composed of Messrs. Davidson, McNaughton, Kelly, Stenson, Yelland, Douglas and Kendry.

Mr. McNeil moved, seconded by Mr. Cahill, that it be referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Cahill urged that as this was purely financial it should go to the proper committee. Referring it to a special committee would show a want of confidence in the Finance Committee. He would ask Mr. Yelland if all the money paid in at a temperance meeting in the Opera House had been exhausted yet.

Mr. Yelland,—"No Sir."

The Mayor expressed the belief that first of all they would have to consult a lawyer anyway, no matter to whom it was referred.

Mr. McNaughton supported that idea. He could not see why Mr. Cahill wanted to throw cold water on the special committee.

Mr. Cahill—"Its a cold water matter all through."

Mr. McNaughton—"Yes, and I suppose you like lots of cold water?" (Laughter.)

Mr. Menzies thought the matter should be referred to the Finance Committee. The matter of settling who should get the fines between the Scott Act Association, the town and the county was an important one.

Mr. Hartley did so consider that in his motion he had taken the matter out of the hands of the Finance Committee at all. The Finance Committee did not possess all the ability in the Council, and they were all in council now and could give their views. This special committee could consider the matter, get legal advice and then report. It would come before the board again and then the Finance Committee could pass their opinion. If then they considered the matter not rightly disposed of, he would be willing to refer it back to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Moore called attention to rule 58 and to a special motion to the effect that all matters appertaining to finance shall go before the Finance Committee.

The matter was put to a vote and finally referred to the Finance Committee.

BUILDING A BLACKSMITH SHOP.

A communication was read from Mr. J. J. Lundy, asking the privilege of building a blacksmith shop on the rear of a lot on George street, north of King street, which is within the fire limits.

Mr. Kelly moved that it be referred to the Building Committee.

Mr. Moore objected. He wanted the Council to dispose of it.

Mr. McNaughton believed in doing justice to everyone. He quoted precedents where wooden buildings had before this been erected in the South Ward without objection.

Mr. Yelland supported that opinion. He had himself been fined $13 a few years ago for merely repairing a wooden shed six feet square, while the next year Mr. T. Bradburn came along and built a big new building and never had a word said to him.

The motion was carried after a little further discussion.

Chairman McNeil, of the License Committee, presented a report recommending that 500 dog tags be purchased from a Toronto man at 8 cts. each.

Mr. McNaughton considered this money thrown away. The constables in this town are frauds—they didn't do their duty. In Toronto the constables had nets with which they captured all wandering curs, and why couldn't the police be of use the same way in town?

Mr. McNeil explained that last year they received $100 extra from those dogs tagged than from those entered on the assessment roll. Besides a by-law would be introduced later on to have policemen shoot all dogs not having tags.

Mr. McNaughton took back what he said—Mr. McNeil's explanation satisfied him—and the motion was then carried.

SHOOT THE CANINES.

Mr. Moore introduced a by-law making it the duty of the constables of the town, on and after the first of May, shoot all dogs running at large in the town limits, and not wearing tags. The by-law was passed.

THE FUN BEGINS.

On motion the Council went into Committee of the Whole on a by-law to appoint civic officers, Mr. Menzies in the chair. The following appointments were made:—C. D. Macdonald, town clerk; Mr. Cummings, collector; R. W. Muncaster, caretaker of town clock; T. Rutherford, Chief of Fire Brigade; J. Craig, assistant Chief; J. English, engineer; C. D. Macdonald, Clerk Police Court; C. D. Macdonald, Town Treasurer; Wm. Kerr, caretaker locks bridge; H. W. Watson (No. 1), W. H. Roberts and E. C. Hill (No. 3), and John Armour (No. 4) Ward pound-keepers; E. B. Edwards, Town Solicitor.

On the recommendation to appoint Mr. J. E. Belcher town engineer without salary, Mr. McNaughton objected to such a proceeding when Mr. Belcher already occupied a similar position for the county. The appointment was made.

On the appointment of Robert Pope to the office of Street and Bridge Inspector at a salary of $400, several amendments were offered, Mr. Cahill proposed instead, Mr. Joseph Lundy; Mr Hartley urged Mr. Edward Thompson, and Mr. Yelland moved Mr. Thomas Pratt; Mr. Bird was also proposed.

The various motions were put amidst to a great deal of confusion, with the result that the original clause in the by-law, appointing Mr. Pope, was confirmed.

The clause appointing Dr. Clarke town Physician and Medical Health Inspector, at a salary of $325 came next. Mr. Hartley moved that Dr. Kincaid be appointed town physician and Dr. Clarke medical health officer, at the salary of $200 and $125 each.

Mr. Cahill advocated the doing away with both offices. They received no benefit from these officials and could get along without them as not. He made a motion to that effect, which was seconded by Mr. McNaughton.

Mr. Hartley remarked that though no apparent economy was perceived, it was cheaper in the end. If doctors were called upon for every sick indigent their bill would soon amount to more than their salary.

Mr. McNaughton withdrew his second ment from the motion. He referred only to the discharge of the medical health officer. Mr. Hartley's motion was carried.

THE FUN WAXES WARM.

Over the clause to appoint Mrs. Elliott janitor there was quite a wrangle.

Mr. Cahill objected straight, and was supported by Mr. Hartley. It was highly improper among other things that a woman should sit up at the Council meetings with a body of men in order to close up. Then could she likewise perform all Mr. Beavis' duties of serving summonses, and as health inspector, license inspector, etc.? Certainly not.

Mr. McNeil said the duties of Mrs. Elliot as janitor had become largely increased. There were now three firemen's bedrooms to make up every morning and all the scrubbing and cleaning to do. This was formerly done at an extra cost.

Mr. Moore rejected the idea that Mrs. Elliots would have to remain in the Council room during session. Then the policemen or town clerk served nearly all the summonses. Mrs. Elliott's duties not only included those of Mr. Beavis but many new ones, and as her salary was less, a great saving would be effected.

Mr. McNaughton didn't believe in a lady having to stay around the premises alone with so many men, as she would have to do Council nights. It looked rough.

Mr. Douglas passed a few commendatory remarks upon Mr. Beavis, and moved, seconded by Mr. Kendry, that Mr. Beavis be re appointed.

Mr. Davidson favored the appointment of Mrs. Elliott.

Mr. Cahill pointed out that they had been told that when the recent extra expenses for the Fire Brigade had been made they had been assured that it would be the last, now it was urged in favor of Mrs. Elliotts' appointment that the firemen's beds would have to be made every day, which necessitates the employment of a woman.

The Mayor briefly lauded Mr. Beavis for his faithful services for a long term of years. He had been an efficient officer, especially in the way of preventing wooden buildings being erected in the centre of the town. He didn't like the idea of throwing him out now that he had grown old.

Mr. Yelland said this was a matter of money, not of charity or favoritism. They were sent here to do the people's business economically, and if $200 a year could be saved, the change should be made.

After a little further hot talk in a conversational style between the Councillors, the motion was lost.

Mr. Cahill then moved, seconded by Mr. Douglass, that clause 17 (relating to the appointment of a janitor) be struck out.

By this time most of the Councillors were so excited that they forgot what was the bone of contention, and the Clerk had to read it over again. Mrs. Elliott's duties were clearly defined, and it was proposed in the midst of the hub-bub by some of the councillors that as regards Mr. Beavis' duties as Health, License and Market Inspector, etc., the police could do it as well. These offices had been added in the by-law to the duties this year of the police. This was one argument wiped away. Still there was plenty of kicking, and after wrangling further the clause was adopted in spite of the vigorous "no, no" which came from several.

Then came the real casus belli. It was the appointment of Police officers: W. H. Cooper as chief, and R. H. Adams and Richard Pigeon and Chas McGinty as constables.

THE MEN HAD EAST AND PERISH.

No sooner had the clause been read than Mr. McNeil jumped to his feet and hurriedly moved, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that R. H. Adams be appointed chief at a salary of $600.

Mr. Moore demanded an explanation from the mover why he wanted the change made. What superiority had Mr. Adams over Mr. Cooper?

Again the council relapsed into unintelligible disorder, amidst which a motion to adopt the clause was made and lost.

Several councillors kicked, if Mr. McNeil's motion carried, there would be a force of only three men.

Mr. Cahill condemned the false economy practiced in having only three policemen; that was not enough.

Mr. McNaughton was dead against chief Cooper, and was not afraid to say so, and so were the ratepayers. That was what had placed him at the head of the polls. Mr. Cahill at the bottom and Mr. Rutherford out altogether, because they favored Chief Cooper.

Mr. Kendry urged that the Chief hadn't had a chance. The constables worked against him and against each other, and what could a man do with such a force? Mr. McNeil, too, had shown very bad taste in bringing this trouble up.

Mr. McNeil—"There's no accounting for tastes these days."

Mr. Hartley didn't support Chief Cooper. He hadn't enough backbone. But all the same he agreed with Mr. Kendry as regarded the jealously and strife between the constables. A Chief of Police should have the power to make his men obey, and have them discharged if they didn't.

Mr. Douglas considered three policemen sufficient. When the town was run by Chief Johnston and two men the best of order prevailed. But he didn't favor the discharge of Chief Cooper. If any must go let it be one of the least. They wanted a Chief just the same.

The Mayor positively stated that there should be four policemen.

Mr. Yelland didn't consider Chief Cooper was the right man in the right place, and then the police hadn't worked together. "I'd like to put 'em all out," said Mr. Yelland. Not one had done his duty. If he thought a motion to banish the whole force would carry he would make one.

Several Councillors shout—"Try it! try it!"

"I will," said Mr. Yelland, and he adjusted his spectacles and wrote a motion to that effect amidst a subdued murmur. The motion was seconded by Mr. Moore, and read: "That the present force of policemen be dismissed and a new set of men obtained."

On being put, Messrs. Yelland, Hartley, Kendry and Moore rose to their feet. It was lost.

Mr. McNeil's motion to appoint R. H. Adams Chief was put and lost.

There was now no Chief. What was to be done? The Councillors acted as if bewildered for a few moments, until (it was after six o'clock; Mr. Kendry moved that the committee rise.

Again a great discord arose. The chair-

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,130.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavits produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance with six per cent per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

A Race After Snow Elk.

A Lander, Wyoming correspondent of the New York Mail and Express writes: About two months ago a band of snow elk was discovered in the Green River mountains. The rare animals at once excited the hunters of the region, and the snow elk were pursued by a large party. The pursuit was a signal failure, the cunning animals baffling the hunters and escaping into the deepest recesses of the mountains. The party was led into a district of precipices and snow drifts, from which they only escaped by abandoning everything except their arms. One of the baffled hunters, came to the conclusion that he could, by himself, get the best of the cunning snow elk. So ten days ago he left his camp on the Green river for the haunts of those animals. It took him three days of hard toil to reach their habitat. Once there he found the elk.

The rays of an afternoon sun shone full upon the band as it fed upon the side of a mountain some two miles distant. Night-fall found the hunter within a mile of the game, and he lay down in a snow-drift for the night, fully persuaded that the next day would see at least one of the famed snow elk fall by his rifle. With the morning light the elk were still to be seen, and the hunter began his wary approach. Through deep arroyos, beneath lofty precipices, behind huge walls of snow, and ice, the hunter took his way, and by 10 o'clock was almost within range. Selecting a fine cow, whose dazzling white coat shone in the outer circle of the herd, he began a still more cautious approach.

Suddenly the herd, as if moved by a common impulse, raised their heads, and the next instant moved off toward the interior of the mountain. Puzzled and disappointed the hunter followed in their wake. All he could do was to maintain the relative nearness to the herd he had already gained. He could get no nearer. For two days the hunter followed the snow elk into the mountains. Rising from his snowy bed one morning, the hunter found the entire heavens black with the announcement of an approaching storm. The movements of the snow elk no longer puzzled the hunter. They were seeking refuge from the storm their instinct told them was approaching. The hunter lost not a moment in taking the back track. To be caught in these fastnesses by such a storm as was portended means certain death.

Six hours hard traveling placed the hunter on a comparatively low level. Here the storm struck him. For two days he wandered blindly forward, in the midst of whirling snows and savage winds. He dared not pause, though every instant he expected to fall over some hidden precipice, and be buried fathoms deep. When the storm cleared away, our hunter found that he was lost in the midst of frightful drifts. Here his hunting craft saved him. Taking a course he kept it, and after four days of exhausting toil and fearful privations, he came out upon the southern slope of the Wind mountains and saw before him the Lander settlements, ninety miles distant from where he started.

The snow elk is a most rare animal and is know chiefly to this generation by tradition. Until this band was discovered the tales of the snow elk were looked upon as figments. The snow elk is a third larger than the common brown variety and is far more active and cunning. His color is a dazzling white, and it takes the surest and quickest eye to detect his presence amid the snow-drifts when he is not in motion.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of sources of enjoyment. Worth Remembering.

Every inspiration of the lungs, every pulse-throb of the heart, every sweep of the arm—even our very thoughts as they speed through the brain, all create waste matter that must be constantly removed if there is to be that beautiful harmony of functional effort which constitutes health. Nature's remedy is the sure and eminently wise one, of expelling, by proper purgation, the humors which cause disease, and Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" are nature's great ally in the cure of digestive disturbances, and an unfailing remedy for constipation and its pernicious effects. 6d-w10

Epitaph on an editor—Here lies one who never lied before.

Important.

It is of the utmost importance that some good household remedy should be kept within handy reach in case of pain and accidental injury. The most useful remedy of this kind is undoubtedly Hagyard's Yellow Oil, for internal and external use in all painful complaints 2w9d

Strictly True.

In every respect and attested by the testimony of thousands that Putman's Painless Corn Extractor is a sure and painless cure for corns. The claim that it is just as good made by those endeavoring to palm off imitations for the genuine only proves the superiority of "Putman's." Use only Putman's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure, Safe. Painless. 6dw10

Humorous.

The most humorous man is not always th happiest; the man who has scrofulous humor or any obstinate humor of the blood, does not feel very lively, at least not until he is cured, which, by the way, Burdock Blood Bitters will do in the most troublesome of blood humors. 2w9d

WAR TO THE VERY KNIFE.

men's voice was drowned in the sea of shouts and cries. So loud and turbulent was the uproar that a stentorian voice in the audience yelled "order," and this made some of the Councillors so angry and annoyed at the impertinence of any person who dared to interfere, that comparative calm ensued.

Mr. KELLY took advantage of the lull to move, seconded by Mr. KENDRY, that W. H. Cooper be added to the number of policemen.

This was lost.

Noise.

Mr. MOORE moved, seconded by Mr. KENDRY, that the number of policemen for this year be 4.

Lost also.

More noise.

Mr. CAHILL moved that Chief Cooper be re-appointed for another year.

Again lost.

Here was a pretty "how-to-do." The Council couldn't do anything. They were flabbergasted completely. The very novelty of the situation brought peace to the noisy household, and the struggle was given up by mutual consent.

The clauses appointing Messrs. Adams, Pidgeon and McGinty constables were passed without dissent.

This completed the by-law, and the chairman, thoroughly wearied with his futile efforts to keep order or preserve decorum, vacated the chair, which the Mayor resumed.

Mr. McNeil moved seconded by Mr. Stenson, that the by-law be read a third time and passed.

Mr. Moore moved, seconded by Mr. Kendry, that the by-law be re-committed and that Chief Cooper be contracted in his office for three months.

Again the disturbance broke out with renewed vigor, in which Mr. Davidson managed to secure a hearing sufficient to say about a dozen words, favoring his appointment to office until the 1st of May.

The MAYOR wanted to know if the by-law at present provided for only three policemen.

"Yes," came the answer.

"Then," shouted his worship, "on you, gentlemen, be the responsibility. I don't want any blame cast upon me in the future. You are leaving the best part of the town unprotected, and upon you is the responsibility. I'll none of it," or words to that effect.

Councillor YELLAND (excitedly)—"Well, now, you are so sharp about this; but if you had done your duty, and made the policemen do theirs, this would not have occurred to-day.

The large audience and some of the councillors applauded this speech vociferously.

The MAYOR got angry.

"I have not come here to tell you your duty, or be told what mine is. Mind your own business."

Cries of "Order, order," "Shame," etc., from all parts of the room. Confusion, worse confounded, reigned supreme for a few minutes.

Mr. KELLY'S majestic form rose excitedly from the seat and his loud voice thunderously demanded audience. The oil of his imperious eloquence soothed the troubled sea of discord. He charged that the intention had been all along to discharge Chief Cooper and appoint Adams in his place.

MR. YELLAND retorted that it had not come from them. If it had been anyone's intention it was the other's.

This half-minute session of hostilities was too much for the belligerent appetites of some of the Councillors, and another scene of confusion ensued, half a dozen Councillors at a time on the floor, making (or trying to make) motions, shouting "order," or arguing fiercely with an opponent. It was rich, and the audience took it in to their hearts content.

Finally the amendment to go back into committee was carried, and Mr. MOORE'S motion to give Chief Cooper 3 month's tenure of office was passed amid the plaudits of the audience.

Mr. CAHILL, the irrepressible, here managed to wedge in a motion, which was seconded by Mr. KENDRY, that Mr. Joseph Lundy be appointed Street Inspector in place of Mr. Pope.

Having had a breathing-spell, the councillors resisting powers were considerably rejuvenated, and they objected in chorus, demanding the chairman to rule it out of order, or Mr. Cahill to withdraw it, and condemning it as out of place entirely. Each one was giving his opinion in loudest tones at once and the chairman was non-plussed and distracted. It was a few minutes to 7 o'clock, and being far past supper time, and the councillors in consequence not having their wonted strength and staying powers, they gradually subsided, and the motion was ruled out of order by the chairman, who held that the by-law had been reconsidered merely to appoint a chief of police.

To the immense satisfaction of every one the by law was passed in committee as amended.

The MAYOR resumed the chair, but before a motion to finally pass the by-law and adjourn could be worked in, Mr. Cahill rapidly moved that the Council go back into Committee of the Whole re the appointment of Joseph Lundy as Street Inspector.

The councillors were a unit in opposition to this. They sat on the motion speedily, and the by-law was passed.

The Council adjourned at 7 o'clock, after a session of 3½ hours, which was without doubt the most stormy and stubborn of many a day. It was immense fun for the spectators, who were greatly amused at the eccentricities displayed by some of our civic fathers.

A Fire Insurance Fiasco.

A Fu'se Alarm Ending in Smoke—The Public Meeting.

The Town Council Chamber was well filled last night. The Mayor occupied the chair and briefly stated the subject for discussion—to have Peterborough's insurance rate raised from class C. to B. He called upon Mr. A. McNeil to explain to the meeting the scheme he had on foot.

Mr. MCNEIL regretted that he hadn't the letters from several parties relative to the matter with him, but he could remember in substance what they contained. He had written to the Fire Underwriters Association to ascertain what requirements would be made upon Peterborough in order to have our insurance rates classed in C. The reply received was that a chemical engine was the first and only additional requirement. In connection with this the only extra expense would be in the purchase of another team, all other contingencies had been arranged for. Mr. McNeil said he had written to various towns in Ontario to ascertain the expenses of each in connection with their fire brigades, Belleville, without waterworks, paid an annual sum of $5000 to her fire brigade and was classed in D.; Cornwall, class C, $3000 per year; Brantford with waterworks, paid $6,400; Guelph, class A, $1200; Chatham, no waterworks, class C, $5,500; London, class A, $40,000; Hamilton, class C, $550. Compared with these, Peterborough's rates were good. Her expenses last year were $4,200.65; class C. Mr. MCNEIL read a communication from the Fire Extinguisher Manufacturing Company, setting forth the merits of the Chemical Fire Engines, which, if purchased, would in a few years be paid for, saving considerable extra rates and better fire protection. He wrote also to Mr. Mahaney, chairman of the Fire Water and Light Committee, Toronto, asking his opinion as to the Chemical Engines, and received a reply (which he read) to the effect that it was a valuable and useful engine. He read a letter from Mr. Lees, Secretary of the Fire Underwriter's Association, giving the tariff of rates for groceries and dry-goods as follows:—In a first class building 75c; 2nd class, 90; 3rd class, $1.05, and 4th class $1.60. Add to each of these 5 per cent. and it will give you the rates in C. The Association had made a demand upon the Council to purchase a Chemical Engine, it was for these ratepayers present to say whether such should be purchased. This Fire Underwriter's Association virtually have things in their own hands, are almost unmovable, some 30 or 40 Companies abiding by the rules. A movement was on foot to form a mutual company in town, and this meeting could discuss whether such could be done and the town placed beyond the right of dictation from this association. The elevation from C to B would affect a saving of about 5% all round. For instance, take the two blocks on George street, including 18 stores; each stock would average $6,000 and each building $5,000. On the 18 stocks, therefore, the assessable value would be $108,000; the building $90,000; or a total of $198,000. Five per cent. of that would give the saving effected on two blocks. In bookstores the present rate now was 80c.; it would be reduced to 75c. The contention that it would affect only George street was wrong, and Mr. McNeil read a list of the stocks and buildings coming under its influence, which included nearly every business. It was for the meeting to now discuss these things.

Mr. ERSKINE stated that Mr. Morrison, of Toronto, representing the Manufacturing Company, was here, and if it was desired to hear him he could explain the effect of the gas generated by the chemical engine, and other information.

The MAYOR said he thought it was understood pretty well. For instance, if this room was on fire the chemical engine could put it out in a minute or two without much damage. He understood it worked more particularly on fires inside than out-doors.

Mr. MORRISON, representing the Chemical Engine Manufacturing Company, expounded the immense advantages of chemical engines over steam engines. In every contest the chemical engines had come out ahead. He gave a practical exhibition of the working principle of the chemical engine. In the cylinder of the engine is some soda and water, lying in which is a bottle of sulphuric acid. The cork is liberated automatically from the bottle, and the sulphuric acid, coming in contact with the soda, creates carbonic acid. He illustrated the extinguishing effects of the generated acid, putting out burning paper and coal oil, and a lamp, in a whiff. The carbolic acid is heavier than air and spreads close to the ground, being carried wherever the current leads. The cost of the chemicals, he said, would average about $20 a year. He refuted the impression that had gone abroad that chemical engines were not good for out-door work. In answer to questions he stated that eight men were required to handle the engine, and gave other information. His engine possessed superior re-charging powers over any other make. He stated that his company would accept 5 per cent. twenty year debentures. There was no cash discount, though.

MR. KENDRY enquired if the purchase of this chemical engine was the only requirement. He understood that an additional demand was made for a paid fire brigade.

MR. MCNEIL replied that that was all. Peterborough's qualifications had been given in full to the Secretary of the Underwriters' Association, and they had been told that if the town purchased a chemical engine, the fire insurance rate would be raised to B.

MR. MORRISON read a statement of the requirements for the different classes, corroborating what Mr. McNeil had said.

MR. BANNELL SAWYER hadn't intended saying anything, but it appeared to him that a good old-fashioned Hull or Chicago fire was needed to wake the town up to a lively sense of the importance of fire protection. He expressed dissatisfaction with the present steam engine, and favored the purchase of a chemical engine. The present rates were too high. He wanted to insure a couple of places himself, but found the rates too high. Not only was the steam engine faulty; but a paid fire brigade was, he considered, desirable.

Mr. E. C. HILL entered the council room and was asked for an opinion. Not having a text, he said he could not preach. One thing he would say: if they wanted the town to thrive and the population to increase, down with the taxes! This sentiment was loudly applauded by the assembly. With regard to the insurance question, he referred to the assured economy in the Waterworks, which had been of no effect. Then there were a council of twelve members and a Mayor, and if the people hadn't confidence in them in this matter, turn them out.

Mr. CAHILL thought like Mr. Hill, that the town councillors were capable of settling the business. He thanked those of the citizens present for the interest they taken in attending at this meeting.

Mr. HILL, anent Mr. Cahill's remarks concerning the Council, condemned that body for their hole-and-corner meeting held in the afternoon, when workingmen could not appear and hear the business transacted. He referred to the matter of the civic appointments. He was the workingman's friend and advanced several radical improvements which should be effected by the Town Councillors. But they were blind and could not see it. An argument was started between Messrs. Hill and Yelland, which created roars of laughter in the audience. They indulged in personalities pretty freely, and the subject of their discussion included about every thing under the sun, including education, religion, temperance, science, &c.

Mr. F. FOOT chided the disputants for their imprudence in bringing up entirely foreign matters. The subject of discussion now was chemical engine. He considered that its merits had been clearly demonstrated, and if any was purchased at all, one should be bought for each ward, so as to give ample fire protection.

The dispute between Messrs. Hill and Yelland broke out afresh upon Mr. Foot's resuming his seat, and for another half hour the audience was kept in roars of laughter, bursting out again and again at every new idiosyncrasy or ridiculous personal charge. The Mayor sat in his chair, and between his hearty guffaws shook with convulsed laughter. It was probably more amusing even than the afternoon meeting of the council. The contest threatened to go beyond the bounds of propriety, and at 11 o'clock the Mayor left the chair and the meeting broke up, apparently forgetful of the matter for which it had been called to discuss.

And thus ended the fire insurance fiasco.

AT REST AT LAST.

BURIAL OF HENRY WARD BEECHER AT GREENWOOD.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The remains of the late Henry Ward Beecher were taken from Plymouth Church at 8.30 o'clock this morning and conveyed to Greenwood Cemetery, where they were deposited in the large receiving vault, where they will remain until the family select a lot for final interment. All night long the church was guarded by Plymouth Company G, and at 7 o'clock this morning the remains were turned over to the Plymouth Church Committee, who had charge of the burial.

A cordon of one hundred police in charge of a captain and three sergeants were drawn up in front of the main entrance of the church on Orange-street. There were very few people on the street at the time and everything passed off quietly. None of the family went to the church.

At 8 o'clock the members of the committee and the other gentlemen present took a last look at the face of the dead divine, and the lid of the casket was screwed down. The casket was lifted on the shoulders of six undertaker's assistants, carried out of the church and placed in the hearse. The Rev. S. B. Halliday walked in front of the casket with uncovered head. The flowers which were placed on the top of the casket were allowed to remain. There were twelve carriages. Only the family and close personal friends of the deceased went out to the cemetery. The funeral cortege proceeded from the church to Greenwood Cemetery by the shortest route.

Along the whole route to the cemetery the streets were lined with people and many followed the cortege to the cemetery. It was shortly after 10 when the hearse was seen coming in the main road to the receiving vault, and when the first carriage drew up in front of the vault gates the crowd was so great that the police had to force the people back to make room for the mourners to alight.

Pastor Halliday got out of the carriage and received the casket, which the attendants bore to the big box that was standing in the porch. The casket was screwed up in the box and the pall of flowers was placed on the top. Then hundreds of bared heads withstood the biting blasts while Pastor Halliday offered up a prayer for the departed soul. He made a very touching appeal for the afflicted family, who, he said, had been deprived of its chief member and brightest ornament.

The large iron gates of the vault were opened and the attendants, led by Pastor Halliday, carried the body into the west gallery of the vault. The flowers were then removed and the casket was placed in the vault. The friends of the dead took a farewell look at the box and the doors were closed. The doors of the main entrance to the vault were covered with evergreens, roses, smilax and lilies.

After the cortege had left the church, hundreds of people gathered round and many begged for some of the flowers of the decorations as mementos.

Memorial Services.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, never presented a more joyous or brighter appearance than it did to-day. The decorations seemed more befitting a May day festival than the occasion of the late pastor's funeral eulogy. The chief decorations of the church, where the body lay in state, had been brightened by the addition of freshly cut roses, and the front of the platform and the small desks which served as pulpits were also one mass of beautiful roses, lillies, smilax and ferns. The rays of the spring morning sun shone in through the windows of the church and reflected with exquisite effect the beautiful shades of color of the intermingling flowers and ferns. Not a sign of crape could be seen anywhere, and even the ladies seemed to have conformed to their departed friend's love of cheerfulness by appearing in their brightest costumes. The edifice was crowded to its fullest capacity, and when all the aisles were choked up the people even crowded the platform steps almost to the feet of the preacher.

The Rev. S. B. Halliday, Mr. Beecher's assistant, who is at present in charge of the church, assisted Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott in conducting the services. Dr. Abbott spoke for over one hour, and the attention of the audience was only broken by the occasional sobbing of the church members. Dr. Abbott commenced by sketching the life and character of St. Paul as a religious leader of the first century, intimating the many points in his life and character of resemblance between him and Mr. Beecher. He then spoke on Mr. Beecher's relation to the religious thought and life of the nineteenth century.

FISHERIES TROUBLE.

NO FURTHER LEGISLATION CONSIDERED NECESSARY.

OTTAWA, March 12.—It is thought in official circles that no legislation will be necessary during the approaching session of Parliament on the fisheries question, the assent of the Imperial Government having been given to the bill passed at the last session. It is considered that this will meet all the requirements of the case. In order, however, to meet any difficulty which may arise from the enforcement of the Retaliatory Bill passed by the American Congress, Parliament may be asked to make provision for the Governor-General in council to deal with any emergency.

They Must Have Fish.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Some time ago Acting Secretary Fairchild instructed the Collector of Customs at Eastport, Me., that fresh fish caught in foreign waters in open boats of less than five tons burden, when caught or taken from weirs along the shore or at sea by American citizens, are the product of American fisheries and as such are entitled to free entry. Since then the department is informed by an inspector at Eastport that the privilege of fishing in Canadian waters, which was enjoyed by Americans at the date of the instructions, has been denied them, and that the sardine canning establishments, which were formerly supplied by fish admitted free under such ruling, have since been supplied in part by fish obtained by purchase from Canadian boats manned by Canadian fishermen and then transferred to American boats manned by American fishermen, by whom they were landed. It also appears that certain fishermen, born and residing on Canadian soil, but whose fathers at the time of their birth were American citizens, are permitted as American citizens to land fish free of duty under the instructions referred to above. In a letter to the Collector of Eastport, Acting Secretary Fairchild says that fish caught by Canadian fishermen and transferred to the American boats in the manner stated, are not the product of American fisheries and are therefore not entitled to free entry; fish, however, caught and landed under the rule laid down in the department's instructions, by American citizens, whether non-residents or otherwise, are equally entitled to free entry, and it is immaterial that other governments may also claim these persons as subjects, provided the status of such persons fulfills the conditions of the United States law conferring citizenship.

Formulating a Policy.

PHILADELPHIA, March 12.—A Washington despatch to the Times says the Retaliation Bill is receiving careful consideration at the Department of State, preparatory to the formulation of a policy based upon the new conditions, and which at the proper time will be submitted to the President, and, doubtless, be made the subject of Cabinet consideration before its enforcement. The course of the Administration, as far as it can be inferred, will be one of conservatism. Retaliation will mean such methods of peace as will ensure the ultimate adjustment of all differences. Provocation for war, it should be given, will be from the other side.

A Newspaper Opinion.

MONTREAL, March 12.—That the people of the Maritime Provinces are not unanimous in approval of the Government's policy regarding the fisheries question is clearly shown in the last issue of the Boldeck Reporter, of Cape Britain, published in one of the largest fishing districts of the Dominion. It says: "Should the Retaliation Bill be put in force and all our trade with the United States be cut off the result would be disastrous to the Maritime Provinces. It seems a fair contention that the United States vessels should be allowed to buy bait in our ports for the prosecution of the deep-sea fisheries. In this country the loss from the sale of bait has been considerable. The right of fishing within the three-mile limit is not in dispute. Why not deal with the fishing rights and the sale of fish independently? The one has no right to be mixed with the other. We have no right to violate a plain commercial right to induce the people of the United States to change their policy from protection to free trade. We refuse to sell bait and ice to induce them to take the duty off our fish. The principle is a bad one. Let the fishing rights be defined, and deal with the policy of free goods afterward. Why not put an export duty on ice, fishing supplies and bait? There might be some reason in this policy, but the non-intercourse policy is only fit for barbarians."

RUSSIA NOT READY FOR WAR.

The Transport and Ambulance Service in a Bad Way.

BERLIN, March 12.—The cessation of war reports, it is feared, is only temporary. Russia's forbearance respecting Bulgaria is attributed in military circles to her unreadiness for a campaign. Since the movement of troops toward the frontier began it has been discovered that the Russian transport and ambulance services are both utterly unfit to face a war with Austria. Letters to the Galician newspapers, smuggled over the frontier, describe the wretched state of the Russian troops. Army contractors are conspiring with the commanders to defraud the exchequer and intercept one-half of every million roubles paid out for the army. The result is that if the army should suddenly be called into active service it would be decimated by starvation and typhus fever in a few weeks. In Warsaw the officers have warned the Czar of the condition of the men, and measures have been taken to remedy the evils, but it will be impossible to get the administration reformed and the army ready for several months.

Orders have been issued in Warsaw for the construction of wooden barracks in Radom, Lublin, Valdmir, Rovno and Brediteschow on the Galician frontier. The greatest concentration of troops is taking place at Rovno, where five barracks are being built.

THE C.P.R. CABLE SCHEME.

It Will be Discussed at the Conference on Imperial Federation.

OTTAWA, March 12.—One of the most important questions that will come up for discussion at the conference to be held in London during the first week in April to debate the question of Imperial Federation will be the Canadian Pacific cable scheme. Sandford Fleming, C.M.G., one of the principal promoters of the scheme, said yesterday that if it be acquiesced in by the other colonies and the necessary subsidies granted, the work of laying the cable will be commenced immediately. The Australian colonies had already shown themselves favorable to the project, recognizing the immense benefit it would confer upon them. Fleming will visit England shortly in order to advance the interests of the scheme, and has little doubt that before next summer is far advanced the work of laying the cable will have commenced.

INCONSISTENT CRITICISM.

Our senior local Conservative contemporary, in a recent issue, has its say respecting the plans for the construction of the new Parliament buildings, Toronto, and takes occasion to sneer at the part taken by an American architect, Mr. Waite, incidentally denouncing the Mowat Government for ignoring Canadian architects. If it is honest in its contention for the maintenance of the principle of keeping "Canada for the Canadians," the organ did not go far enough. If the principle it contends for is right, it should be applied to all cases—to both Governments, Dominion as well as Provincial. But the organ fails to point out where the Dominion Government has gained more grievously in this respect. The Dominion Government had dredges and scows, to be used on the public works of Canada, built in the United States and admitted free of duty, when the same work could have been done as well, if not better, in Canada. Owing to the Government ordering public works apparently from the United States, the Kingston Locomotive Works had recently to discharge a number of their employees. This, of course, only affects laboring men, or, as Tupper contemptuously calls them, "the lower orders," but when the interests of the professional classes, architects, etc., are trenched upon, the organ is up in arms, especially where it can, at the same time, aim a spiteful little stab at the Mowat Administration. If the organ was sincere in its denunciation of the practice of employing foreign architects instead of native architects, why has it not denounced the appointment by the Dominion Government of a New Yorker as chief architect of the Public Works Department, of the Dominion of Canada. On Dec. 9th, 1881, Mr. Thomas Fuller, was duly appointed as chief architect, at a salary of $3,200 per year. Mr. Fuller is a full fledged American, and was connected with the preparation of the plans for the construction of the State Buildings at Albany, and it was this foreigner that was charged with the duty of selecting a site and preparing plans for the Peterborough postal or customs building. It is not urged that the appointment was not a good one or that Mr. Fuller does not honestly and ably fulfil the duties of his position, yet it might pertinently be inquired if a Canadian architect could not have been chosen, equally able to the duties of the position? But for five or six years this outrage has been allowed to exist, without the organ once raising its voice in condemnation. The moment, however, that the Ontario Government, under circumstances which fully warrant such a course, selects a Buffalo architect, a ferment of righteous indignation bubbles up and overflows. If consistency is correctly appraised as a jewel, the local organ is not very extensively engaged in the jewellery business. "Thou hypocrite, first pluck out the mote that is in thine own eye."

ALGOMA REDEEMED.

The following paragraph comes from Toronto:

"Saturday's news from Algoma has saddened the city Tories. James Dobie, of Thessalon arrived with complete returns from Tory sources that give D. F. Burk a majority of eight over 'Smooth-Bore Dawson.' R. A. Lyon, M. P. P., has received dispatches from Sault Ste. Marie that confirm this intelligence. In an interview with your correspondent he declared himself satisfied that the constituency had been carried by the Liberal candidate. While the majority is small he is satisfied that it will hold. Capt Wilson, the Tory returning-officer, may count Bork out, but a revision of the ballots before Judge Hamilton, of Sault Ste. Marie, who is appointed by the Ontario Government, will result in justice being done in assigning the seat to the legal choice of the majority.

Springville Presbyterian Tea-meeting.

On Thursday evening, the 3rd inst., the Springville Presbyterian Ladies' Aid Society held their annual tea-meeting. Tea was served in Mr. Goodfellow's hall, to fully 300 guests. After tea the company re-assembled in the church at 7.30. The building was filled to overflowing. The meeting was presided over by the pastor of the congregation, and excellent addresses were given by Mr. Wallace, of Peterborough, and Mr. McCammus, of Cavanville. Mr. Gallelly and several of his lady friends from Peterborough discoursed sweet music at intervals during the evening. There were solos and duets sung by kind friends from Mount Pleasant and Fairmount. Well well selected and well executed readings and recitations completed the programme. After votes of thanks to the speakers and singers and others who had helped to make the meeting so profitable and enjoyable the congregation, led by Mr. Gallelly, sang the National Anthem with much enthusiasm. On the next evening a social was held in the hall on a reduced price of admission, more especially for the young, which was fairly attended. The proceeds of the two evenings amounted to about $80. Great credit is due to the young men of the congregation for the zeal and energy put forth to make the meeting a success.—Com.

God's Goodness and Mercies.

SERMON BY LAYMAN.

(Written for The Examiner.)

The leading principle of the sincere Christian is that God is kind and merciful. And that whatever trouble comes upon man is brought upon them by themselves alone. And that men are free agents, but responsible to God for their sins. Every blessing that man needs is provided by his Maker, and he has only to ask and he shall receive. One has only to look around to find abundant evidence of provision for man's comfort and happiness. And how often has the Almighty given another and still another opportunity to man to abandon the evil of his ways and to come to Him for salvation and mercy. And to crown all He gave His only son to death for the peace and safety of the world. When, therefore, I heard a preacher say in his sermons on two different occasions, that "every weak God brings trouble upon men's hearts," I was more than astonished, and I asked myself the question whether my belief in His goodness and mercy was right or whether it was true that He was harsh and cruel, whether man brought their troubles upon themselves or whether God wilfully and wantonly afflicted them and brought trouble upon them, whether the death of a person was by God's act alone, or whether it came through his own abuses or in accordance with the laws of nature, by which men and things are governed and to which they are made subservient. And more than all else, whether the man who takes his own life, or the life of another, acts as a free agent or by the command and authority of his Creator. And whether when a man commits sin, or destroys property, he or his Maker is the cause of and responsible for it. I have always believed that God did not interfere in human affairs. That he created man, made him a free agent, free to do right and live according to his laws, or free to do wrong and suffer the consequences. That is the history of the life of Adam and Eve, and that has been man's history all the way down to the present day. It is a terrible and a wicked doctrine to charge all our faults and misdeeds upon God, and when man is called on to answer for his wrongs, that he can say he acted through the dictates of Maker. God can take the life of a man, but He does not do so; and man either puts an end to himself through his own conduct, or he dies through the operation of natural laws, which are uniform and unchangeable. A man injures or destroys his own health and he thereby brings death; or sickness comes and he dies and is buried. And all this comes through the laws of nature. God gives but God does not take away; He sometimes saves life, but he does not take life. The burial service reads, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." No matter how the man dies, whether through intemperance or through any other abuse, or whether he kills himself or is killed by another; whether he is ready for death or not, still it reads, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." Now, was ever anything so blasphemous as this? It is worse than sin to charge upon God the faults and iniquities of man. To rob God of His attributes of love and mercy and charity, and to visit the sins of of man upon his Creator, upon that heavenly Father who watches over man and who has supplied so abundantly all his wants, and who redeemed sinful man through the blood of His own Son, in order that we might not perish but have everlasting life. And yet some of those, who claim to believe in God and to be followers of Christ, tell us that God often brings trouble upon man. A large ship, laden with passengers, sailed out of port for a foreign shore. After a time a storm arose and the ship and all on board perished. When the sad news reached home there was weeping and mourning in many a homestead. Who or what was it that brought trouble to those hearts. Surely it was not God. A man gets drunk and murders his wife and family. Who or what made that man drink. Was it God or was it whiskey; and surely it was not God who incited him to commit the crimes resulting from the drinking of whiskey. A man is wealthy, and he becomes proud and haughty. He imagines he can double his money by reckless speculations. He tries and he loses all. And he and his family are reduced to poverty. And the man, in despair, rushes to his everlasting ruin, leaving his wife and children unprotected and friendless. Who or what brought trouble to those people's hearts. Was it not the man himself. Surely it was not God. A woman is sitting by the bedside of her dying child. The child tells her mother not to grieve for she is going to Heaven to be with Jesus. Who brought this trouble to that poor woman's heart. Surely it was not the good merciful God. All flesh is but grass. The flowers bloom and are cut down and are seen no more.

They have laid her to rest 'neath the willow.
By the side of her father and child.
In summer birds sing so cheerily o'er her.
In winter the winds whistle wild;
Her form was as fair as the fairest,
Her eyes were as blue as the sky.
Oh, Gertie, my darling, my loved one,
Why did you, why did you die.

Her lilly white hands they were folded,
A rose red was placed on her breast.
Her coffin was strewed with camellias,
The day that they laid her at rest.
Her sweet gentle voice, how we miss it,
And also her kind, loving smile.
Oh, Gertie, forever you're left us,
Oh, why was it not for a while.

Yes, all flesh is but grass. The flower cometh up in the morning and ere night is cut down and is no more. Add such is human life. All along its weary journey man is subjected to disappointments and troubles and losses, all inseparable from his situation and circumstances. He might do better if he would, but he will not. His Creator has endowed him with every quality necessary for his health and happiness and all he has to do is simply to obey God's laws and to live according to His Providence. But he will not. And then he blames others and not himself, and we are told that it is God who brings trouble to the human heart, a most impious declaration, and most unjust and unkind. The real Christian would not say this. He knows too well of God's goodness and mercy, and he is thankful for the many blessings bestowed upon him. He knows that man brings upon himself all the evils of which he complains, and he knows that as a man does so shall he receive. He looks out upon the world, he feels the warm sunshine, he sees the grass grow and the grain ripens, and he hears melodious song of the birds, and he feels that God has been good to him, and he is thankful and grateful. But the bad man does nothing but complain. He is ungrateful to his kind Creator. He abuses his many opportunities, he abuses himself, and he throws away his worthless life and then blames God. He came into the world an innocent child and he leaves it a bad and wicked man, blaming his Maker for his own troubles and miseries. And if he has a wife and family, he leaves those dear ones to ruin, destitute and full of disgrace and shame. And then, when the grave is about to close over him, come the words, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." Verily, the pride and the ingratitude of man is great indeed. And it must be a poor source

Some candy which he brought from there he, his wife, and two of his children partook of, it is learned, and now the children have symptoms of blood-poisoning. Acute Rheumatism—Cured.

Annapolis, Nova Scotia, Jan. 3rd, 1887. I was laid up in Boston in the Spring of 1881, with rheumatism. I was treated by two different doctors, and was getting worse. For three weeks I had taken medicine and rubbed myself with what they (the doctors) had given me, and I got so bad I could not get out of bed alone. My nephew, who was with me and attending me, persuaded me to try St. Jacobs Oil. The first rubbing helped me, and before I had used two bottles I was out at my work. S. B. HARDWICK.

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now unequalled remedy to the public, Dr. PIERCE thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

LOCAL NEWS.

What the Aldermen Said.

Friday afternoon's session of the Town Council was peculiarly prolific of witty retorts, sage criticisms and undignified "bulls." There were scores of them, and three or four are given below as samples:

Councillor CAHILL—"This Council acts more like a parcel of boys than anything else."

Councillor MCNAUGHTON (referring to the dog tag business and the police force)—"It's ridiculous, a shame, and a disgrace to the town."

Councillor DOUGLAS (absently)—"I'll move, seconded by myself—er-r-r, no," —(great laughter, and Mr. Douglas corrects himself.)

Councillor CAHILL (referring to the appointment of Mrs. Elliott as janitor)—"This Council (he probably meant "Council room") has got to be taken care of, and a woman can't do it."

Literary and Debating Society.

The regular meeting of the Peterborough Business College Literary and Debating Society, was held on Friday evening. Readings by Messrs M. Reid, H. F. Clark and D. S. Sawyer; a song by Mr. Bannell Sawyer, and music on the violin by Mr. Ruth, comprised the programme. The first issue of the "College Mirror" was read by the publisher, Mr. John Brackenridge. The President expressed a desire of having the paper printed, but being so near the end of the term and only a few of the students willing to take an active part in it, it was decided that it should remain a manuscript journal for the present. After singing the national anthem the Society adjourned.

The Cow and the Machine.

Saturday evening's performance closed the week's engagement of Harry Lindley's dramatic company in Peterborough. According to agreement, the cow and sewing machine were given away—the cow to Mr. Green, a labourer, and the machine to a lad named Maitland. It was a straight forward deal, and it is satisfactory to know that the prizes went to parties in need of them.

A Hallelujah Ministrel Show.

The Welsh Minstrels Visit Peterborough.—Immense Crowds go to Hear Them.

Talk of minstrel shows! They don't hold a candle to the Welsh minstrels. Saturday night the cheery tooting of several brass horns and the vigorous blowing of "the big bass drum" awakened the echoes of George street and attracted a large crowd. Sailing down the street came a long procession, headed by five men in flaming red jackets, with voluminous sashes of red, orange and blue, who were playing quick, inspiriting tunes, such as "Good-bye my Lover, Good-bye," "The Girl I Left Behind Me," "Marching Through Georgia," etc.—of course, though, to words of praise and adoration of the Great Redeemer. After the parade, the barracks was filled with people at 10c. a head, and if they didn't get their money's worth then they never did nor will. The usually staid and unpretentious platform was ornamented by a large organ, a bass viol, violoncello and violin, which was afterwards augmented by a cornet. This comprised the stock in trade of the Welsh minstrels. Staff-Captain Griffiths led the orchestra with his violin, Captain Connets the cornet, Ashton the bass viol, Dyke, (alias Buffalo Bill), the violoncello and "Professor" Wiggins the organ. And such music as they evolved from these instruments, and the vigor, precision and fervor thrown into their singing by the soldiers. It just knocked out any philharmonic society, glee club, orchestra or any other musical organization in this district. The solos by the minstrels included several Satanic symphonies transposed to songs of glorification and thanksgiving, in the choruses of which the audience joined heartily, and made the little building resound with a volume of harmonious song not to be heard outside a Salvation Army barracks. A clapping chorus was introduced, and then Capt. Connett told them to "get out their washing," which they did, and they waved their handkerchiefs furiously until Beelzebub was 'sheeed' out of the cornfield, where he was seeking whom he could devour, as it were, after which victory they subsided. But the most amusing feature was the antics of Griff, the Welshman, who seems to have been born with an uncontrollable taste for minstrelsy in his mouth. Grasping his violin with the tenacity of a man who clutches his cudgel and prepares to bounce a midnight burglar, Griff would saw pitilessly on his unoffending fiddle for a few moments; then with a quick movement as though about to attack somebody, he would duck his head like a small man naturally would when dodging one of John L. Sullivan's blows, and extend both arms in a grappling position; then, as if hesitating to begin the encounter, he would pirouette and "sashay," waving his arms "viciously" like the fans of a windmill, apparently to encourage his soldiers to "fight and never run away;" suddenly he would right about, face the foe, and with one fell sweep, amidst the crash of the orchestra and the thunders of the drum, assisted by the shriller tones of a hundred or more voices, totally annihilate the imaginary enemy's forces with a grand finale and conclusive dash of destruction, emphasized by another merciless attack on the already lacerated sinews of his violin. Griff's face during the peformance was a study. His kind, fatherly countenance was lighted up by the inspiration of the moment; every wrinkle on his face, each gray hair in his head seemed to disclose to the audience the feelings of exultation and joy he experienced in the Divine song of praise he was leading.

He explained to the audience the object of their visit. The "Rescue Scheme" of the Salvation Army included several praiseworthy plans for the advancement of the good cause. First came the "Home of Rest," given the Army by a gentleman of Toronto, as a retreat for invalid officers, and which required funds for its management; the "Home for Fallen Sisters," which was intended to place beyond evil influences the poor girls who had been living lives of shame but were attempting to become worthy the name of women; and the "prison corps," for visiting prisons and taking in hand those discharged prisoners who would naturally float back into vice, and endeavoring to make them better men and women. All these schemes needed money, and that was the object of their visit. A special collection was also taken up at the meeting. A feature of the meeting was the experience of Professor Wiggins, who formerly taught music in Whitby, and who vividly detailed his life of drunkenness with all its horrors and disappointments. A confirmed drunkard for 29 years, he was at last brought to Christ through the Salvation Army.

The Sunday meetings in the Opera House were even greater successes. In the afternoon the place was full, while in the evening hundreds were turned away. Five cents admission was charged. The minstrels gave about the same performance, varied by a Welsh song from Capt. Griffiths, and the individual experiences of each. Their visit proved as attractive as did that of General Booth; they are fine fellows, and it is to be hoped they will soon come again, as they expect to do.

Important.

It is of the utmost importance that some good household remedy should be kept within handy reach in case of pain and accidental injury. The most useful remedy of this kind is undoubtedly Hagyard's Yellow Oil, for internal and external use in all painful complaints. 2w9d

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent, of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symtems. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottle, 10 cents. Try it. eodw4

HORRORS OF THE RAIL

ANOTHER AWFUL ACCIDENT TO A PASSENGER TRAIN.

BOSTON, March 14.—The horrors attending the terrible accident on the Central Vermont Railway at Hartford, Vt., have hardly had time to be forgotten when another accident somewhat similar, though, it is to be hoped, not so terrible in the loss of life, occurs, this time near Boston. The scene is a new iron bridge on the Dedham branch of the Providence Railway, which is known among railway men as "the tin bridge." At first it was reported that the bridge had given way and that the accident was due to this, but the true details cannot now be ascertained. The facts, as far as known at the present time are as follows: As the Dedham Branch train, which leaves Dedham at 7.05 and which arrives in Boston at 7.40, reached the bridge the three rear cars were thrown from the track and piled promiscuously down the embankment, which is thirty or thirty-five feet high. The cars were filled with passengers who had taken the train at Dedham and the stations between there and Forest Hill. As soon as the accident occurred word was sent to the nearest stations. Surgeons were at once in attendance and the injured passengers received prompt attention. Meantime a force of men set to work to relieve those who were pinned under the wreck and a wrecking train was made up and sent to the scene.

An inspection of the wreck reveals the fact that the eight cars comprising the train are jumbled into a complete wreck, not one of the coaches escaping almost perfect demolition. From the location of the wrecked cars it would seem that the first three cars passed over the bridge safely; the structure evidently gave way when the fourth car was passing over it. The five rear cars went through to the roadway, landing in a mass of splinters in the street. The train of the five falling cars pulled the three coaches in advance from the rail. They remained on top of the embankment, but were pulled off their trucks and the floor of each was forced nearly to the roof, while the seats were jumbled together in great confusion. The end of the second coach was a mass of splinters, caused by the car ahead grinding against it when the others went down the embankment. The third coach was flattened to the ground as if it had fallen on its trucks from a great height, although it remained on the edge of the embankment. The roof of the fourth car also remained on the embankment, having evidently been shaved clean from its fastenings where the coach went through. The next four cars went down in a heap, the smoker, which was on the rear of the train, falling in the midst of the coaches and being actually ground into small splinters. The inmates of the smoker were all either killed or injured, not one escaping without injury of some kind. Two of the coaches went clean across the roadway, landing against a stone wall that bounded a large field at the foot of the hill. As the cars lie in their present location they present a picture of such absolute demolition that it seems remarkable that any person in them escaped alive. Pieces from the seats are scattered over the roadway and into an adjacent pasture while car wheels and trucks are distributed in all directions. In a mass of splinters in the roadway are pools of blood and occasionally a portion of a body can be seen, although such connected portions of human remains as are found are hurried away to the morgue. Still, there are pieces of flesh to be seen, sometimes fastened between timbers, as if actually gouged from some victim.

Conductor Tilden was in the third car, which remained on the top of the embankment and on the ground directly underneath where he was standing when killed is a pool of blood, while half of the debris of that coach is spattered with blood. Underneath this coach were picked up the breast and lungs of a human being, possibly a portion of the conductor's body. That the horrors of fire were not added to the terrible disaster was due to the promptness with which relief was sent from the Roslindale Fire Department.

The only person known to be an eye witness of the disaster who was not on the train was J. H. Lennon, whose stable is on a hill just above the bridge. Lennon was harnessing his team when the train came along and he turned to see it pass. He was horror-stricken when he saw the train take its fatal plunge. For a moment Lennon says there was perfect quiet, and then the cries of the injured were heard issuing from the debris. Seizing an axe from the barn Lennon started for the wreck, which he reached in a moment. He climbed into the window of one of the coaches that had landed against the stone wall and set to work to release those persons who had been pinned down by broken timbers. Lennon with his axe released four men who were badly hurt, and handed them out of the window to other men who had come to the rescue. He also handed out the bodies of two dead women, one of whom was nearly decapitated and had had both arms severed from her body. During all this time, Lennon says, the shrieks of the wounded and the groans of the dying made a pandemonium around him that was nothing short of horrible. In the meantime other passengers from the coaches that had remained on top of the embankment, and who had escaped serious injury, had joined in the work of rescue. The engine had proceeded at once to Forest Hill Station and sent out an alarm by telephone to the city. In a short time a corps of reporters and surgeons from the city were at the scene. As the dead were removed they were laid in a row by the stone wall, while the wounded were laid on cushions which were hastily gathered together. Arrangements were instantly made for the disposal of both the killed and injured. Ambulances and hacks had been sent from the city within half an hour after the disaster occurred, and as these conveyances reached the scene they at once started back to the city laden with the dead bound to the city morgue, or with the injured for the city or Massachusetts general hospitals. A large number of injured were also taken to residences in the vicinity to be cared for, while others were sent to the depots at Forest Hill and Roslindale. Four dead bodies were also taken to the depot at Roslindale. By the time the first regular passenger train from the city had reached the scene ladies with anxious or curious people nothing could be seen but splintered and shattered cars lying on the embankment or in the roadway. All of the dead and injured had been removed, and the survivors had also all disappeared. The railroad officials did all in their power to give information.

Among the dead are: Myron Tilden, conductor; Lizzie Walton of Dedham; Lizzie Mandeville of Dedham; M. Taylor, policeman of station 13; Mrs. Ellis of West Roxbury; Ida Adams, aged 16 years, of West Roslindale; Ellis Barnett, aged 20 years, of Roslindale; Edward A. Morris of Dedham; George Metcalfe, apothecary, of Boston; Mrs. Cardinal of Roslindale; Charles Snow of West Roxbury; Stephen Houghton, aged 28 years, of Roslindale; W. Webster Clapp of West Roxbury; William K. Snow, Mrs. Kennary, both of West Roxbury; Frank Nicholas and H. Humphrey of Dedham, Miss Harkins of Dedham, Hanna Murphy of West Roxbury, H. F. Johnson of Boston, Alice Vanderbelt of Dedham, Harry Gay of Roxbury, —— Stone of West Roxbury, —— Gates of Roslindale and —— Ryan of Roslindale. Wm. Smith, reported injured, is dead, and Wm. E. Durham died at the hospital, making twenty-seven dead whose names are known. There are at the morgue the bodies of three men and two women unidentified.

Among the injured are: W. H. Smith, brakeman, —— the latter R. S. Pass, barber; Wm. Kreckles, Frank Young, William Hudson, William Hawkins, all of West Roxbury; J. C. Clearney, Edward Parker, George Waldron, —— Hawkins, D. Packard, all of Roslindale; Charles May and Harry Gay, mortally injured; Wm. J. Bowman of Dedham, hip and back injured; O. S. Harrington, Frank Cutter, Maisel Adams, two sisters named Harkins (sisters of Miss Harkins who was killed), Russell Stubbs, and E. F. Paul, railway employes; Edward and Emil Heinzer, injured about the body; Frank Plummer, limbs fractured; —— Hayes, skull fractured; —— Gibbons, wounded in the chest; H. Cardinal, thumb cut off and otherwise injured; W. K. Young, leg broken; E. H. Packard, leg broken; J. B. Lifford, cut in the temple; C. W. Dee, back injured; Cyrus Hayes, slightly injured; P. Houghton and R. S. Strong, scalp wounds; James A. Carran, back injured; John A. Metcalf, ribs broken; Willie Strong and A. W. Davis, injured in the abdomen; Day Swallow, ruptured; Nellie Braham, back injured, wounded about the face and teeth knocked out; Eva Freize, back injured and sprained. Those passengers who escaped serious injury and were able to proceed were taken to the junction at Forest Hill and there forwarded to their destination in the city proper.

The Wreck and its Cause.

BOSTON, March 14.—During the entire morning an immense throng of persons surrounded the wreck, but they were kept at a distance by a large force of city police, who had roped off a space around the wrecked cars. The wreck as it lies made a more appalling ruin than that of any recent disaster. An adequate description of the shapeless mass is simply impossible. Of the nine cars which formed the train six are in the cut. The first, No. 520, lies minus its trucks near the track, about 400 feet from the nearest bridge abutment. It was the rear truck of the car that went wrong first, but the occupants were not hurt, but only shaken up. Just back of this car is No. 18, the second car of the train. This car was swept from its trucks, and its rear was crushed in by the car following. Car No. 28, the third one of the train, is on the embankment badly demoralized, but retains its general shape. The passengers in this car were badly shaken up, but there were no serious casualties among them. This car lies partly on its side, about 100 feet from the chasm. Next came car No. 87. It is doubtful if any one escaped from this car alive. The bridge entirely gave way before it reached the inward side, but the momentum of the train and the strength of the couplings carried it nearly over the chasm. It dropped just before it reached the abutment and the body of the car dashed against the solid stone wall. The force of the shock shot the roof forward, so that it cleared the chasm and slid along the rails its full length. The body of the car was literally ground to pieces, and the bits of wood, iron and human bodies were strewn on the road beneath, forming the foundation of the wreck. Up to noon those who examined the wreck could find no distinct trace in the ruins of the car which could be identified. The only proof that it had existed was the fact that there were plainly nine car roofs at different points, and it followed, of course, that nine cars had been wrecked, though it was possible to trace but eight.

The cars which lie in the chasm form a pile of wreckage 400 feet long by 100 feet wide. The road beneath crosses at such a sharp angle that all the cars were diverted in striking the opposite abutment into a general position parallel with the street and the abutments. Most of the casualties were in cars 87, 80 and 54 respectively, the fourth, fifth and sixth on the train and the first, second and third of those which went into the chasm. Car 54 lies in a heap of splinters, with its sides and roof broken in. The stove did not break its fastenings, but was broken above the grate. The fire, however, was extinguished. Car No. 80 lies partly in car 54 unroofed and with every seat gone. Several of the killed and injured were taken from this car. The stove remained firmly fixed and no fire escaped. Car No. 81 is practically demolished, while car No. 82 lies almost intact upon the ruins. Many persons were injured in these cars and but few were killed. Back of them is the upturned wreck of the smoking car, only a corner of which remains. The car whirled upside down as it half fell from the embankment. Scarcely any of its occupants escaped injury and some were killed.

The bridge where the accident occurred was built in July, 1876. It was 104 feet in length and 20 feet in height and spanned the road resting on heavy stone walls. The grade of the road is very heavy and there is a sharp curve where the bridge crosses the highway. The latter runs diagonally under the bridge and the abutments upon which the structure rests are set at sharp angles. The bridge was designed for a double track but only a single track crosses it now, and the experts cannot understand how both trusses were carried down when the bearing comes upon only one. A Mr. Blaisdell, who was crossing from the first to the second car just as the train struck the bridge, says he observed a broken journal hanging down. This would account for the carrying of the whole bridge off its abutments. A bad flaw has just been found near the end of a 12-inch truss which rest a few feet above the debris. It shows a diagonal fracture of the iron 12 inches long, of which 8 inches is black with rust, while the rest of the fracture is fresh.

The first sign of violence to the cars is upon the woodwork of the second truck of the first car. A violent blow from underneath fractured a 4 x 10 inch timber, the framework of the truck midway between the rails and between the two axles. The blow lifted the truck from the track and derailed the car.

The scene at the bridge shortly after the disaster was heartrending. In one place seven bodies taken out, were placed in a row. All were badly mangled. Large numbers of women were on the train and many were to be seen in the ruins. One woman was cut completely in two, the upper half only being found. Two men who were saved had their faces hacked and the legs of one were cut off.

Incidents of the Awful Tragedy.

BOSTON, March 14.—It has been impossible up to this evening to obtain a correct and complete list of the killed and wounded and a full list of casualties will be furnished at the earliest possible moment. All day a large and efficient corps of surgeons has been at work attending to the injured, who are more numerous than at first reported. It is now estimated that nearly seventy persons received severe wounds. Of these it is said a number will probably die.

A curious feature of the disaster is found in the fact that the entire bridge went down with the wreck. Not a scrap of iron remained attached to the abutments, and but for the chasm and the awful wreck beneath there was nothing to indicate that a bridge had once spanned the abyss.

As the work of removing the wreck progressed during the day additional evidences were found of the terrible nature of the disaster. In some places were fragments of flesh or pieces of clothing which had belonged to some victim whose remains had previously been removed to the morgue. There was blood over everything, scarcely a splinter being removed that was not red stained with the blood of the victims. Most of the pieces of clothing found were from the garments of women, the number of whom on the train was much larger than that of the men and the fatality among them proportionately greater. A pathetic sight was that of two girls with arms around one another clinging together in the embrace of death. Both had been killed by blows upon the head. In many instances axes and crowbars were necessary in order to free the persons who were pinioned in the wreck. In two cases it was necessary to cut two of the bodies in order to get them out. They were already crushed out of any resemblance to human shape and were so tightly wedged in that they could be removed in no other way. One old lady was taken from a car uninjured, but with her clothing torn to shreds. She said the women in her car seemed to be panic-stricken at the moment the crash occurred. They all screamed and shouted, praying for release. She saw one woman dying in a seat while another woman had her head pillowed on the dying woman's breast.

One of the most terrible scenes at the accident was that presented to those who first hurried to the street under the bridge. The headless trunk of a woman was found lying across a timber with one arm completely gone and the lower limbs all cut and mangled. The head was found among the tangled iron and fragments of a car a few feet away. Some of those who were slightly injured were so dazed after being taken out that they could not realize what had occurred. One man was seen to walk from the wreck in the direction of Roslindale. When about a dozen yards from the wreck he fell dead, either from excitement or internal injuries.

Daniel Rondy of Roslindale had a most remarkable experience and his escape from death is considered miraculous. He was in the smoking car and was playing cards with Ed. Snow, Harry Gay and Sargeant Lailor. The crash came and the next thing he knew he was in the muddy street absolutely uninjured, and holding in his hand the queen of diamonds, which was covered with blood. His three companions had all been killed.

The Number of Dead and Injured.

BOSTON, March 14.—So far, the killed number twenty-seven and the fatally injured nine. It is impossible to obtain an absolutely correct account of the number injured, but it will reach 100 or more. Of these, at least twenty five are quite badly hurt and the remainder received only slight bruises.

THE CZAR.

The Report of an Attempt to Assassinate Him.

LONDON, March 14.—The report printed by the Standard than an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate the Czar of Russia had been made is utterly discredited by M. DeStaal, the Russian ambassador here. In an interview this morning the ambassador said he had received no telegram in relation to such an attempt, and this was sufficient evidence to convince him that the report was unfounded. If it were true he would have received a despatch long ago.

The ambassador said he was about to attend a service in the Russian chapel in commemoration of the Czar's accession to the throne, and it was not likely that he would leave the Embassy if there was the least probability of any news of that character being received.

The Standard, commenting on the reported attempt on the Czar's life, says: "Such an event might be sufficient to turn the scale in the direction of war. From this point of view the outrage is of the gravest possible significance."

There Were Grounds for the Report.

LONDON, March 14.—In the Commons this afternoon Sir James Ferguson, Parliamentary Secretary to the Foreign Office, stated that the Government had been informed that some persons with explosives in their possession had been arrested in St. Petersburg yesterday on the route which the Czar was to have taken to attend service in commemoration of the late Czar, it being the anniversary of his death. Sir James said he was glad to be able to announce that no attack was made on the Czar.

The Plot Was Widespread.

LONDON, March 14.—It has transpired that the plot against the Czar was widespread and serious, and that numerous arrests have been made in connection therewith.

WHAT THE UNIONISTS DEMAND

The Parnellites Will Revolt if Mr. Gladstone Accedes to Them.

LONDON, March 14.—Mr. Gladstone, replying to the request of a number of his adherents for information as to the concessions offered the Unionists, declined to enter into details, but says the Liberals may rely upon his firm adherence to the principle and bases of his Home Rule policy. The Radical Unionists attributed the failure of the conference negotiations to Mr. Gladstone's decision to abide by Mr. Parnell's demands. There are facts which many believe tend to show that Sir William Vernon Harcourt misled Mr. Chamberlain and Sir George O. Trevelyan, causing them to believe that Mr. Gladstone accepted Chamberlain's proposals. It is thought that Gladstone was on the verge of assenting when he was warned that such a step would result in a Parnellite revolt. Since the breaking off of negotiations the demands of the Unionists have grown. As formulated they comprise the following eight essentials: That Ireland be represented in the Imperial Parliament; that Ulster be separated from the jurisdiction of the Dublin Parliament; that the Irish Parliament be subordinate to and not co-ordinate with the Imperial body; that the subordinate powers of the Irish Parliament be strictly defined and limited; that the maintenance of law and order remain under the control of the Imperial authority; that Mr. Gladstone's financial proposals be abandoned; that his proposition that the Irish Parliament be consulted of two orders be abandoned, and that British credit be not pledged for the benefit of Irish landlords. The Parnellites and Gladstonians scout these demands as unworthy of consideration. Mr. Gladstone has been asked to state explicitly his position and upon what terms a reunion is possible.

A new repeating rifle, the invention of a blind man, has been submitted to the military authorities in London.

WHY IT WAS LOST AND WON.

At present the appearances are that Sir John Macdonald is retained in power, as a result of the recent elections, by a small majority, and that Hon. Mr. Blake has technically lost the battle. Divers reasons are given—that this or that issue decided the contest, but the weight of evidence is to the effect that political "jockeying" led to the winning of the race by the Conservatives. Sir John had the immense advantage derivable from the shameful gerrymander of over fifty Ontario constituencies as well as the cut-throat political policy involved in the iniquitous application of the iniquitous Franchise Act. To these is to be added the work of the political resurrectionists who seek to give a seat, by wresting the text of the law, to a candidate who has been killed by the popular expression of will. This has been done in more than one constituency or attempted to be done. The most flagrant example is in Queen's county, New Brunswick, where, because of a trifling informality in making the required deposit, by decision of the partizan officer, the man who received a majority of votes was frozen out and the man who received a minority of votes was declared elected. Mr. Baird, the member representing the partizan returning officer, demurred against being a party to such a fraud but he at last consented "in the interests of the party." In the North West Territories where the elections are now going on, the people are being bulldozed. The voting is by open vote and the electoral sheets are sent to Ottawa after the election, so the names of those who voted and how they voted are known to the government, who will be in a position to "put on the screws." There are hundreds of persons making claims on the government for compensation for losses incurred during the rebellion and these are plainly told that unless they vote for the government candidates, their claims for losses (however just,) would not be paid. This is the position in which the "free and independent" electors are placed and this is the mode which the Dominion Government adopts to secure so unbiassed expression of public opinion. Add to these influences the unlimited promises of distribution of public moneys in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, and we see how heavily Mr. Blake was handicapped and how easily he would have won at the recent elections if the fight had been a fair one. But Mr. Blake would not stoop to such base means of securing support. He decidedly refused to make any promises in cases where a prospect of bribing by railway grants would have won him the day. Here are two letters sent by him during the recent campaign, which not only explain themselves, but show that the sturdy honor and fairness of the Liberal leader, make him incapable of base actions and corrupt practices:

"DEAR SIR,—I have a letter informing me that Sir John Macdonald promised Mr. Bryson, the late member for Pontiac, that he would assist the Pontiac Railway Company to the amount of $150,000 towards the bridging of the Ottawa in excess of the present Parliamentary grants. You tell me that I enjoy the confidence of your friends and that the chances of our candidate are good if I am prepared to do as well as Sir John Macdonald in this matter, since the bulk of the electors in your neighborhood will support Mr. Craig if my reply is favourable. I can make no promises on the subject. If a grant were to be given it should have been proposed and discussed in Parliament, when its justification could be shown. To dangle it now before the electors is just a wholesale bribe and I will be no party to a competition of the kind. In this case, as in all others, I am ready at the proper time and on the proper information to deal on their merits with all applications for public aid, irrespective of the political opinions of the electors of the district, but I have not before me at this moment the materials for a judgment, nor do I think the crisis of an election the fit time for disposing of the matter. I should be glad to believe that the votes of the electors of Pontiac would be cast according to their convictions in furtherance of the general interests of the country. Regretting that I am unable to give you the assurance which you tell me is so important, and with thanks for your kind wishes, I am Yours truly,
EDWARD BLAKE."

"MY DEAR SIR,—I have your letter of 8th. You inform me that Sir Charles Tupper and Mr. McLelan are promising the people of Colchester, Cumberland and Pictou that if they sustain the Government, a new policy, not as yet communicated to or passed on by Parliament, will be adopted as to the railway you mention, and that it will be constructed as a Government work.

"You add that the people, while unwilling to trust Messrs. Tupper and McLelan, wish from me an assurance that I will do as much for them as these gentlemen offer, and you tell me that such an assurance will materially help our prospects in the three counties.

"It is plain that if the course now put forward were to be adopted it should have been laid before Parliament, and discussed and decided on its merits. Instead of this, it has been kept back till the elections, and is now put forward in the locality as a bribe, a wholesale bribe, to three counties. I cannot take part in an auction of the votes of Colchester, Cumberland, and Pictou. I never give a promise unless I am satisfied that it is right, and that I can redeem my word. It is possible that the course proposed to be taken as to this railway is justifiable, and if that be shown, I will support it on whichever side of the House I sit, or whichever way the people of the three counties may vote. But I have not before me at this time sufficient information as to the condition of the road, the cost of completion and the other important points involved, to enable me to form a judgment on the question, and therefore I cannot now conscientiously make the pledge which you tell me is so important in the interests of the Liberal cause. "God help poor Canada.
"Yours truly,
"EDWARD BLAKE."

[From this it will be seen that, if Mr. Blake had consented to employ the immoral artifices of his opponents in the recent campaign, he had more than a chance of winning the four seats referred to in the above letters. With so narrow a majority as the unknown quantity which Sir John now boasts, this would have been perilously close to defeat. If Mr. Blake lost his aim in the late elections he saved his honor, and he can honorably and pertinently adopt the spirit of the expression used after the disastrous battle of Pavia by Francis I, in writing to his mother—"Madame, tout est perdu fors l'honneur." Better to lose honorably than win by dishonest methods, which rob victory of all claim to glory. Blake's heroic self-denial—though it lost him temporary success—will establish him more permanently and firmly in the popular confidence than a success bought at the sacrifice of principle and honour.

IMMIGRANTS assisted by the Dominion Government are beginning to arrive in large numbers. Sixty reached Toronto on Friday, and started on a hunt for work. Unfortunately for them as well as for the people of that and other cities, work is comparatively scarce, and the new comers must vie with workingmen already out of work in making employment scarcer. Now that the Dominion elections are over the Conservative government is showing its pretended interest in the welfare of the working men.

Omemee.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Sleighing was good to Peterborough last Saturday. Some of our farmers say it was one of the largest market days they ever seen there.

Capitalists are invited to visit this town who want to make a good investment in starting a roller flour mill.

The Peterborough Real Estate Investment Company has had several loans negotiated through their agent here, Mr. J. D. Thornton, and is more satisfactory than outside companies.

Joseph Pritchard, formerly an Omemee boy, paid us a visit recently before assuming a responsible position in Fairweather's dry goods house, Peterborough.

Mr. Marsh, evangelist, is now conducting a mission in the Lakevale Presbyterian congregation.

WEATHER NOTES.

There is an old Scotch proverb as follows: "February, fill the dikes either with black or white." Our wee month now gone has fully verified the latter predicament in filling every corner and crevice with white glittering snow, falling on fourteen days, exactly the half of the month, to the depth of 24½ inches, and in which some of them were accompanied with fierce, driving gales, drifting the snow in all directions, and especially into our roads, making them in many places unpassable, and where travelling is now through the fields. Eight mornings the thermometer ranged below zero, the coldest, on the 23th, being 16°. Rain fell on five days to the depth of 1 inch and 72 100 of an inch, heaviest being on the 8th, when from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. it fell 95-100 of an inch. The mean temperature of the month has only been 15°, being below the average. We only had white frost on two mornings, and auroral lights on two nights. The following are the different points from which the wind was blowing at sunrise during the month, namely: West, 4 days; south, 1 day; south-east, 8 days; north-east, 2 days; north-west, 6 days; north, 2 days; south-west, 3 days; and east, 2 days.

HONOR ROLL.

Mr. E. C. Bent, of Dakota, has left for home after spending a few weeks with his friends here and in Peterborough.

If the boys who put the pile of logs on the road one night last week were to go and ask the President of the United States they would not likely be able to find out who had to lift them, but if they would make inquiries nearer home they might find out how it came that they had their trouble for nothing.

SUN
LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA.
Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.
AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,130.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in acceding to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to this claim. As soon as your board of directors were aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.
W. MCLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance with six per cent per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

THE TOY-MAKERS.

Life Among the Ingenious Artisans of the Thuringian Forest—The Way They Work and Live.

A Heidelsberg correspondent of the Philadelphia Times writes: A half-day's journey from Heidelberg brings the traveler into a region as full of quaint interest and strange sights as any in Germany, the land of toys, the Sonneberg district of the Thuringian forest. This world apart in the universe of industry is known very well, indeed, to a certain class of Americans, the toy-importers, better than to the importers of any other nation. The American purchasers are the only ones who come to the Thuringian forest to give orders on the spot, "compose" new dolls out of half a dozen different sorts, order toys by the hundred gross, and vanish to return like the swallows at the end of a year. As long ago as 1876 we Americans bought in this small forest nest toys to the value of nearly half a million dollars, and in 1880 our purchases had increased to nearly a million dollars, and yet how few of us, when we buy a crying doll for a Christmas present, a wooly dog, a nodding donkey, a "farm yard," or any of the thousand toys made of wood, papier mache, or wax, think of the strange little world among the Thuringian hills whence our familiar objects come.

Back at the beginning of the fourteenth century the little town of Sonneberg had won for itself municipal rights and sent large quantities of wooden wares to the Nurnberg jahrmarket, had a guild of its own before the close of the century, and continued for more than four hundred years the gradual development of the toy-making branch which has made its productions known in all the civilized countries of the world from Russia, whither Sonneberg sends Easter emblems by the thousand gross, to California, where Sonneberg is represented upon every Christmas tree.

With the opening of our own century came a new era for Sonneberg when a workingman adapted papier mache to the use of the toy trade. Until then it had been used in Paris for ornaments and in the monasteries for figures of the saints. Henceforward it was to take up its abode in the nursery and play-room. This invention revolutionized the trade of Sonneberg. Anyone could do the work required by the new material, whereas the use of the materials before employed had required skill, and, therefore an apprenticeship. By degrees the whole population, from the decrepit great-grandfather to the tiny primary school child was pressed into the service, and to-day the only skilled workmen are those who turn or carve legs for toy animals or the heads of jumping-jacks, and the carpenters who build tiny wooden stables, theaters, kitchens, shops, etc., such as the children of our wealthier American families delight in.

As years went by the factory system began to creep into Sonneberg as everywhere else. The first factory was met with a popular demonstration of so vigorous a character in the revolutionary year 1848 that the proprietor was obliged to abandon his enterprise, but presently the crying doll was introduced, and from that moment the battle against the factory system was lost. The crying doll became the staple production of Sonneberg, and its production employs almost as many workers as that of all other toys taken together.

The toy business does not continue unbrokenly throughout the year. From the end of November to the beginning of March almost complete want of work prevails. These winter months are terrible. The poor little savings are gone soon after Christmas, and the family must starve along upon the potatoes that have been hoarded or fall into the clutches of the usurer. The first orders that have come in are from the American dealers, who send soon after Christmas, because the staple articles which they order, doll heads or little dolls and other such things, are cheapest then, and at the time of the Leipsic Easter fair the Yankee purchasers appear themselves. The season of wholesale export is from July 1 to Oct. 1, when it reaches perhaps sevenfold the height of the winter export. This brief season must be made the most of by the unfortunate workers if the family maintenance for the year is to be earned at all, and their efforts surpass all description. Fancy working month after month eighteen to twenty hours, day in, day out, Sunday and Monday, in such a dwelling, with such food, and working on Friday the whole night through in order to have Saturday's task ready for delivery! After the Leipsic autumn fair, when the urgent orders come, and American telegrams for Christmas goods literally chase each other along the cables, every human being who can set at work is pressed into the service of the toy industry. Whole families work all through the night, and the heat and dust and foul air must have been felt to be appreciated, which reign supreme here, where the fire is kept burning day and night to dry the wares, where a dozen human beings crouch in a low-celled pen, and at night a cheap petroleum lamp adds its fumes to the whole.

The consequences of such a way of living are inevitable. In spite of the pure forest air that pours down from the heights through every lane and byway, where unhappy people are pale and feeble; they stoop and cough, have flat narrow chests, and are small of stature. Such is the race of toy-makers in the Thuringian forest. In the peasant district, but a short distance thence, a hardy race of Thuringians cultivates the soil; but their lean faces, a dry, bloodless skin, betoken the wretched nourishment and overwork. When the children are a few weeks old they are fed with goats' milk and bread crusts, and, when a child cries a bag filled with crumbs and sugar is thrust into its mouth to be sucked, sleeping and feeding. The prevailing disease of youth, is consumption. Of those who survive the fifteenth year, and the percentage of deaths of children under six months of age is 22.

To make matters worse prices are steadily falling and employers and employes are unanimous in the assertion that since 1873 the prices of the coarser, cheaper sorts of toys have fallen 50 per cent. The orders have increased, but only the burden of toil has kept pace with them. Twice as much is produced as of old and scarcely the old remuneration is received.

It is said with truth that one-half of the world does not know how the other half lives. How little we who buy our children German toys know of the agony which the race for cheapness, the pressure of the world's competition, the struggle to hold the American market, despite the American tariff, has cost the men and women and little children who make them.

Charles Mathews' Wit.

A correspondent of the Whitehall Review writes: "Let me tell you a semi-theatrical story, which I do not think has ever been in print. When I was a boy I used to go to the office of an eminent firm of solicitors, the head partner in which used to give me tickets for the theater. One day he asked me if I would like to see Charles Mathews. I replied in the affirmative. 'Well,' he said, 'I'm just sending a writ up to him, and I'll ask for a ticket for you at the same time.' I returned in the afternoon, and my friend handed me a pass for the theater, and at the same time gave me Charles Mathews' letter which accompanied it. The letter ran: 'Dear Blank—Herewith the ticket for which you have writ.'"

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. PIERCE thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, and bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

LOCAL NEWS.

A "Talk" on Poetry.

Owing to hoarseness, the result of a cold, Mr. Barton Earle was unable to deliver his lecture on Tennyson's "Princess" in the Y. M. C. A. Hall Monday night, much to the regret of the audience. Their disappointment was however, considerably subdued by Mr. Earle's efforts in another direction. He read, as well as circumstances permitted, several beautiful poems from the pen of Tennyson, Matthew Arnold and others, on which he made a running commentary. Though not in his best voice, Mr. Earle's excellent recitative powers were exerted to their utmost, with the result that the audience was highly pleased. At the conclusion after a vote of thanks had been tendered the lecturer, a class was formed for the study of English literature, particularly in the line of poetry. Quite a number signified their intention of joining, and evenings for study were fixed for every Monday night. Mr. Earle, who has kindly consented to take charge of the class, announced that the first subject to be considered was Tennyson's "Princess." As the "Princess" is a gem of poetry, those who purpose attending should join the class at once. No fee is charged.

Otonabee Canoe Club.

A meeting of the newly-fledged "Peterborough" Canoe Club was held Monday night, and it was decided, in order not to clash with any other organization of that name, to change the title to "The Otonabee Canoe Club." To undeceive those residents of the township of Otonabee who might feel unduly elated over the high honor thus apparently conferred on them, it might be well to state that the canoe club was named after the noble stream that winds its serpentine length through the town into the placid waters of Little Lake, etc., and not after the township, though the latter does boast of numbering an M.P., M.P.P., and Warden of the county among its inhabitants. The entrance and annual fee were placed at a low figure, and committees were appointed to prepare for the season's sport. Young men wishing to join can learn all necessary particulars from the officers:—Messrs. John Millar, Commodore; Harry Stock, Vice-Commodore; Gordon J. Smith, Treasurer; Albert Dixon and A. Scott, Secretary and Assistant; A. H. Turner, A. E. Thompson, Wm. Dayman and Wm. Hill, Managing Committee.

Weather Lore.

A man bearing the ubiquitous name of Smith, of Montreal on whose shoulders have fallen Vennor's mantle, gives his dictum regarding the prospects of spring. The past winter, he says, has been a natural result of the previous summer, which was generally a hot, dry one, as was proved by the earthquakes in the Southern States, which were concomitants of the drought. The great precipitation of the winter, he believes, was nature's method of getting even and was clearly stated by him in November of last year as likely to occur. The approaching spring, too, will be a warm, dry one, with a summer-like heat in April. This is nice, cheerful intelligence, but we would not advise residents in these parts to doff their flannels on the strength of it. Weather prophets, though they sometimes make a strike, are proverbially erratic.

Legal.

It is announced that Mr. E. H. D. Hall, surviving partner of the well known firm of Dennistoun and Hall, has taken into partnership, Mr. Louis M. Hayes, a barrister of several years standing. Mr. Hayes comes to Peterborough highly recommended by Judge Dartuell, of Whitby, and several lawyers of standing in Toronto, with whom he has been connected. The new firm will doubtless receive a large share of the legal business.

"Blackguardism Rampant."

Under the above heading, the Port Hope Times of Monday dilates as follows upon an event which upset the tranquility of that quiet town:—"On Saturday evening about eight o'clock, as the Salvation Army were holding their out-door meeting at the corner of Ontario and Walton streets, three young fellows, between 21 and 24 years of age, Irving near Osmon, Samuel Palmer, George Palmer and Wm. Thos. Rowland, went through the crowd that surrounded the Salvationists, with their persons exposed, and themselves in a state of hilarity, consequent on a test of the Scott Act. After making themselves grossly offensive to those they passed, they moved on up the railway track towards the bridge. Meeting a woman, one of the young ruffians turned and walked alongside her. She, of course, resented the insult, and Mr. Edward Welsh, who was standing near the Salvation Army barracks, interfered. Mr. Welch then found himself set upon by the three young men, and would have probably fared badly but for Chief Douglas' timely appearance. The chief had been a witness of the latter part of the exhibition, and started immediately to arrest the men. He laid his hand on Samuel Palmer, who resisted arrest and was vigorously assisted by his two companions. All three are powerful men, but Chief Douglas was on his muscle and deposited his man in the lock-up. The other two were afterwards arrested and let out on bail. This morning they were before the Police Court, and contributed $42. The affair was characterised as the most disgusting exhibition of blackguardism possible.

"Intelligencer" Intelligence.

The Belleville Intelligencer had a bad attack of "Peterborough" on Monday. From a half-column resume of several events in our town the following clippings are made:—

The Peterborough Town Council at its last session indulged in some primitive legislation in directing that the canines of that town shall, after May 1st, be clothed with the official tag of the corporation or suffer the extreme penalty of death. This will give the gun club of that burg an opportunity to distinguish themselves.

Referring to the police force trouble it says:—The town of Peterborough must have a fine kettle of fish on the police force.

It also gives a lengthy extract from the report of the fire insurance meeting Friday night respecting the "interesting" debate between two esteemed citizens. It says of the meeting. "Progressive Peterborough sets an example which others should be slow to follow."

W. C. T. U.

The EXAMINER is requested to publish the following resume of the minutes. The meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, at four o'clock on Monday afternoon. Sharp on time the President was at her post as usual—and after the devotional exercises the business of the Union was taken up. On account of the withdrawal of our Secretary (to join the Y. W. C. T. U.,) a Secretary pro tem. was appointed, Miss Price being appointed Financial Secretary. Correspondence was received from Miss Annie Campbell Marshal of Kingston, Mrs. Reck of Peterborough, and Miss Pearson of Brantford, after which a report of the executive committee was received in regard to rooms having been secured over the shop occupied by Mr. Valentine Best as a picture gallery. The committee was instructed to complete negotiations. A vote of grateful appreciation and thanks was conveyed by letter to Miss Skinner for her efforts among us. The Union is a thriving energetic body of workers and at each meeting such an interest is shown as warrants us in saying "God is surely with us."

A "Puff" for Lindsay Curlers.

The final tie played at Ottawa on Thursday last between Lindsay and Peterborough for the Governor-General's medal, is the third in which Lindsay has participated, says the Globe. The first time they played against Halifax and won. The second time they were vanquished by Truro; while in their third draw last week they had a comparatively easy victory over Peterborough. Lindsay usually manages to come to the fore in some one event every year. Twice they have carried off the palm from the Montreal carnival in competition open to all America, one year the double rink, and the next year the single rink championships; while being allowed a place in the final tie for the Governor-General's medal, open to the whole Dominion, on three occasions is an honor in itself, which is greatly increased when they have twice carried the trophy home with them.

Everybody is surprised and pleased at the quality of the 4 button Kid Glove Turnbull is selling at 50 cts. a pair. All the new gray shades in the popular Alexandre make now in stock.

His Life Depended Upon the Apron Strings.

Saturday afternoon a lad employed in the Lock Works was engaged at a large emory wheel, when his apron got caught in the revolving shaft, and almost in a moment he found himself being drawn into the "jaws of death." Fortunately a comrade noticed his peril and instantly catching hold of his legs, pulled backward with all his strength. The boy was saved, but at the expense of the apron.

"The Human Race."

Two citizens living on Downey street, have converted the time honoured "sell" in which the above words are the point, by entering into literal competition in a human race. For it happens that on each of the three last occasions on which the wives of the above gentlemen have presented their leige lords with pledges of affection, the dates of these important affairs, have been within a day of one another—the last occuring yesterday and to-day.

Off to Lindsay.

A couple of rinks of curlers left town this morning for Lindsay. They were:

J. McCle land,	J. Consal,
D. Cameron,	J. Stanger,
J. B. Pentland,	C. McGill,
S. Roy, skip.	T. Rutherford, skip.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Sixth Parliament—First Session.

MONDAY, March 14.

Hon. A. S. Hardy presented a report on Mechanics' Institutes and Art schools.

The following bills were read the first time:

Respecting Building Societies—Mr. Leys.

To amend the Consolidated Municipal Act—Mr. Kerns.

To amend the Ditches and Watercourses Act—Mr. Ferguson.

Respecting Land Surveyors and the survey of lands—Mr. Pardee.

Mr. Marter moved for an order of the House for a return showing what application has been made for payments out of the consolidated revenue, under the provisions of sec. 4, cap. 4, 43 Vic., in respect of the dues of the pine trees. Also showing what is the aggregate sum which, up to the first day of March last, the patentees of lands subject to the provisions of the Act, are entitled to receive out of the dues collected on pine trees cut after date of their patents.

Mr. Meredith—When will that be brought down?

Hon. Mr. Pardee—As soon as possible. I may explain that no money has been received yet. The Act did not come into force until 1885, and the returns for 1886 are not yet in.

Mr. Marter moved for copies of all regulations made by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, under the Act to amend the Free Grants and Homesteads Act, 43 Vic., cap. 4. —Carried

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1887.

A, Number One.

Otonabee Oddfellows' Opening Social Entertainment.

The first of a series of social entertainments was held under the auspices of Otonabee Lodge in their spacious and elegant rooms Tuesday evening. Mr. Thos. Workman, N. G., occupied the chair and introduced a very pleasing programme the first number of which was a pianoforte solo, "Bonnie Dundee" with variations, admirably performed by Miss Caron, organist of St. Andrew's church. Dr. Clarke followed with a well rendered and amusing reading, "The Charity Dinner." Miss Johnson gave "The Wood Nymphs' Call" in splendid voice. In the absence of Mr. T. Dunn, who was incapacitated by a severe cold, his brother, Mr. M. Dunn, took his place, and though he was suffering from the same cause, he gave excellent satisfaction in "Waiting." The next number was the sterling old duet, "Larboard Watch" finely rendered by Messrs M. Tierney and Alex. Elliott. An encore was imperiously insisted on and Mr. M. Dunn, joined then in giving a well-sung trio, "The Buccaneer's Bride." A pleasing treat was the duo, "Whispering Hope," sung in fine voice and concert by Misses Johnson and Grace Stevens. Variety was added to the programme by little Miss Moyse rendering a violin solo, "Sweet Love" gavotte, accompanied on the piano by Miss Chalaupka. Miss Moyse also sang "Maggie Darrow's Welcome" in so excellent a manner as to elicit a warm encore, and she responded with "The Cricket on the Hearth." Mr. T. McNaughton's highly appreciated contribution to the entertainment consisted of splendid exhibitions of club-swinging, in which he has few, if any, equals in Canada. His illuminated club-swinging was received with especial favor. Mr. John Miller's mind-reading exposition was of a most entertaining character, demonstrating the possession of exceptional powers in this mysterious art. Mr. R. M. Roy showed unusual versatility in the possession of mysterious gifts; his "Book Mystery" which he explained as a trick, was "something which no fellah could understand." Mr. Roy's cabinet spiritualistic seance was a most clever and interesting exhibition. He suffered himself to be bound like Sampson with thongs and was further tied to a stool and to the wall and the thongs that bound his feet nailed to the floor. While thus cabined, cribbed, confined, the cabinet being closed, he called up "spirits from the vasty deep"—or elsewhere, who played flageolets, beat drums, drove nails, drank bumpers, wrote on slates and did divers spooky tricks. Mr. Roy, in his mysterious specialties, is a genuine acquisition to the entertainment talent of the town, and his efforts at this entertainment received full and hearty appreciation. The programme closed in the usual manner, with "God Save the Queen." Mr. Seward played most of the accompaniments in his usual excellent manner, Miss Chalaupka supplied music for Mr. McNaughton's club-swinging.

The members of the order are to be congratulated upon the gratifying success of their first social entertainment. The hall was filled to standing room with a great gathering of Oddfellows and their friends. The committee having charge of the arrangements deserve credit for the success which attended their efforts, the entertainment being, as the heading of this sketch indicates, "A No. 1," and those who enjoyed the pleasure of being present earnestly hope that this will not be the last of these delightful gatherings.

THE PAPAL CONSISTORY.

The Pope Creates Five Cardinals and Appoints Fourteen Bishops.

ROME, March 14.—At the Papal Consistory to-day the Pope announced that Monseigneur l'Dreude, Papal Nuncio at Paris; Rampolla del Tindaro, Nuncio at Madrid; VanNutelli, Nuncio at Vienna; Masella, ex-Nuncio at Lisbon; and Giordani, Bishop of Ferrara, had been created cardinals. He also announced the appointment of eight Italian, two Spanish, one Portuguese and three East Indian bishops. The Pope did not deliver a political allocution. He merely said that several cardinals having recently died he found it expedient to create others to fill the vacancies.

Proceedings Against a Priest.

CORK, March 14.—An amended summons has been served on Father Keller at Youghal to appear before the Bankruptcy Court and answer interrogatories respecting his suspected connection with the "plan of campaign." It is alleged that Father Keller is acting as trustee for the Ponsonby estate tenants.

The Montreal "Canay" Man.

MONTREAL, March 14.—The preliminary investigation into the case of Thos. Powers, alias Walsh, charged with feloniously uttering and disposing of bank notes, knowing the same to be forged, was committed to-day. Chas. Buise, who also stands accused of counterfeiting, was to-day admitted to $2000 personal bail and two sureties of $1,000 each.

[illegible] "Yes, when you raised the price that drove us [illegible] the civilized struck in New York?" Omaha dealer—"That's it." "Well, what did you raise it [illegible] this week for?" "The policemen of Chicago are again becoming restless." "Oh! I thought maybe it was on account of the measles in San Francisco."

An eastern merchant said to a farmer: "A dollar will go further than it used to." "Yes," the farmer quickly replied, "and it makes the distance in quicker time."

TROUBLE IN IRELAND

A DENIAL THAT GEN. BULLER'S TESTIMONY WAS ALTERED.

LONDON, March 15.—Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, stated in the Commons yesterday that the testimony given before the Cowper Irish Land Commission was published accurately as given. He denied that any of the testimony had either been condensed or altered, as has been alleged respecting that given by Gen. Buller.

An Irish Magistrate's Order.

LONDON, March 15.—Chief Secretary Balfour, in the Commons this afternoon, admitted the truth of a statement that Capt. Plunkett, as magistrate for Yonghall, had sent an order to the officer in command of the police there not to hesitate to order his men to shoot in the event of the populace attacking them while engaged in the work of serving Father Keller with a summons to attend court and answer interrogatories respecting his alleged custody of funds under the plan of campaign. The order was given, Mr. Balfour said, on information that a dangerous assault on the police was expected and he contended that Capt. Plunkett had done right in issuing it.

The Crimes Bill.

LONDON, March 15.—The Government hope to introduce the Crimes Bill next Monday, or at the latest on the Thursday following, though they do not ask for urgency till after Easter. It is not likely that the Land Bill will be introduced till the Crimes Bill has passed its second reading.

THE BULGARIAN QUESTION.

The Recent Executions Have Exasperated the Russians.

VIENNA, March 15.—Advices from Rustchuk state that the recent executions at that place have exasperated the popular feeling in St. Petersburg farther than the press is permitted to reveal. The clergy are said to be especially aroused and are strongly agitating the question of interference in Bulgaria.

In Honor of King Humbert.

SOFIA, March 15.—Five hundred persons headed by the military and civil officials and accompanied by a military band, went to the Italian Consulate Club last evening and made a demonstration in honor of King Humbert of Italy, the day being the forty third anniversary of his birth. The spokesman for the crowd said the Bulgarians wished prosperity to Italy in return for Italy's sympathy with Bulgaria.

THE PLOT AGAINST THE CZAR.

Several Persons with Bombs in their Possession Arrested.

PARIS, March 15.—The Intransigeant states that several persons have been arrested in St. Petersburg on a charge of engaging in a conspiracy against the life of the Czar last Sunday. As the Czar was passing along a thoroughfare on his way to attend the services in commemoration of the death of his father, a bomb was thrown at him, but it failed to explode.

The St. Petersburg Account.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 15.—It is semi-officially stated that on Sunday the police were informed that an attempt might be made on the life of the Czar on that day, it being the anniversary of the assassination of his father, and that as a result the police arrested near the Imperial Palace several persons who were discovered holding dynamite bombs in their hands ready to throw them at the Czar as he emerged.

A CINCINNATI SENSATION.

Why a Young Doctor Wishes to Dissolve a Marriage Contract.

CINCINNATI, March 15.—Dr. Ward L. Bond, a prominent young physician, has sued A. Hill and others in the Circuit Court at Lawrenceburg to annul the marriage contract which he made with Miss Jennie Hill about six months ago. Bond alleges that he was compelled to marry the girl at the muzzle of a revolver, and he seeks to vitiate a contract made under duress, alleging that, there being no consent on his part, there was no contract. The defendant, A. Hill, is one of the wealthiest farmers in Dearborn County. His daughter was a belle of Lawrenceburg. The brother who is said to have held the pistol is the County Superintendent of Schools. All the leading lawyers of Southern Indiana, including Judge Holman and Jason B. Brown, are engaged on one side or the other.

Aldermen Elected at St. Catharines.

ST. CATHARINES, March 15.—At the municipal elections to-day to fill the places of Aldermen Brennan, Voisard, Begy, Butler and Lawrie, who resigned owing to a protest having been made against them for want of property qualification, the following gentlemen were elected: St. George's Ward, A. Mitchell; St. Thomas' Ward, A. Chatfield, Geo. C. Carlisle; St. Patrick's Ward, J. M. Butler (re-elected), Thos. Crawford.

Charged With Conspiracy and Fraud.

MONTREAL, March 15.—The Police Magistrate to-day issued warrants for the arrest of F. Willett, A. B. Chaffee, Jas. O'Halloran, W. F. Ritchie and M. S. Lorergan, who were members of the first board of directors of the Montreal, Portland and Boston Railway, on charges of conspiracy and fraud. The warrants were issued at the instance of A. H. Gilmour of Stanbridge, who is a member of the second board.

Congratulations for the Cardinals.

ROME, March 15.—Cardinals Gibbons and Taschereau received congratulations from the lay and ecclesiastical diplomats in the large hall of the Propaganda yesterday. A distinguished assemblage was present. The churches of Santa Maria Della Vittoria, held by the late Cardinal Jacobini, Secretary of State, has been assigned to Cardinal Taschereau, who will take possession next Saturday. Cardinal Taschereau will depart for Havre on his way home next Monday.

A Dark Day in London.

LONDON, March 15.—Remarkable darkness enveloped the city at noon to-day. It was as dark as midnight in the entire region of Charing Cross, Whitehall and the Strand, the atmosphere being pitchy black. In the east and southwest portions of the city it was somewhat clearer. Snow was falling heavily at the time.

DISASTROUS FIRES.

The Loss on Buildings and Contents Foots Up $300,000.

BUFFALO, March 15.—The most extensive and disastrous conflagration that has occurred in Buffalo for a long time was that which broke out at 8.25 this morning in the spacious brick building of Miller, Greiner & Co., wholesale grocers, directly opposite the Commercial office. As a result the splendid building was totally destroyed with all its contents. The scenes of the memorable night of Dec. 21, 1883, when the Commercial office was burned, were in part repeated, with the difference that the fire on that occasion broke out in the Commercial office and crossed the street to the Miller and Greiner building, while this time the fire began in the Miller and Greiner block, and though the Commercial office was at one time in imminent danger it was saved from destruction and serious damage. This gratifying result is no doubt due in part to the favorable west wind which prevailed this morning carrying the flames in the opposite direction. The estimated loss on the building is $120,000; on the stock $175,000. The Masonic Hall loses about $30,000, the Acacia Club about $6000, the occupants of the various offices $10,000. This makes a total of about $340,000. The insurance held by Miller, Greiner & Co. was between $175,000 and $200,000. The loss to the Commercial Advertiser office will probably be from $3000 to $5000. The fourth floor was occupied entirely by the Masonic Hall, where the lodges, chapters and commanderies met. The Masonic records were all lost. The loss to the Masonic fraternity is a grievous one. The order suffered badly in the fire of December 21, 1883, and the quarters destroyed to-day had all been beautifully fitted up since that time.

The Canadian insurance companies are not heavily involved in the losses on the Miller & Greiner block, destroyed by fire this morning, the Western of Toronto having only $750 on Masonic regalia.

Another Big Blaze.

At this hour, 7 p.m., a fire is raging in the big Courier Building, occupying an entire section between Main and Washington-streets. This conflagration has no connection with this morning's destructive blaze.

The fire in the Courier Building was got under control about 8 o'clock, after it had caused a damage of from $25,000 to $40,000 to the stock in the Main-street building. The department occupied by the newspaper office was not seriously damaged and the publication of the Courier is not interfered with. Whitmier's bill posting establishment was damaged to the extent of about $1000 and light damage was caused to adjoining establishments.

Fatal Fire at Bracebridge.

BRACEBRIDGE, March 15.—This morning at 4.30 the refreshment house of Hugh Dennison, a frame building near the railway station, was destroyed by fire. It is supposed to have originated in Dennison's bedroom, and when discovered had made such headway as to render it impossible to save either the building or contents. The house was broken into and every effort made to reach the inmates, Dennison and his wife, but it was quite impossible to do so, as the interior of the building was enveloped in flames. As soon as the fire could be extinguished search was made among the debris, and the charred remains of Dennison and his wife were found in different parts of the ruins.

Fire at Lockport.

LOCKPORT, March 15.—Fire broke out in the Haisch building on Buffalo-street at 4 o'clock this morning. It was soon extinguished. The damage was principally from water. E. F. Smith's restaurant, first floor was flooded with water, also George Leonard, second floor tenants. George Heidenrich, tobacconist, had stock on third floor spoilt by smoke and in basement by water. Smith insured for $1000, damage $250; Leonard no insurance; Heidenrich loss $600, no insurance. Building insured to cover damage.

A Meadowvale Store Burned.

MEADOWVALE, March 15.—A fire occurred in this place last night by which the store occupied by Mr. John Willis was destroyed with all its contents. Mr. Wm. Couse, Secretary of the Ontario Bee Keepers' Association, had his bees in the cellar and they will be a total loss. They were valued at $1200; no insurance. Mr. Willis was insured for $160. The store was owned by Mrs. Davis; insurance not known.

Fire in a Montreal Bookstore.

MONTREAL, March 15.—By a fire which broke out in Slade's book store, Bleury-street, this morning damage to the extent of $6000 was done to the stock and building. Among the works destroyed were 300 volumes of Greek authors and 1000 volumes of law books. Slade is insured.

WHEAT VS. STOCK RAISING.

"It doesn't make much difference whether it's winter killed or not—the price is so low"—thus quoth a North Monaghan farmer, when a sympathetic townsman inquired how the wheat was getting through the winter. His justifiable grumble is a broad statement of fact, which suggests the question whether it pays the average farmer to raise wheat as a money-making farm crop. The destruction of the original forests has exposed our fields to the fullest injurious effects of both summer and winter, which such a denudation entails; the land is generally much exhausted by continuous cropping, without an adequate return of fertilizers, and the competition of newly developed wheat-growing areas such as Manitoba and the North-west, Russia and India, all combine to lessen the yield, increase the cost of production, or produce a hopelessness of competing in the matter of price. In the face of these facts it would seem that the farmer should consider the advisability of having more than one string to his agricultural bow. To depend any longer on wheat alone is certainly not wise, and, fortunately, there are other openings available for his acres and energy. Among these, stock raising, and an industry incidental thereto—dairying—are to be counted the most important and promising. The export trade in Canadian cattle to England has assumed large proportions, and now Scotland is increasingly demanding Canadian cattle. The clerk of the Harbor Commissioners of Aberdeen writes to the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and states that that city can absorb an import supply 30,000 head per year of Canadian store cattle. Hitherto Glasgow has been the main distributing point in Scotland for Canadian cattle, and the fact the demand of Aberdeen will not lessen the supply required by Glasgow, points to a steady developement and increase in the Canadian cattle export trade. Great Britain seems to have favorable eyes on Canada as a purchasing ground for horses for army remounts. The War Office has "decided to carry on annually the purchase of horses in Canada, principally for riding purposes for the Imperial army." The prices paid are high for good horses—and as it costs very little more to raise a scrub than it does a fairly well-bred animal—therefore, the matter of devoting increased attention to horse-breeding is well worth the farmers' intelligent consideration as well as increased attention to the raising of cattle for export, and pursuit of the dairy industry. It is well known that stock raising, to produce equal results with crop raising, is not nearly so exhaustive of the soil. If the whole farming community should turn its attention to these branches the results would probably pay. Should the stock market become glutted and the prices consequently fall, the farmer could return to his crops, and with his soil enriched by virtue of a period of rest, his grain raising operations would have a better prospect of paying success. Manufacturers and merchants, when they find themselves forestalled in one market, are forced to seek new avenues of trade. And farmers who find wheat raising an unremunerative branch of their calling, have the consolation of knowing that there are industries within their reach which present hopeful means of making farming pay, which, according to the sentiments of the North Monaghan farmer, it does not now do.

A Conservative organ is denouncing the Mowat Government because it says "no" to the demands of the Opposition in the Local House, for costly innovations. The latter have no responsibility in the matter. For the sake of pretending to do something they assume to usurp the functions of the ministry of the day and suggest matters involving the expenditure of money, and, because the ministry refuses to adopt their wild schemes they are denounced for being able to say "no." It is a good thing to be able to say "no" at the right time. It is an accomplishment which the Dominion Government should acquire with all possible speed. The financial condition of the country would be millions of dollars better if the Dominion Government had learned to say "no" to the sharky contractors demanding extras; to say "no" to the subsidy snatchers, who clamour for princely grants to sectional railway schemes; to say "no" to the boodlers who demand a substantial quid pro quo for their parliamentary votes. Much graver crimes could be imputed to an administration than decidedly and emphatically saying "no" in the interests of the country.

The Conservatives are finding fault (the only fault they can find) with the Mercier Government in Quebec for discharging government employees who were guilty of partizanship in the February elections. It is not urged that the parties do not deserve dismissal—that they have not abused their positions—the greviance is that a Tory who is held by them to have a divine right to the the spoils of office, should be discharged from their places. The idea of a base Rouge Government daring to ignore the divine right of Tories to office!—There's the rub.

Another Railway Scheme.

A Citizen of Cobourg Makes a Proposition, Whereby that Town is to Receive Great Benefit.

A letter appeared recently in the Cobourg Sentinel-Star, and as it has many local references and is of local interest, it is reproduced in part:—

"There are those who look on Cobourg as a town destined to death as by consumption. They say the railway is dead, the college is dying, the car works may be removed to some other point and the Arlington will never again attract to many visitors because of the want of a manager so popular as the gentleman whose loss we all deplore. The utilization of opportunities is a more valuable employment than the most magnificent dreaming or the most doleful lamenting.

"We have by the C. P. & M. R. access to Rice Lake, but Rice Lake alone can no longer furnish profitable use for it. It is not probable that any one will dream of reviving the scheme of bridging the lake or making a roadway across it, because the rebuilding of the road from Rice Lake to Peterborough means the carrying of trade of to Peterborough and not to Cobourg, whilst Peterborough can only be depended either not to promise any assistance, or promising not to afford it.

"The sections of country northeast by east from Baltimore is rich and well cultivated. The villages of Burnley and Warkworth are centres of trade, which would rapidly improve had they railway communications with the frontier. Northeast of Warkworth is the village near the narrows of the Trent River, known as Trent River Post Office. North of this but a very short distance is the Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal Division of the Canadian Pacific R. R., and a region which abounds in minerals waiting for a cheap and expeditious route to market.

"Were a railway built from the summit, or lot 5, in the 5th concession of Hamilton, through or near Burnley, Warkworth and Tilton, or Trent Bridge, it would cross the Grand Junction railroad about half way between Hastings and Campbellford; it might be attracted to either by inducements and it is almost certain that Norwood would neither remain idle or silent, nor refrain from persuasion of such nature as to cause consideration of her claim to direct communication.

"I have heard it stated that Peterborough should be the gaol to be desired as a terminus for our R.R. Now a very little thought and observation will show that Cobourg need look for no benefit from communication with Peterborough than is derived by Port Hope.

"If direct communication with the C.P.R. is desired, surely it is with the east and not with the west we should look for traffic and profit. The C. P. R. wants traffic for its own main line more than for the N. P. Junction R. R. Cobourg does not need communication with Toronto by way of Peterborough, but it does need communication with Montreal, Ottawa and the north-west, and it does need such connection with the interior as will bring trade to its merchants, and increased employment to its artizans.

"Moreover, Cobourg needs to give such consideration to the people of the interior and to the C. P. R., as will induce co-operation for mutual benefit.

Under the circumstances, Mr. Editor, I trust our very enterprising mayor will not let the present opportunity pass without giving these matters his own careful consideration, and then presenting them for discussion by his fellow townsmen.

Henry Lye."

Organization of a "Y."

First Meeting of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Thursday afternoon of last week Miss Skinner, of Toronto, addressed a large number of ladies in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on the cause of temperance, after which a Young Women's Christian Temperance Union, or "Y," as it is familiarly called, was organized, with the following officers:—

President.—Miss Edwards.

Vice-Presidents.—Miss Ellsworth, of George street Church; Miss Hamilton, of Charlotte street Church; Miss Poole, of St. Paul's; Miss Mercer, of St. Andrews.

Corresponding Secretary.—Miss Keele.

Recording Secretary.—Miss Stenson.

Treasurer.—Miss Bird.

The first regular meeting of the "Y" was held in the Hall Tuesday afternoon. Miss Edwards, President, occupied the chair, and the meeting was conducted similarly to those of the W. C. T. U., being opened with devotional exercises. Miss Keele, Corresponding Secretary, read the Secretary's report, which showed an encouraging increase already in the membership. An entertainment or programme committee was appointed, and preparations made for a vigorous prosecution of the aims and ends of the Society. An emblem and motto will be selected at the next meeting. A circular was read from Miss Skinner, on Flower Mission and Kitchen Garden work, the latter of which will probably be taken up as soon as the Society has become permanently settled in their new rooms north of Smart's music store and over the shop lately occupied as a picture gallery. The Flower Mission will be begun as soon as "the flowery meads o'May" put forth their fragrant wealth of floral beauty and "the rose above the rose full blown" exhales its delicate perfume. It was decided to hold meetings regularly every two weeks to alternate with the W. C. T. U. Still more young ladies are wanted to join in the work.

Railway Extension.

The locating of the Central Ontario Railway extension is now completed as far as the village of Bancroft, says the Belleville Intelligencer. The length of the extension is sixteen miles and a quarter, and when completed will land passengers from Trenton direct and also from Belleville, when the junction is effected at Eldorado. The locating of the Irondale and Bancroft line is, we understand, to be resumed in the spring, so that this part of the county will at last be well supplied with railway facilities; and when the numerous iron deposits in the vicinity of both lines are worked, this village will undoubtedly soon become one of the most stirring places in the Province.

Astonishing Success.

It is the duty of every person who has used Hagyard's Yellow Balsam to tell their friends its wonderful qualities as known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles to try, only 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. R. W. MUNCASTER.

A COMICAL ADVENTURE.

An American Imprisoned and Fined for Joking in Bad German.

Some time ago a successful but somewhat impudent young man, residing in the valley of the Mississippi, married a beautiful maiden who had fled from a convent in order to share the joy and burden of life with him. It was determined that the wedding trip should comprise a tour of Europe.

The excursion across the sea and as far as Herbistal, near where Belgium borders on the confines of Rhenish, Prussia, was accomplished in a piping and pleasant way.

At Herbistal the French garde gave way to a German schaffner, and when the young American was asked by the new conductor to show his ticket, he swiftly marshaled his knowledge of German, and inquired: "Sind wir in Prussen?" (Are we in Prussia?) and, receiving an affirmative answer, he said: Aus diesem land kommen alle unsere spitzbuben her." (From this country come all of our tramps.)

Among the Germans of the Mississippi valley the word "spitzbuben" is sometimes used in the sense of tramp. In Germany it means thief and rascal. What was more unfortunate still, the railroad on which the American was traveling was the property of the state, and the conductor wore the regulation uniform of the imperial railway service, and according to law as well as to public sentiment an insult offered to a uniformed person serving his majesty the king in any capacity is a grave misdemeanor, punishable with fine or imprisonment, or both.

When the conductor heard the words of the American he replied with some excitement: "Ich werde ihnen zeigen wo die spitzbuben sind wen wir in Aachen ankommen" (I will show you where the spitzbuben are when we arrive at Aachen). The window of the coupe went down with a crash, and the train sped on across the Prussian frontier, on over a spur of the Ardennes, and twenty minutes later rolled into Aachen, the famous old kaiserstadt.

The conductor was true to his promise. As the train halted two policemen approached the coupe occupied by the bridal pair and requested the husband to step out. He indignantly refused, and was helped out. No words were wasted. No explanations were allowed. The prisoner was hurried along the dark and narrow streets of the city, and the young bride, ignorant of the language and unable to comprehend what was transpiring, saw her husband dragged forcibly from her, and found herself alone at night in a strange land, amidst strange faces, hustled along by an officer of law toward a second-class hotel, where she threw herself on a sofa and lay prostrate for hours, dumbfounded and dazed at the remarkable scene which had taken place.

About midnight a policeman came to the United States consulate, and, arousing the consul, related the incident, and handing him the prisoner's passport, intimated that the American citizen would like to have him call at the prison as early as possible the next day.

The consul dressed himself and went to the place of imprisonment at once. He found the American in a narrow cell resting on a bed of straw. He told the story of his misfortune and begged the consul to ascertain the whereabouts of his wife and afford her all necessary protection. The consul left the prison and proceeded to the residence of the chief of police, where he presented the details of the case to that officer with the request that the American should be released, vouching at the same time for his appearance at court the next day. The order for the release was granted, and at 3 o'clock in the morning the western gentleman was given back to his young bride, whom he found half crazed with fright and anxiety.

At 10 a. m. the next morning all parties concerned met at the office of the police commissioner and the consul, fully aware of the severity of the German courts in all cases of majestats beleidsgung (insult to the crown) endeavored to effect a settlement, but without avail.

The testimony was heard. The conductor swore that the prisoner said "Alle Preussen sind spitzbuben" All Prussians are spitzbuben). The American insisted that the conductor had misunderstood him, and that he had only intended to say in fun that "from Prussia came all of our western tramps." Of course the grave German court saw nothing very funny about it; and, the conductor's testimony having been taken, the prisoner was sent before the amtsgericht, where the evidence was reviewed, and from there the case went to the schoffengericht for final trial.

It usually requires days, and sometimes weeks, to dispose of such a case, but by energetic management seventeen hours after the alleged offense had been committed the final judgment of the court was made known. The prisoner was sentenced to pay a fine of 300, in addition to $40 in costs and he was warned that the mild and merciful sentence was owing to his ignorance of the law and the true meaning of the offensive phrase by which he had insulted a uniformed servant of his majesty the king.

The prisoner eagerly settled the demands of his court and started at once with his bride for the railway station. As the train moved away he opened the window of his compartment and said, in correct at spelled tones, to the consul: "Spain is my name until I get out of this country, but I'll watch for the frontier, and when we cross it I'll open my mouth as wide as the delta of the Mississippi and shout: Thank God, we are safe once more!"—Washington Republic.

RHEUMATISM KILLED.

Suffered 40 Years and Cured.

N. Albany St., Ithaca, N. Y., U. S. A.

For over forty years I have been a victim of rheumatism. I was persuaded to try St. Jacobs Oil. I have used two bottles and a man more free from rheumatism, never walked our streets. My limbs are now as light and limber as in my youth.

JOS. EDSELL.

Did Not Walk for 15 Years.

Mrs. George A. Clarke, St. Catharine, Ontario, says. "I had rheumatism and dropsy, and did not walk for 15 years. I tried eminent physicians and celebrated springs. My case was thought incurable. I was induced to try St. Jacobs Oil. Its effects were simply wonderful. I have the use of my limbs, and think it the best remedy in the world.

Suffered 30 Years and Cured.

Bangor, Maine, U. S. A.

Mr. Frank Durgen, who works at Maddeu's Harness Shop, 127 Exchange Street, said: "My father, who lives at 47 York Street, has suffered with rheumatism and erysipelas in his feet every winter but this, for the past thirty years. He has employed the best physicians and tried all the known remedies for such diseases but received no benefit until last winter, at which time his feet and the lower part of his legs were swollen to four times their natural size. He applied St. Jacobs Oil to the affected parts and was cured.

Suffered 20 Years—Cured.

Mr. William Howes, civil engineer, Red Lion Street, High Holborn, London, England, was afflicted with rheumatism for 20 years. Sometimes his hands swelled to twice their natural size; his joints were so stiff that he could not walk; and his feet so sore that he could not bear the weight on them. Nothing relieved him till he applied St. Jacobs Oil. The result was marvelous. Before using two bottles all pain left him and he is now cured.

Uniform Rank Divisions will also shortly be organized at Smith's Falls and Owen Sound. The total membership of the society has increased over 22,000 during the past year.

The Result Reversed.

The Peterborough curlers were defeated at Lindsay on Tuesday by 7 points, the same number as the Lindsay scopers were behind in their match with the home curlers last Saturday. A noticeable feature of this match is the fact that the celebrated Flavelle rink is not invincible. "Tom" thinks he has got a rink now that can beat Flavelle's every time. His rink in four ends against the Flavelle rink scored 18 points, a good record. Score:—

Over the Hill to the Protestant Home.

Mayor Stevenson and Councillors Douglass, Kendry, McNeil and McNaughton visited the Peterborough Protestant Home Tuesday afternoon, and were shown through the Premises by several of the lady patrons of the institution. Funds are wanted to raise the roof and add another story, in order to meet the demand for increased accommodation, and it is understood the object of the ladies in inviting the Town Council to visit the Home was to secure their aid in procuring a grant for that purpose. The Home was found in excellent order, everything neat, clean and attractive.

Heavy Loan.

Mr. E. E. Henderson, the agent in Peterborough of the British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Company, has just effected another loan of $12,000. This makes a total of about $30,000 invested by this company in Peterborough, and nearly $600,000 in Canada, and shows that old country corporations are willing to invest any amount of money in Canada, and particularly the town of Peterborough, in whose prospects for future prosperity they have the greatest faith.

Extent of the System.

The Bell telephone company have in Canada 157 exchanges, 79 agencies, 133 miles of poles, and 923 miles of wire have been added to the trunk line system during the past year. Of these, 292 pole miles and 553 wire miles are in Ontario, and 341 pole miles and 370 wire miles in the eastern department. The trunk lines, now owned by the company, comprise about 4,000 miles of wire or about 2,600 miles of poles.

Too Sharp a Turn.

Every evening 'bus loads of young people leave town for the residences of some of their rural friends, where as is well known the best fun can always be had. A party drove north to the residence of Mr. Andrew Hall Tuesday evening, and on the way home, when hurrying out at the gate met with an upset, which fortunately resulted in nothing more serious than a few bruises and cuts.

St. Patrick's Day.

The teachers and pupils of George street Sunday School will be "At Home" in their school room which will be handsomely decorated, to welcome their friends, on Thursday evening, March 17th. Light refreshments will be served and a fine programme of vocal and instrumental music, reading and recitation, etc., rendered. Call and spend a social hour with us. Tickets, 25 cents.

A "Canton Militant."

Mount Hebron Encampment of Oddfellows are contemplating the purchase of a complete uniform which will convert them into a Canton Militant. A meeting to decide the matter will be held this evening.

A Bit of Information.

One has only to go abroad to get a deal of information about one's own town. For instance, the Toronto World of to-day says:—"Mayor Cox of Peterborough is at the Rossin." The name of Ex-Mayor Cox is so closely interwoven with Peterborough that it seems impossible for outsiders to imagine him in any other position.

Law for Maple Sugar Venders.

Under a new act passed at a recent session of the Legislature, all parties offering maple sugar for sale will be compelled to label it as such; and the farmer who in future sells sugar at 15c. a pound as maple sugar, which he has purchased at fifteen pounds for a dollar in a grocery store, is liable to a fine and the seizure of his goods.

Accident on the Grand Junction.

The mixed train which leaves here for Belleville at 7:30 a.m., to-day met with a slight accident. When running along about 3 miles this side of Hastings two box cars, loaded with grain, were derailed and wrecked. No person was injured. The wreckage is being cleared up and no stoppage of traffic has resulted. A broken axle is supposed to have been the cause of the accident.

American Canoe Association.

A meeting of the newly formed northern division of the American Canoe Association will be held in the office over the G. N. W. Telegraph Co., Cox block, Friday evening, 18th inst., for the purpose of electing officers and making arrangements for the grand meet at Stony Lake this summer. An earnest invitation is extended to all interested in canoeing to attend and join the Association.

If you have heard of anything new and have not seen it, look for it at Turnbull's, the great novelty house. His counters are now piled with New Spring good which he is pleased to show.

Preparing for Summer Sports.

A meeting of the Cricket, Bicycle, Baseball, Lawn Tennis, Football, Snowshoe and Toboggan Clubs, forming the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association, will be held in the rooms over Mr. Stethem's hardware store on Thursday evening, 17th inst., at half-past seven o'clock, sharp, for the election of officers and striking the committees for the ensuing year. All interested in any of the above sports are requested to attend, as success depends on hearty co-operation.

Personal.

Dr. McNichol of Cobourg was in town yesterday. He looked over the situation, and believes that there is at present a favourable opening here for another medical practitioner who will keep up our normal number of physicians and it is understood that he he has decided to come to Peterborough and continue the practice of his profession. We shall all be glad to welcome amongst us so estimable a citizen and so successful and skilful a practitioner as Dr. McNichol.

Mr. D. McNicoll, General Passenger Agent, and Mr. W. R. Callaway, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, of the C. P. R., were in town to-day.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Sixth Parliament—First Session.

TUESDAY, March 15th.

In the House to-day after routine and the introduction of several private bills, Hon. A. M. Ross, Provincial Treasurer, rose to make his and was received with loud cheers. The honorable gentleman began with a discussion of the various items of receipts and expenditures in the estimates. In the matter of licenses the Government expected a decrease of revenue this year. Comparing the receipts of last year with the former estimates an increase in nearly every item was visible. The total excess, including exceptional receipts amounted to $122,657.32. The new Parliament Buildings will cost more than the original estimates, but the Government will have an unlooked-for income from the increment in value of land.

In annuities the Government had succeeded during the past year in reducing the rate of interest to less than 4½ per cent. Each succeeding sale was made on better terms than the one preceding. It might be said that the interest paid was still higher than the cost of Dominion lands, but the latter being payable in England was subject to various charges and commissions.

Coming to expenditure there was a saving in legislation of over $10,000 during the past year. In administration of justice there is an unexpended balance of $33,953. The expenditure on experimental farms is $2,000 less than 1885. The Government creamery in 1885 was carried on without loss. In 1886 with a different plan, there is a surplus of about $600 to be distributed among the patrons. In public buildings there is a saving of $99,400. In public works the expenditures came within the estimates by $20,760.

In colonization roads there was an over expenditure of $15,283. This is the only account in which any over expenditure occurred to any amount. In criminal justice a large saving was effected. In education there was a slight over expenditure. Public institutions show a saving of expenditure. In Crown Lands the saving amounted to $11,222.

The expenses for the Colonial and Indian Exhibition were $1,270 less than the estimates. The Hon. Treasurer said that the exhibition reflected great credit on the Province. The dairy exhibit was not even approached by any colony. In miscellaneous expenditure the estimates proved too much by $16,286.

Last year's Supply Bill called for a total expenditure of $3,029,216. The Government actually expended $2,769,078; an unexpended balance remains of $259,238. Certain exceptional expenditures arose, such as debentures, railway aid certificates, etc. After providing for all these the total expenditure for the year only exceeded the estimates by $33,049. But for extraordinary expenditures in the case of municipalities, the Province would show a net surplus of receipts over expenditures.

The Hon. Treasurer then dealt with the assets and liabilities of the province. He claimed a surplus of $6,680,339,78. He regretted that no progress had been made in settling the accounts of Ontario with the Dominion Government, since the last House met. The fault did not rest with Ontario. He had made efforts to secure a settlement with the representative of the Dominion Finance Department and the Quebec Treasurer, but for various reasons these gentlemen had been unable to come together. Ontario however had additional information. The Dominion Government's re-cast was not on the line expected by Ontario and Quebec. Ontario is charged with compound interest, while by the Act of 1884 simple interest only was provided for. This made a serious difference to Ontario and he objected to this method of treating the affairs of the province.

The Hon. Treasurer claimed that he was right in placing the capital credited by the Dominion Government in the act of 1884 among the assets of the province. He contended that this set at rest the Opposition objections that Ontario has no surplus except cash in the bank. He referred to Quebec's grant from the Dominion for local roads. Great injustice was done to Ontario. Under the old system, when each province constructed its own roads, Ontario being more prosperous than the others had expended liberal amounts. What was the effect of transferring the system to Dominion control? The province that has built the most roads with its own money is forced to contribute to the roads of other provinces. He quoted from the Dominion railway returns showing that out of a total expenditure of over twenty millions, Ontario had only received less than four millions. Quebec had received over ten millions; Nova Scotia over two millions, and New Brunswick over three millions. As Ontario contributed one half of the whole revenue of the Dominion she should have received at least ten millions. If it had been carried out on a basis of population the province should have been granted at least nine millions.

Referring to the estimated receipts for the present year the Hon. Treasurer took up the items severally. The figures for 1886 were closely followed in almost every case. By the act of the City of Toronto a reduction of about $16,000 from licenses would occur. The Municipal Loan Fund was left among the estimated receipts, the same as formerly, as the debts of St. Catherines and Cobourg had not been liquidated.

The total estimated expenditures are $2,980,708, and assuming the supplementary estimates at $50,000, we have a total of $3,030,708. The total estimated receipts being $2,789,125, leaves an estimated excess of $241,583. Last year the estimate over expenditure was $400,000, while the actual was about $30,000. The expenditure will be guarded this year in the same careful way as before. The Hon. Treasurer hoped that if he should bring down a budget in 1888, he would be able to congratulate the House on the financial condition of the province. An increase of expenditure had to occur as the province grew. Opposition members fresh from the hustings may say that the surplus was mythical, but it was sufficient to meet any and all extraordinary demands.

Mr. CREIGHTON criticised the financial statement and deplored the failure to settle the Dominion accounts. He also objected to the statement of assets, claiming that it did not show the true state of affairs. He reiterated the old time charge that the Government was dissipating the capital of the Province.

The debate was continued by Messrs Balfour and Clarke, (Toronto). Smith, East York; J. Clancy, West Kent; Dr. Chamberlain, Dundas, and A. F. Wood, North Hastings, and at 10.45 the House adjourned.

The Busy Hum of Industry.
A Glance at the Peterborough Stove and Furnace Company's Operations Since their Beginning—An Important Industry that is Bound to Thrive.
On the 23rd day of September, 1885, the first casting was made in the new buildings which had just been erected by the Powell & Jones Co., for a stove foundry, situated on Bethune street, just beside the C. P. R. track, and in the angle formed by the intersection of the Midland and C. P. R. The former line runs along the east side of the buildings, and the latter on the south side. At the time of their erection and the beginning of manufacturing operations the premises were thoroughly described, so that it will be unnecessary for readers of the EXAMINER to follow out a minute description of each department and its special work. Suffice it to say in general that it consists of the main building, 42x82, three stories in height, from the west end of which extends northward as annex 45x65, two stories. In rear of this is the moulding room, 65x65, with an attic storey for ventilation. These large buildings include a cupola room, cleaning room, grinding room, boiler room, engine room, mounting room, black-leading room, nickel polishing and nickel plating room, and the offices.
The original name, "Powell & Jones Stove Works" has since been changed to "The Peterborough Stove and Furnace Company's Works." The officers at present are:—
PRESIDENT—Geo. A. Cox.
VICE-PRES. AND MANAGER—E. W. Cox.
TREASURER—David Wallace.
SECRETARY—F. G. Cox.
SUPERINTENDENT—Mr. McCormick.
PAST OPERATIONS.
Since beginning operations the Works have been running without interruption except for eight days last summer—an uncommon thing for manufactories of this kind, which usually are closed for weeks or months during the winter. The present staff employed is about 30, but up till two or three weeks ago 8 or 10 more men were employed, and these will be re-engaged very soon. The average weekly payment of wages is about $250. Most of the men engaged in the Works live close by, and in consequence a thriving little village has sprung up in that neighborhood, which less than two years ago was very little settled.
When the Stove Works were started only the best goods were manufactured, and since that the managers have been experimenting and improving until the articles manufactured have attained the highest possible standard of excellence. Without any boasting, the Peterborough Company make the finest stoves in the country, particularly in the mounting and finish. Though, perhaps, they don't do so much work, yet they do it better, and that is a great consideration in the purchase of stoves. Their goods are gradually being introduced into the market, and everywhere meet with commendation. When it is remembered that they compete against thirty-five or more rival firms in Ontario alone, an idea will be gained of the work that is necessary in order to have their goods fully recognized. Last year they trebled the output of the year ending 1885, and they hope—nay, are certain—that the sales this year will be trebled over 1886. No difficulty in doing this is expected, by reason of the excellent line of stoves they manufacture. If their hopes in this way are realized, the company will next year start out with increased accommodation and a force of 100 or 125 men, and then they will push business still more vigorously.
ARTICLES MANUFACTURED.
About 80 new styles and sizes of stoves have been prepared for this year's trade, which include some marked improvements. A patent has been applied for on a new cook stove, for either coal or wood, with ventilating oven. This stove is superior to all others on the market to-day. By it beef or fowl can be roasted without basting, while the juice of the meat will be preserved. As a test, place two pieces of meat, of equal quantity, one in the oven of a common stove and the other in the oven of the above-mentioned one, and it will be found that after being roasted, the one in the common stove has lost considerably in weight, consequent on the evaporation of its juice, while the one in the patent ventilating oven will be found but slightly decreased and as rich and juicy as ever. Besides, the ventilated oven does away with any risk arising from gases. Three new coal and wood stoves are at present being designed for the Peterborough company by American inventors, which will, it is confidently expected, lead the market. A full line of the stoves manufactured by this company are constantly on exhibition at Messrs. Breese & Bain's warerooms. It is purposed opening a branch store in Toronto by the first of June, 1887, at the very latest, while negotiations are going on for the establishment of a wholesale branch house in Winnipeg, Manitoba, to which stoves will be shipped by the carload.
IMPROVEMENTS.
When the EXAMINER representative drew near the works, his senses were assailed by the clanking of hammers, the hissing of steam, and an incessant hum of busy life and activity, while the tall chimneys were belching forth fire and smoke in immense volumes. The present management are pushing the Works to their utmost capacity, but will be obliged to increase the accommodation. As soon as spring opens several large additions will be built. The eastern end of the main building will be extended to the Midland railway track. It will be of brick, 42x50 feet, two storey, to correspond with the original to which it will be joined, and will be used principally for mounting on the lower flat and storage above. This extension will allow of cars being loaded directly from the store-room. Besides this, the moulding shop, which is at present 65x65 feet, will be increased to the size of 95x65.
Under the new regime the Stove Works have been considerably increased in output and capacity, and with a fair amount of encouragement, such as the class of goods they manufacture warrants the company in confidently expecting, the Peterborough Stove and Furnace Company will still further expand. The corporation is a credit to the town, and to Ontario, and the managers are to be congratulated on the great success attendant upon their efforts.

THE CZAR ESCAPES.
SOME LADIES STUDENTS AWAIT HIM IN THE STREET.
ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—The Official Messenger publishes the following: On Sunday last, at 11 o'clock in the morning, three students of St. Petersburg University were arrested on Newski Prospect, having in their possession bombs. The prisoners admitted that they belonged to a secret criminal society. The bombs found on them were charged with dynamite. Each bomb was arranged to throw eleven balls, and all these balls were filled with strychnine.
His Imperial Majesty Wept.
LONDON, March 16.—On Sunday morning the Czar had no suspicion of any danger whatever. He had been congratulated by Gen. Gresser upon his continued safety. The story that a bomb was thrown beneath the Czar's carriage appears to have emanated from Vienna. The Czar cried on hearing of the danger which he had escaped. He did not learn the particulars until he arrived at the Gatschina Palace.
The persons arrested in connection with the constitutional plot indignantly deny that they are in any way connected with the outrage, and repudiate any idea of conspiracy. Their motto is, they say: "The people; with the Czar or against the Czar." They have published a lithographic periodical, composed mainly of extracts from the works of notable writers, on constitutional law and political economy. The statutes of the society obliged all the members to join at the signal of their chief, in doing their utmost to subvert the existing government and establish a constitutional government.
A Gloomy View.
BERLIN, March 16.—The Post takes a gloomy view of the plot to assassinate the Czar and says: "With terror and regret we say that Europe must prepare to see Russia adopt a policy of despair, taking shape either in fatalistic resignation or frantic adventures. The latter is the more probable. It will require a superhuman effort on the part of the Czar to oppose the tempest of voices calling for war as a remedy for Russia's woes."
Another Account.
LONDON, March 16.—A despatch from St. Petersburg to the Daily News says: "While the Czar was returning from the requiem services in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, a bomb attached to a cord was thrown in his direction. The intention was to tighten the string, which was in connection with mechanism, and this exploded the bomb, but before it could be executed the criminal and a suspected accomplice were seized. It was found they lived together in a lodging house in a suburb of the city. The police visited this house and discovered a quantity of explosives and a number of revolutionary pamphlets. Over 200 persons already have been arrested in connection with the affair, and domiciliary visits are being made throughout the city."
A Woman Among the Accused.
LONDON, March 16.—A despatch from St. Petersburg to the Standard says that one of the six students arrested in connection with the plot carried a hollow book, containing a bottle filled with dynamite and poisoned bullets. Others had parcels and bags containing bombs. A woman was arrested who had a bomb concealed in her muff. The would-be assassin is of short stature, and refuses to reply to any questions.
The Plot Very Extensive.
VIENNA, March 16.—It has been ascertained that the recently discovered conspiracy of Russian land owners and tradesmen to overthrow the Czar's Government was very extensive, and included a number of military officers, and that it was chiefly on this ground that the Czar was averse to embarking in war.
Congratulated on His Escape.
LONDON, March 16.—Baron De Staal, Russian Ambassador, has received from all the diplomats in London and from Prime Minister Salisbury expressions of congratulation on the Czar's escape from assassination last Sunday and of horror over the plot against his life.
Twenty Females Arrested.
LONDON, March 16.—A despatch from St Petersburg says two of the six persons arrested on the Newski Prospect are quite young and that two others appear to belong to the peasant class. All six carried poisons and it is presumed they intended to commit suicide in the event of arrest. Twenty female students of the Bestwcheff institute are among those arrested in connection with the plot.
Royalty's Regrets.
LONDON, March 16.—Queen Victoria has sent a telegram to the Czar congratulating him on his escape. The Prince of Wales visited the Russian Ambassador to-day and expressed the grief of himself and the Princess of Wales that such an attempt had been made upon the life of the Czar and offered their congratulations upon the Czar's escape.
Emperor William Favors Peace.
BERLIN, March 16.—It is reported that Emperor William on receiving the French general, the Marquis D'Abzac, said: "Tell your compatriots that there is no danger of war. So long as I live I shall use all my influence to maintain peace. God will soon call me to himself. I do not wish to leave my people a heritage of blood. Germany shares my desire for good relations with France."
Germany's New Battalions.
BERLIN, March 16.—A bulletin issued by the War Minister disposes of the new battalions formed by the Army Bill. According to this order two battalions will be continued at Moulhouse, three at Cologne and one each at Rastadt, New Brisach, Hanau, Cassel, Munster, Dusseldorf, Aachen, Goerlitz, Strasburg and Inowrazlaw.
A French Tragedy.
TOULON, March 16.—To-day M. Aubergal, the conductor of the orchestra at the Grand Theatre, quarrelled with his mistress, an actress named Lery, and shot her dead just as she was buying a ticket at the railway station preparatory to leaving the city. The murderer then threw himself beneath a passing train and was crushed to death.
The Regents Prepare for Trouble.
BUCHAREST, March 16.—The Bulgarian regents, fearing an outbreak of hostilities, have divided Bulgaria into two military zones, and appointed a commander for each zone with virtually absolute powers. Tirnova has been fortified and garrisoned, and the Varna and Bourgas shore defences have been strengthened with artillery.
The Striking Belgian Miners.
BRUSSELS, March 16.—The strike inaugurated by the miners at Wens is spreading to Seignies. The men are greatly excited and an outbreak is feared. Extra troops have been despatched to the scene.

THE CELTIC QUESTION
THE ENGLISH DO NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH HIM.
DUBLIN, March 16.—In the Bankruptcy Court to-day Father Keller of Youghal, County Cork, was called to testify respecting his action as trustee under the Plan of Campaign. He was absent. Testimony was then given that a summons to appear had been served on the priest, that he refused to receive it and that Mr. Harrington, who was present, took the summons and threw it out of the window.
At the Hanlon inquest at Youghal to-day, Mr. Harrington asked the Inspector of Police if a statement made in the House of Commons last evening by Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, that twenty-one out of the twenty-two policemen engaged in the work of serving the first summons on Father Keller were injured in the riot which resulted was true. The inspector replied that but three of the policemen were injured. He added that it was not he that supplied Mr. Balfour with the report, but Capt. Plunkett, the Magistrate. Witness was unable to say whether he had reported to Capt. Plunkett that twenty-one policemen had been injured, but he swore that Mr. Balfour's statement was untrue.
Parnell's Line of Action.
LONDON, March 16.—Mr. Parnell will oppose any Irish land purchase bill based upon the existing judicial rents, which, it is generally admitted, are at least 25 per cent. too high. During the Easter recess Mr. Parnell will abstain from political work.
Trevelyan Favors Conciliation.
LONDON, March 16.—Sir G. O. Trevelyan, speaking at Liskeard this evening, said his position as regards Ireland had not changed. He hoped, however, that a basis of agreement would yet be found by conciliatory methods. The Liberals were all agreed upon a general policy and desired a similar agreement with reference to Ireland. He repeated that the Gladstone bills were dead and buried, and could be ignored. He believed there was very little real difference between Lord Hartington's conditions for the settlement of the Irish question and those which Mr. Gladstone enunciated in Parliament; but the latter, the Unionists thought, were not sufficiently embodied in Mr. Gladstone's bills. He never expected that the leaders who had been separated from the Liberal party by their objection to Gladstone bills would return to that party unless their objections were definitely met, but he certainly believed it possible to reconcile the differences and to deal with the Irish question in a manner more thorough than the half-hearted style of the Conservatives.

THE DEDHAM TRAGEDY.
Many So Badly Injured That Their Death May Be Looked For at Any Time.
BOSTON, March 16.—A number of victims of the Forest Hill accident were buried from Roslindale, Dedham and West Roxbury to-day. There are many who are seriously if not fatally injured in Roslindale, whose death at any moment may be looked for, and the probability is that the dead will number over thirty. Some of the injured are so badly shaken up and internally injured that their recovery will be a matter of months.
The Pope Congratulates Williams.
ROME, March 16.—The Pope has sent a letter to Emperor William congratulating him upon the 90th anniversary of his birthday, adding that as the conditions of the Papacy do not permit the sending of a special representative, the Pope hopes that his sincere good wishes will be equally acceptable.
Self-Murder at Windsor.
WINDSOR, March 16.—Last evening, about 9 o'clock, John McNish, carpenter and builder, aged 65, committed suicide. About the hour named McNish seems to have experienced a fit of temporary insanity. He arose, secured his razor, and with one desperate stroke severed the muscles, windpipe, jugular vein and chief artery of the throat, expiring in a few minutes. His aged wife, who no doubt witnessed the act, was so overcome that she lay in hysterics for several hours.
An Essex County Reeve Unseated.
WINDSOR, March 16.—Thomas White and H. E. Cunningham ran for Reeve in Anderdon Township, Essex County, last January. White was elected, but his opponent brought a charge of bribery against him, and the case was tried before Judge Horne one month ago. The principal charge against White was that just before election day he paid a voter $5 to drive his mother to his brother's house. Judge Horne yesterday decided against White, and a new election will be held.
Kansas Women Determined to Vote.
LEAVENWORTH, Kas., March 16.—During the last two days over 1000 of the leading women have registered and will vote under the recent law granting municipal suffrage to women. Mrs. Helen M. Gougar of Indiana is here doing herculean work. She is paying special attention to organizing colored women and has aroused great enthusiasm. Meetings of the law and order party are being held every afternoon and evening. The whisky alliance is also fully organized and at work. The spring election will therefore be hotly contested.
A C.P.R. Baggageman Killed.
OTTAWA, March 16.—Wallace Veitch, baggageman on the C.P.R. local train from Montreal to the city, was killed at 10.30 to-night. Just as the train was arriving at the station the baggage car ran off the track and Veitch, who was inside, opened the door to jump out. Just as he jumped the car overturned, falling on him and crushing him into a shapeless mass. He was aged about 22. His father, Wm. Veitch, is a conductor on the road.
A New Election in East Bruce.
WALKERTON, March 16.—Mr. Cargill, the member elect for East Bruce, has resigned on account of the flaw in connection with the postmastership of the village of Cargill. The returning officer has issued his proclamation calling for the nomination of candidates on March 26. If Mr. Carg ll is opposed the election will be on April 2, but so far there is no opponent in the field.
Lawrence Barrett's Symbolics.
MILWAUKEE, March 16.—Lawrence Barrett says, in regard to the suit of Henry Gillig, of the American Exchange in London, that on his European tour in 1884, which was generally thought to have been very successful financially, he was obliged to borrow money of the Exchange. He says the Exchange is now trying to collect thirty-five per cent. interest, and that suit was brought in an irregular way with the notion that he would rather submit than make public the facts.
Another Bridge Accident.
MARIETTA, O., March 16.—The engine and tender of the eastbound morning train on the Marietta, Columbus and Northern Railroad went through the Vincent trestle, twelve miles from Marietta. The engineer and fireman were killed, and the conductor and brakeman badly hurt. M. Early, a passenger, had his legs crushed.
An Italian General Disgraced.
ROME, March 16.—The Italian Government has recalled Gen. Gene, the commander of the Italians at Massowah.

THE PROGRESS OF THE AGE.

In a somewhat remarkable article on Tennyson's Locksley Hall, Mr. Gladstone has once more exhibited that marvellous versatility which enables him to turn at will from one topic to another, and which does not allow him to be to engrossed even by the most momentous projects, as to leave no room for the charms of lighter literature.

He has criticised his poet-friend's productions in no unkind or ungenerous spirit, as we can well imagine, and he has shown his wonderful mastery over language by the use of those copious and incisive sentences and felicitous phrases for which he has ever been noted. In his description of the new poem he says it possesses tone and fibre, and though admitting the vitality of the poet is stinted by age, he adds "this stinted vitality can strike like a spent cannon ball."

He considers the poem to be essentially dramatic. It is not a confession of political or social faith, but simply a presentation of the altered views which the lapse of sixty years has brought in the imaginary hero of the two poems on Locksley Hall. Mr. Gladstone examines critically the sixty years between the date of these poems in order to ascertain which of the two pictures has the larger share of truth.

They are pictures of anticipation and retrospect. The young prophet in the first Locksley Hall looked forward with the sanguine hopes of youth, to a golden age which was already opening on the earth. The old prophet on the other hand, occupies a great part of his poem in picturing the social horrors of the last half century. They are thus summarized by Mr. Gladstone:—

"It is well to be reminded," he writes, and in tones such as make the deaf man hear, of city children who 'soak and blacken soul and senses in city slime';—of maidens cast by thousands on the street; of the sempstress scrimped of her daily bread; of dwellings miserably crowded; of fever as the result; even of 'incest in the warrens of the poor'."

This pregnant sentence tempts the critic to enumerate the good and ill which can be credited to the last 60 years, showing, too, that the evils are in process of amending and that the world is improving. It is because we believe there are few who have had so vast an experience or such unrivalled opportunities of forming a correct judgement on this matter, that we refer to his clever summary of events in the Victorian half century.

His list is confessedly incomplete, as he excludes from topics of large influence and also of disputable character—viz., literature, research, science and morals. Still there is much to learn from it. Practically he nearly confines himself to the sphere of legislation. In this direction he mentions as improvements, the abolition of slavery, the reform of the criminal code, the new poor-laws, the legalising of the operations of trades' unions, the protection of life and limb by the statutes which fix liability on the employers, the limitation and regulation of labor in mines, factories and elsewhere, the diminution of smuggling and poaching by improvement in the customs and game laws, and the universal education of the people. The cheapening of postage and of the press, the various conveniens and safe forms of saving, free trade, the extension of the franchise, together with the security of the ballot, and the fuller admission of women to the rights of property and labour, are among other benefits which he specifies.

To the working population the advantages of past legislation are undeniable. Mr. Giffen estimates it at 50 per cent., and Mr. Gladstone says truly they now work fewer hours, for these reduced hours they receive increased wages, and with these increased wages they purchase at diminished rates almost every article, except tobacco and spirits, of which the price can be affected by the Acts of the legislature.

Among other improvements, Mr. Gladstone names the removal of the disabilities which pressed hard upon non-conformists, the practical disappearance of duelling and swearing from society, the diminution of drunkenness, the increase of commerce, the enormous augmentation of wealth, the changes in the government of the colonies, and the lessening of crime.

He concludes by saying that the public conscience has grown more tender, that we live in a gentler time, "that upon the whole, the race has been reaping and not scattering; earning and not wasting; and that without its being said that the old prophet is wrong, it may be said that the young prophet was unquestionably right."

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

To-day every Irishman throughout the world is keeping his native land green in memory by the celebration of the anniversary of its patron saint. To all thinking Irishmen this anniversary is commemorated more in the manner of a funeral anniversary than as an occasion of jubilation and rejoicing. Though he remembers with loving fervour the dear old land and cherishes with fondness its grand traditions, yet over all hangs the sombre pall of mourning, on account of the troubled and oppressed condition of Ireland. Still is denied to Ireland, an integral part of Great Britain, the representative rights which are accorded to the meanest colony of the empire; still the hand of the oppressor is at the throat of Ireland; still the grasping landlord grinds the last penny of rent out of the unfortunate tenant, snaring nothing for the starving family. The stone-for-bread policy of coercion is applied with all possible vigour, and, in every way, the present Tory government of Great Britain, is carrying out the spirit of the principle of answering Ireland's demands for justice with the cruel argument of the Cudgel. It is clear that Ireland can hope for nothing from Toryism; it is only to the triumph of Liberal principles that that unhappy land can look for justice and right, and that Irishmen will best display his love for his native land and his desire to see her oppressors dressed who finds his aid to the promotion of the principles of Liberalism, in every land, from which a moral influence, capable of having a bearing upon the settlement of the Irish problem, can emanate. That Irishmen who ally himself with the Tory party, allies himself with the hereditary foe of Irish liberty, the champion of Irish oppression, and in effect if not in intent, acts the traitor to the cause of the Emerald Isle. An Irish Tory is a contradiction of terms.

HAMILTON seems to have grave doubts of the bona fides of Toronto's offer to provide $200,000 for the erection of new buildings for Victoria College in the latter city. The Times thus delivers itself on the subject:—"Those Toronto Methodists had better toe the mark and put up their $200,000 for the College, or the General Conference will have to meet again and treat with a city which puts up money instead of wind. Hamilton is a better place for the Methodist College than Toronto. One citizen offers to give $50,000 in cash, and there are plenty of others willing to chip in for the establishment of the College in Hamilton. Mr. John Macdonald and Mr. George A. Cox promised their subscriptions of $25,000 and $20,000 unconditionally. The College scheme would go all right in Hamilton, and the Conference certainly made a mistake in selecting Toronto for its location."

The Campbellford Curlers play here today (Wednesday).

The last carnival of the season which came off last week was a great success, taking in about $40.00 The rink was well lighted and beautifully decorated with a variety of flags and appropriate mottoes, while the life and good humour which characterised the whole affair caused the time to fly most pleasantly.

The various races were contested most valiently and even the losers acquitted themselves with much credit. The judges were Miss Read, Miss Campbell and Jas. Wier. Below is a list of costumes and characters.

For ladies, Miss Lang took first prize, a neat dressing mirror; and Miss Edith Massie second, a handsome parlor lamp.

The little girls' prizes went, first to Mina Hope, second to Bella Campbell.

D. McIntyre won the gentlemen's half-mile race, and M. M. McIntyre the boys' quarter-mile race, and also the barrel race; E. Loucie carried off the potato race.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 50,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about its sample bottles to try, only 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and dealers, in the United States and Canada. eodw6

IRISH.

NEW YORK, March 16.—A despatch to the World from Rome says the American Cardinals held another reception in the Palace of the Propaganda yesterday, and the attendance was very large. At the reception of the last French Cardinal recently elevated to the purple, which was also held yesterday, ladies were denied admittance, as it is contrary to all such precedents. The fair sex, however, were again admitted to the reception of the American Cardinals, in deference to the wishes of Cardinal Gibbons, who insisted that it was an American custom, and that as he was an American their presence was desirable. The rule was therefore set aside for the time being, and the Cardinal's gallantry was rewarded by a perfect confluence of ladies, who swarmed about him and vied with each other in doing him honor.

Conferring the Hermits and Novices.

ROME, March 16.—Cardinal Pecci, the Pope's brother, received the new cardinals to-day and accompanied them to the throne room, where the Pope conferred upon them the mantle and crimson berettas. Cardinal Manella addressed the Pope, who replied. In the morning the Vatican messenger went to the residence of Cardinals Gibbons and Taschereau, and other members of the Sacred College, to notify them that a public consistory would be held to-morrow.

Re. McGlynn's Case.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The correspondence between Cardinal Simeoni and Archbishop Corrigan in relation to the McGlynn matter is still in progress. Persons who have access to the Vatican asserted yesterday that Mr. McGlynn would not come to Rome, and that Cardinal Gibbons will not suppose his cause before the Vatican. Should this prove true the doctor's excommunication is not unlikely to follow soon.

FROM AN AMERICAN SOURCE.

A Report That Canada Proposes a Fisheries Commission.

NEW YORK, March 16.—An Ottawa despatch says the Canadian Government eight weeks ago forwarded to the Colonial Office in London a proposition which, it was suggested, should be sent to the United States Secretary of State by the English authorities, suggesting a modus vivendi for the settlement of all differences between the British North American possessions and the United States. It is suggested that in order to settle all difficulties Canada submits that Great Britain should at once propose to the United States the settlement of all questions without reserve, by the appointment of a commission to consist as follows: One delegate to be named by the Governor and Council of Canada; one from Newfoundland by and with the consent of Great Britain; two from the United States, and one from some independent European power. With such a commission, it is said, all questions could be satisfactorily adjusted. It is understood Germany is the power which Canada would prefer as referee.

THE CHOLERA IN SOUTH AMERICA.

Merchandise from the Infected District Admitted Without Question.

NEW YORK, March 16.—The Tribune says: In spite of the fact that cholera had been raging in the Argentine Republic since last November, merchandise from the River Platte and Chili has been steadily brought into this port and distributed over the country in a thousand different directions, with no attempt at precaution on the part of the quarantine officials. Now that the winter is over and such safeguard as frost gives can be depended upon for only a short time longer, shipping brokers, customs officials, longshoremen and others who are brought into direct personal contact with the merchandise from the cholera-infected countries, are alarmed over the inaction of the health officials. Even some of the importers who own the merchandise, but who do not run the risk of handling it, are feeling a lively interest in the question whether there is to be a quarantine established here this summer against the products of the River Platte. It is said some of the brokers whose business it is to handle and inspect the stuff for the importers have refused to perform this duty.

Great Floods in Dakota.

BISMARCK, Dakota, March 16.—The Northern Pacific train from the West was delayed seventy hours by the flood. It reached here last evening. Reports indicate that the Missouri must break within a week, and there is great alarm among the people living along the banks. Thirty bridges on the Northern Pacific, between this point and Billings, have been swept away. Much other damage has been done. Miles City is under water. At Medora the water surrounded the extensive slaughter-houses and refrigerators of the Marquis De Mores. Never in the history of the country has there been so much snow. The water is now pouring into the Missouri in immense torrents and every creek is swelled to the proportions of a river.

The Journey of Two Canadian Girls.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 16.—Two children wandered into Windom, Minn., Sunday evening and gave their names as Charlie and Bertie Byers of Rochester, N.Y. Yesterday it was discovered that they are girls (named Lily Davey and Kate Lesker, aged 14 and 16 years. They were born in Lindsay, Ont., and on the death of their parents were taken to Rochester by their brother, W. A. Byers of Calgary, Northwest Territory. Wearying of eastern life, they started without money to join their brother. After several vain attempts to get away they exchanged their attire for that of boys. They traveled on foot or in box cars with tramps, encountered all imaginable dangers, and finally wandered into Windom Depot. Their friends have been notified.

SUN LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA.

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 8th, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,120.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the great depth of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which from the very nature of the case it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As one of your board of directors, a warm friend and policy holder in your Company, you have every facility for the settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and considerate manner in which you have dealt me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance, with six per cent. per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $22,120.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claim.

TO DEPOSITORS—Deposits are received by this Company both on current account and for periods of one year or longer. The rate of interest on amounts deposited on current account and which may be withdrawn by cheque at any time, the depositor may from time to time require, is FOUR per cent., when paid or compounded half-yearly, and the rate on yearly deposits is FIVE per cent.

TO INVESTORS—The five and ten year FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES of this Company which are issued in denominations of $100 and $500 each, transferable by endorsement, with half-yearly interest [illegible] at the Head Office of the Company in Peterborough, or at any Branch Office in Toronto, afford a safe and convenient mode of investment.

The funds of the Company being invested in first mortgages on Real Estate, or better class security, no effort to collect or delay in payment is likely to occur, and having a first claim or rare upon all the assets of the Company, the security upon which the Debentures are issued is ample, as the annual statement shows that the amount so invested was over $600,000, and at this security of total estate at least double that value.

By the laws of Ontario, Trustees, Executors and Administrators may deposit Trust Funds of the estates which they control in this Company, and are free from all further liability, a privilege of which many have largely availed themselves.

TO BORROWERS—Money is obtainable from this Company on approved Real Estate security at the lowest [illegible] of interest.

The Mortgage may be repaid by yearly instalments, or otherwise as may be agreed upon, the interest ceasing at once on all amounts paid on account of the same borrowed.

Where Are The Cattle.

The cattle-growers who graze their herds on the northern ranges have kept the fact of their being engaged in that business so constantly before the public that they have created the impression that the larger portion of the cattle in the country graze on the arid plains or in the Rocky Mountain valleys and parks. This is a mistake.

Given a country where corn thrives, there will be found cattle and hogs in large numbers. All intelligent agriculturists know that the Mississippi Valley is divided into great belts of land, each distinguished by some marked peculiarity of soil and climate that determines the use to which it is devoted. The upper Mississippi is wheat land; the lower, upper, corn land; the upper, lower, cotton land; and the lower, so-called sugar-land. It is true that corn can be raised in the wheat and in the cotton belt, and even in the sugar belt, but it is not seen as the western corn-growers use the word. The corn belt proper includes Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, and eastern Kansas and Nebraska. Portions of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, and Tennessee properly belong in this belt. But in use the first division for convenience of illustration. Where corn grows to perfection there is always plenty of feed for cattle. Millet will grow and yield bountiful crops throughout the region. The same is true of oats, and wheat, though not a sure crop in the corn belt, is extensively sown.

In 1870 there were 22,501,337 domestic horned cattle in the United States. In 1880 the census shows that there were 34,931,670 cattle in the country—an increase of 12,430,333 during the decade. Of this increase 5,022,968 were in the five corn states of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska. When the last census was taken, more than one-fourth of the cattle in the country were in those States. In 1880 our production of corn was 1,754,591,676 bushels. The five corn States produced 1,071,344 bushels—more than half the crop. It is plainly seen that where the land yields large crops of corn, there the cattle naturally gravitate.

In 1880 there were, in all that extensive area composed of Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, 3,796,362 cattle, or 598,714 less than there were in Illinois, and but 361,976 more than there were in the young State of Kansas. New York, which is never spoken of as a cattle-growing State, contained in 1880, 2,809,068 cattle—613,826 more than grazed on the whole of the arid belt, the much vaunted grazing grounds of the West. In my opinion the census of 1890 will show that there will be more cattle in the three corn-growing States of Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri than in the entire plain region, excepting Texas, of course. And there will not be as much acute suffering, nor as many miserable deaths from starvation and cold, in the three States as there will be among the cattle existing through the winter in a single county in the so-called cattle country.

In 1880 there were 3,994,702 cattle in Texas. The Texas cattle men so thoroughly understand their business, and the State is so well adapted to raising cattle, that nothing need be said of them on their lands. All Texas cattle-growers realize that they must not overstock their range, now fully stocked. Those at all familiar with Texas know that as long as grass grows and water runs that State can be relied upon to supply from 750,000 to 1,000,000 cattle annually; cows can raise calves on the Texas ranges and live, and the same is true of New Mexico and Arizona and portions of the Indian Territory.—Frank Wilkeson, in Harper's Magazine for April.

Gen. Longstreet, now a silver-haired veteran, went to see how he was represented in the cyclorama of the second battle of Bull Run in Washington the other day. He was portrayed, with locks much blacker than he wears now, in a group of officers around Gen. Lee. Being asked his opinion of the scene, he said: "Well, it seems to be about all here except the run."

A Layman's Services.

Rev. Dr. S., who is a prominent divine in a city not far from New York, had been spending a few days on an island on the Maine coast, and, intending to depart on a certain morning, he started for the boat in company with a friend. A porter followed with the doctor's valise. Arriving at the wharf, they found that to take advantage of the kind of tide, the boat had gone before the advertised time.

Not aware of the clerical character of the company, the porter swore several shocking oaths in quick succession.

"What do you think of that, doctor?" asked his friend.

"Well," said the doctor, slowly and impressively, "these are times when the services of a layman are indispensable."—Boston Record.

LOCAL NEWS.

Westwood Races.

The races billed to take place in Westwood came off as announced. The mild weather of the few days previous, however, rendered the use of the pond impracticable, says the Star, the intended course being flooded to the depth of over a foot with water. As a make-shift the road from Healy's corner to the foot of the hill near the churches was used, being a little under a mile. In the green race there were four entries to—

J. Graham's (Otonabee) Gray Billy.....1 1 1
W. Humphries' (Asphodel) Honest John.2 2 4
C. Mills' (Hastings) Black Mare.....3 3 3
M. Dewan, (Hastings).....4 4 2

For the open trot, three horses toed the line, as follows:—

J. Simpson's (Hastings) Lapidist Chief...1 1 1
W. Comstock's (Asphodel) Billy C.....2 2 2
C. McDonald's (Westwood) Colonel.....3 3 3

A matched race, the outcome of the foregoing, for $5 a side, and a purse of $10, made up by the spectators, then took place between Graham's "Gray Billy," of Otonabee, and Comstock's "Billy C.," of Asphodel, was won by the latter taking the second and third heats.

The judges were Jas. Miller, Keene; Geo. Lipsett, Peterborough; and C. Lancaster, of Hastings.

Who Stole the Girl?

The office cat, after a long rest, has been at her old tricks again, telling tales. She came around this morning and thus unburdened herself:—

A few evenings ago a party of young people visited a farmer's house in Otonabee and spent the evening there, departing in the wee sma' hours of the morning. Their host and hostess now accuse some of the young men of "kidnapping" their servant girl and several wool blankets which were missed immediately they left. Of course, the boys know nothing of either, but it makes them mad to ask, "Who stole the girl? It is safe to presume that the girl left of her own free will, and took along with her a few of her mistress' nice warm blankets as a sort of souvenir. She has not been seen since.

You know that two or three firemen now sleep in the fire hall so as to be on hand in case of a fire. A young man who recently took up his quarters there, and who had not yet become accustomed to the loud clanging of the town clock almost over his head, the other night was startled from his dreamy slumber by the frightful din of the civic time-piece striking 11. His fertile imagination, filled with weighty ideas of the responsibility of his position, and fully alive to the necessity for vigilance and activity, was at once impressed with the notion that the fire bell was ringing. He scrambled out of bed in a hurry and began quickly to dress. Not hearing any stir in the bedrooms of his comrades, he hobbled across to their doors, with only one pant leg on, to use their expression, and called loudly upon them to up and prepare for the fire. Just then the last of the eleven strokes died away, and as a dim realization of the case came to him, he retired considerably crestfallen. His comrades, though, "roast" him unmercifully.

Preparing for Summer Sports.

A meeting of the Cricket, Bicycle, Baseball, Lawn Tennis, Football, Snowshoe and Toboggan Clubs, forming the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association, will be held in the rooms over Mr. Stethem's hardware store on Thursday evening, 17th inst., at half-past seven o'clock, sharp, for the election of officers and striking the committees for the ensuing year. All interested in any of the above sports are requested to attend, as success depends on hearty co-operation.

A Fire Promptly Flowed.

Some workmen in Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stanger's carriage factory on going to work this morning a few minutes before seven o'clock, found the blacksmith shop full of smoke. No fire could at first be seen, but on the door being opened and a draft admitted, a blaze burst through the floor. They at once set to work to cut up the floor, and in a few minutes a hose reel was on hand and a stream of water playing upon the fire, which was extinguished in quick order. It seems that a defective forge was the cause of the blaze, which began under the floor and spread along until half the floor was a mass of smouldering fire beneath. It is thought that it was burning all night. The loss will be slight and is covered by insurance in the Royal and Citizen's companies.

If you have heard of anything new and have not seen it, look for it at Turnbull's, the great novelty house. The proprietors are now fitted with New Spring goods which he is pleased to show.

Uniformed Patriotics.

At a meeting of the members of Mount Hebron Encampment of Oddfellows Wednesday night in Mr. E. E. Henderson's office, it was unanimously decided to form a Canton Militant immediately, and a committee consisting of Messrs. J. D. Tully, A. MacFarlane, R. Nimmo, D. H. Moore, Dr. E. W. Bell and E. J. Lee, was appointed to make all necessary arrangements for the speedy organization and the purchase of uniforms. The uniforms in this country are admittedly the most elegant and gorgeous of any Society in America, and the citizens of Peterborough may expect to soon see a strong company of handsomely uniformed Patriotic Militants formed in town.

Curlers.

Curling, except in outside games, has been rather quiet of late, and very little progress has been made in the different local contests among the Peterborough curlers. The 12-point game has narrowed down to two draws, the opposites now being Messrs. E. B. Edwards and H. M. Allen, and Geo. Boucher and S. Clegg. The contest for the rink medal is away behind, and if it is to be completed this season it will have to be pushed. Outside games have greatly interfered with playing at home, but as the season is about over matches will be less frequent.

A Runaway Stopped.

Mr. Ed. Crowe, Auburn, left his horse standing in the yard for a few minutes this morning. A train came along and away went the horse. It ran down George street to London, where it was stopped by Mr. Chas. Bateman, none the worse for its escapade but for a few slight scratches.

Guy vs. Noble.

Two young men, Guy and Noble, became involved in a quarrel Sunday afternoon at a hotel. One called the other a "cur," for which cowardly insult he received a blow, and a fight ensued. Guy laid a charge of assault against Noble. The case was to have been tried this morning, but was enlarged till to-morrow.

Everybody is surprised and pleased at the quality of the 4 button Kid Glove Turnbull is selling at 50 cts. a pair. All the new gray shades in the popular Alexandre make now in stock.

Mass Meeting for Men.

The mass meeting for men in the Opera House on Saturday evening, to be conducted by Messrs. Hebdon, Stead and Dunnet, of Hamilton, is expected to attract a large number. They are said to be very good singers.

To Male Singers.

A large male choir is wanted by the Young Men's Christian Association to conduct the singing in the Opera House on Saturday evening. All willing to help are invited to meet on the stage half an hour before the meeting opens.

The Terrors of Tobogganing.

A little daughter of Mr. J. F. Denoistoun while tobogganing on Smithtown hill Wednesday night met with an accident which resulted in her receiving an ugly and painful gash in the knee joint. Dr. King is in attendance.

Ireland's Patron Saint.

Yesterday, St. Patrick's Day, dawned with the brightest sunlight that ever lit up the Emerald Isle. Every Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopalian, Catholic and Plymouth Brother in the land wore a sprig of shamrock or a favor of green ribbon, to indicate where he or his fathers first saw the Light.

At ten o'clock St. Peter's Cathedral was fairly well filled with worshippers to witness the services in commemoration of the day. The altar decorations had special reference to the day. Over the middle was placed a picture of Ireland's first bishop in his canonical robes framed with evergreens. This was flanked on either side by scrolls, bearing the words, "St. Patrick—Pray for Us." On the right side of the altar rested the banner of the Blessed Virgin, and on the left the banner of St. Patrick, bearing a large gilt harp wreathed with shamrock.

High mass was sung, Rev. Father Fayolle being celebrant, Rev. Father Conway deacon, and Rev. Father Rodhius sub-deacon.

THE SERMON.

Rev. Father the preacher began by stating his text, the last verse of the 67th Psalm—"God is wonderful in His Saints." God placed man in places in life prepared for them and this applied especially to His dealings with his saints. The strength and power of God had preserved Christianity in its infancy, showing how the Church had triumphed over all its persecutors. In the fourth century St. Patrick was taken captive and carried to Ireland when after years of severe study and preperation he was fitted for his great mission. The characteristic points in St. Patrick's character and the principles which he sought to instil into the Irish people were referred to. A virtue particulary practised and preached by St. Patrick was the doctrine of penance. He was never guilty of a mortal sin but he expiated his venal sins by rigorous penance and austerity. He was a man of great humility, arising from his knowlege of himself. Zeal for the salvation of souls of the people was another bright mark in St. Patrick's character. There never was a nation which received the Gospel as readily as Ireland—never a drop of martyr's blood stained the soil of Ireland during the introduction of Christianity. This was attributed to the higher moral nature of the Irish people. During St. Patrick's great sermon at Tara, he plucked a leaf of shamrock, to illustrate the doctrine of the Trinity. From this great gathering the Gospel spread to the remotest parts of Ireland with marvellous rapidity and unanimity. Reference was made to the doctrines St. Patrick insisted on the primacy of the Holy Apostolic See, and the duty of allegiance to the successor of St. Peter, the visible head of the church, and a result of his teaching was the fidelity of the Irish people to the Papal See. The high theological instincts of the Irish were shown by the fact that, never in the history of the church had an Irishman broached a heresy. St. Patrick also insisted on that earnest devotion to the Holy Mother, which to this day marks all Irishmen, and accounted for the fact that the Irish women were the purest on earth. Another of St. Patrick's particular doctrines congenial to the warm and sympathetic Irish nature, was their fidelity to their departed brethren, as connected with the doctrine of the middle state. The establishment of a great confidence between priest and people was another great aim of St. Patrick's ministry which was successfully accomplished. This confidence between the priest and people had preserved the faith as pure to-day as when St. Patrick preached at Tara's Hill. The Gospel preached by St. Patrick had raised, ennobled and elevated Ireland so that thousands flocked from every quarter of the globe to learn lessons of sanctity and science at her schools and shrines. The reverend father's earnest and eloquent address was amply and aptly illustrated by incidents, soul stirring or pathetic and was listened to with rapt attention. When, during the course of his address, the preacher referred with a voice broken with emotion to Rev. Bishop Jamot having occupied, the year previous, the same position he (Rev. Father Conway) occupied to-day, many of his auditors were moved to tears. The sermon was concluded by an impassioned appeal to the congregation for their prayers on behalf of Ireland—that the day of her enfranchisement might be hastened.

The musical service was suited to the occasion. Prof. Dennis presided at the organ and the various voluntaries he performed consisted of appropriate Irish melodies. At the conclusion of the sermon Miss Annie Dunn rendered the solo "St. Patrick's Day," the choir joining in as chorus.

Winter Wheat Prospects.

Farmers say that the winter wheat will suffer considerable injury from the great body of snow which has been so great that it has become condensed at the bottom by pressure from above and a thick coating of solid ice has formed. This will smother the wheat and inflict great injury upon it so that in connection with low prices the farmer has to look forward to a small yield of wheat. But no matter how low the price of wheat the price of Belleghem's furniture will be just as low and the yield and the quality will be kept up. Belleghem the Benefactor will be the epitaph upon a man who always fits his prices to suit the times with no alteration in the splendid quality, superb variety or general excellence of his goods.

RED HATS CONFERRED

ELABORATE CEREMONY AT THE ETERNAL CITY.

ROME, March 17.—A public consistory was held to-day in the Sala Regia. It began at 10.20 and concluded at noon. The procession was headed by the Consistorial Advocates, with attendants arrayed in crimson robes and ermine capes. They were followed by the Cross-bearers, Cameriers, Prelates, Bishops, Archbishops and Cardinals. Then came the Pope, who was borne on the sedia gestatoria, flanked with flabelli or white peacock feather fans. He was accompanied on each side by Noble Guards in blue, the Swiss Guard Officers and purple and crimson robed attendants. When the Pope descended from the sedia he ascended the throne, which had been covered with purple cloth and cloth of gold for the lenten season. The canopy over the throne was backed by a tapestry of Perino del Vaga, depicting Faith, Hope and Charity. At the base of the throne were two lions couchant, bearing red banners with cross-keys. The cardinals occupied benches arranged in a long parallel ogram in front of the Pope. The Consistorial Advocates advanced to the throne and read the instance for the beatification of the persons under consideration. This concluded, sixteen cardinals left the hall to bring from the Sistine Chapel the eight new cardinals, viz., Archbishop Gonsales of Toledo; Mgr. Alois Massella, ex-Nuncio at Lisbon; Archbishop Taschereau of Quebec; Archbishop Gibbons of Baltimore; Archbishop Bernandon of Seno; Archbishop Placco of Rennes, Archbishop Langenieux of Rheims, and Archbishop Giordani of Ferrara. Each new cardinal was accompanied by two others. Cardinal Taschereau was accompanied by Cardinals Bonaparte and Pigliara, and Cardinal Gibbons by Cardinals Melchers and Moscasia. They proceeded and bowing thrice, kissed the Pope's foot and hand, received the Pope's double embrace and then retired. They again advanced to the Pope to receive the hat, which was brought in on a silver salver. Each Cardinal knelt as he came before the Pope, and the hood of the robe was placed over his head by an attendant. Then the Pope, taking the large red hat, placed it on the kneeling Cardinal, resting his hand on it, while he read the following words in a slow distinct voice:

"Ad laudem omnipotentis dei et sanctae Sedis Apostolica, ornamentum accipe Galerum rubrum insigne dignitatis cardinalitatus, per quod designatur quod usque ad mortem, et sanguinis effusionem, inclusive pro exaltatione sanctae fidei pace et quieti populi Christiani Augmento et statu Sanctae Romanae Ecclesiae te intrepidum exhibere debeas. In nomine patri, et filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Amen."

TRANSLATION.

["In praise of Omnipotent God and of the Holy Apostolic See, accept this red hat as a mark of the dignity of a Cardinal, by which is meant that till your death, and even to the shedding of blood, you shall show yourself intrepid in behalf of the exaltation of our Holy Faith; in behalf of the peace and rest of the Christian people and of the establishment of the Holy Roman Church. In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."]

The cardinals then made obeisance to the Pope, concluding with a double embrace or kiss of peace. The Pope received Cardinal Taschereau with marked affection. Cardinal Taschereau was calm, though he showed signs of great emotion. The cardinals then gave the kiss of peace to their colleagues of the sacred college. When Cardinal Gibbons came to Cardinal Mozzella, each offered the other hearty congratulations. Cardinal Mozzella was once a professor in the Jesuit's College at Woodstock, and is an old friend of Cardinal Gibbons. The Pope then departed, followed by his escort.

Crowds lined the Sala Ducale through which the procession passed. Finding no places in the Sala Regia the diplomats to the Holy See and their families occupied the large gallery and the Roman Princes and their families were in another gallery. There were also present Bishops Ireland, Keane and Watterson; Monsignor O'Brian, who was the alberace to Cardinal Taschereau; Monsignor Dillon of Australia; Lieut. Williams of the United States Army in uniform; the rectors and students of the American and Irish Propaganda; the rectors of the Scotch and English colleges and others.

A student read a Latin composition expressing joy over the promotion of the cardinals, and a Latin chorus praising them was sung.

Cardinal Taschereau responded in Latin, expressing his appreciation of the honour conferred upon him. Cardinal Gibbons spoke in English. He said the reception of the hat on St. Patrick's Day was a happy circumstance. He hoped that their work would be harmonious for the peace of mankind and the spread of the truth under the banner of the Cross. After the Consistory the new cardinals thanked the Pope, who, in his reply, referred chiefly to Canada and the United States, and especially to the new American College.

Cardinal Gibbons has been appointed to the following sacred congregations: Propaganda, Regular Discipline, Indulgences and Sacred Relics and studies. Cardinal Taschereau has been appointed to the following: Consistorial Bishops and Regulars, Ecclesiastical Immunities and Propaganda.

Monsignor Kirby, the Venerable Rector of the Irish College, gave a dinner this evening to Cardinals Gibbons and Taschereau, the secretary and rector of the Propaganda, Bishops Keane, Ireland and Watterson, and Archbishop Carr of Melbourne.

Cardinal Taschereau has adopted for his coat-of-arms a four-quartered shield. In the first and fourth quarters is a cross, and in the second and third quarters are crossed swords. Below is the inscription: "In Hoc Signo vi Christo Certamen."

The device chosen by Cardinal Gibbons is emblem of the Holy Ghost, surrounded above the inscription: "Exalta Tuum Dilectum."

A GIGANTIC SWINDLE IN NEW YORK.

A Banker in Fertilizers Absconds, Leaving Many Creditors Behind.

NEW YORK, March 17.—The Sheriff has seized the establishment of Walter E. Lawton at No. 21 Broadway, who did business under the name of Lawton Brothers, as fertilizers, under attachments on creditors' claims amounting to $345,000. It is charged that Lawton has absconded to defraud his creditors, and that he has disposed of his property and taken a large amount of money with him. Lawton was a director of the Delta Guano Company and was entrusted with $160,000 in notes to discount for the company. On March 15 Lawton is said to have absconded with the proceeds of the discounted notes. Rufus T. Kirkland, Lawton's cashier, states that on Wednesday Lawton withdrew all his funds from the bank and took the money with him. He destroyed all the stub checks and papers of every kind from which any information could be secured as to the disposition of the funds and property. J. D. Jones placed in Lawton's care on Tuesday, on behalf of the company, $12,000. This is also gone. Kirkland states that on Tuesday Lawton requested him to go with him to the officers of the Third National bank and introduce him. This he did. Lawton also asked him to obtain a blank warranty deed for the conveyance of real estate in New Jersey and to meet him at the New York Hotel. He met Lawton there with a blank deed, and both went to the Grand Central Depot. Lawton told Kirkland he intended to leave the city by train; that he had drawn out all money on deposit; that he was ruined; that he did not know what to do and that he would probably commit suicide. He left Kirkland to take a train.

The second attachment was issued at the instance of the Chemical Ammoniate and Oil Company, upon a similar claim. The company delivered to Lawton promissory notes of the value of $120,000 in trust to discount the notes and hold the proceeds for the company's benefit. In addition he received $6000 in money. He discounted the notes, kept the proceeds and also retained the money. The amount of Lawton's liabilities are estimated at about one million. The associates of W. E. Lawton look upon his disappearance as part of a gigantic swindle, and believe he sailed on one of Wednesday's steamers. He has a brother in Sussex, England, and it is supposed he has gone there. Several parties had put securities in his control and before his departure he converted every thing into cash and drew out all his bank accounts and got a boy to help remove four or five valises which seemed to be tightly filled. His credit was high and he was rated at over $1,000,000 by the commercial agencies.

THE PERILS OF RAILWAY TRAVEL.

Several Accidents in Which More or Less Injury Was Done.

GENEVA, N.Y., March 17.—As the New York Central passenger express was spinning long the curve approaching this station at 6 o'clock last evening, the engineer was horrified at seeing a freight train rushing up the same track to meet him. A moment later there was a crash. The two engines met in a powerful collision, losing their pilots and headlights and having their cabs crushed. The mail car, which was attached to the engine, was lifted from its trucks and carried before it the body of the tender with water tank, coal and engine, clear on the top of the boiler. The baggage car and all the coaches were uninjured, as well as their occupants. A box freight car was carried on top of two jim mies behind it. The following were injured: William Manning of Rochester, engineer of the express, and a compound fracture of the left leg and injuries about the head; Michael Moore of Rochester, fireman of the express, sprained wrist; Charles Osterhout of Syracuse, fireman of the freight, severe injury in the back; G. W. Smith of Rochester, mail agent, badly bruised about the arm and right leg; Fred A. Holmes of Babcock Hill, N.Y., badly cut about the head.

Surgeons were sent for, and the wounded were cared for by the Geneva station agent. The fire department came, too, but was not needed.

NOTE.—Osterhout referred to above played right field for the Toronto last season.

Fifteen Passengers Injured.

ELMIRA, N.Y., March 17.—At 4.50 o'clock last evening, two miles this side of Park Station, the Elmira, Northern & Cortland passenger train was wrecked. In the day coach and smoker were forty or fifty passengers. The coach struck a telegraph pole and was thrown. The smoker was turned upside down. The stove in the smoker set fire to the car and the clothes of some of the passengers were somewhat burned, but all were rescued and the fire put out. About fifteen persons were more or less injured, but none fatally. The baggage-car was stood on its forward end. The accident was caused by rails spreading. The passengers were brought to Elmira by special train last night.

PANIC AT A CHICAGO CHURCH.

The Steps Break Down Under the Crowd and Many are Injured.

CHICAGO, March 17.—A panic occurred at the Roman Catholic Church of the Nativity this afternoon. The church was completely crowded, and outside on the steps leading up to the church was a vast crowd unable to gain admittance. At once there was a sharp crack, followed by a grinding crash, and fully 200 men, women and children were precipitated ten feet, the entire platform having given way. Twenty-three persons in all received more or less serious injuries. Mrs. Kern, an aged woman, had her back broken, and P. O'Connor had both legs broken. Many people were injured by being trampled on about the head and otherwise badly bruised. The people inside the church were at first inclined to rush for the doors, but were calmed by the officiating priest.

Alleged Boodlers in Essex.

WINDSOR, March 17.—Windsor politicians of both parties were a good deal excited over the bribery examination held before Magistrate Bartlett yesterday. Norris Wingarden charges Israel Desjardines, a merchant of Stoney Point and Warden of the County of Essex, with bribery on election day. Wingarden says Desjardines offered him $25 if he would vote for Mr. Patterson, the Tory candidate. The Magistrate found there was sufficient evidence to hold Mr. Desjardines on a charge of attempting to bribe. He was held for trial at the Spring Assizes.

Singular Cause for Investigation.

BARABOO, Wis., March 17.—The general officers of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad are here investigating charges preferred by the road's employes against C. A. Swinefurd, Superintendent of the Madison division, Assistant Superintent R. A. Cohen and Chief Telegrapher W. A. Lawson. It is charged that these officials have been guilty of tyranny in efforts to enforce total abstinence from drinking among employes of the road. The feeling on both sides is intense.

The C. P. R. Blocked by Snow.

WINNIPEG, March 17.—The blockade on the Canadian Pacific Railway in the Rocky Mountains is complete, and there will be no through trains for a fortnight. The snow has blocked the tunnels, and "Mud Tunnel" has caved in. Passengers who went west two days ago have returned and gone south to reach the coast by the American lines.

LIEUT.-GOV. ROBINSON HONORED.

A Dinner and a Reception by the New York Canadian Club.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Hon. John B. Robinson was given a reception here to-night by the Canadian Club. Preceding the reception, Mr. Wiman, President of the club, gave an elegant dinner in his honor at the Hotel Brunswick. The other guests were the Reception Committee, as follows: T. W. Griffith, Gen. M. Fairchild, jr., Dr. Frank Ferguson, Jaenson Wallace, Arnold J. Gates, James McNider and Thomson Willing. Mr. John A. Fraser, the Canadian artist, now resident in Boston, was also a guest. The table was decorated in the most gorgeous manner with flowers and figures, and the dinner was in every way a most complete affair. The host and guests adjourned at 8.30 to the Canadian club, which is just around the corner from the hotel. There a very large number of New York's most prominent citizens had gathered, either as members of the club or invited guests. Among the letters received expressing regret at inability to be present was one from Abraham S. Hewitt, Mayor of New York. In regretting his absence, owing to ill-health, he says: "If Canada is prepared for absolute reciprocity with the United States, which necessarily means that the United States shall make the tariff for Canada, I should think that the real welfare of both Canada and the United States would be promoted; and I should regard such a policy as wise." Among those who made speeches were the Lieutenant-Governor and Erastus Wiman both of whom dwelt largely on the subject of the commercial relations between the United States and Canada. The utmost cordiality prevailed, and every one was delighted with the entertainment. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cawthra, and daughter of Toronto; Mr. Robert Hay, Thos. Swinyard, Geo. Musson, Rev. Mr. Spadding, Mr. Mulock, M. P., Baron Hugel, Grosvenor H. Lowry, John Patton and lady, Beverley Robinson jr., and Napier Robinson.

RAILWAY EXTENSION.

An Influential Meeting at Woodstock in Support of the B., W. and L. E. Line.

WOODSTOCK, March 17.—On the invitation of the Woodstock Board of Trade, representatives from the boards of trade and municipalities between Brantford and Lake Huron assembled here to-day to discuss railway extension between the Niagara frontier and Lake Huron. About 200 delegates were present, and the sentiment in favor of the proposed scheme was unanimous. Mr. John White, President of the Woodstock Board of Trade, occupied the chair, and after a full discussion a resolution was carried unanimously pledging those present to petition the Dominion Parliament to grant the charter applied for by the B. W. & L. E. Railway Company, and that Parliamentary representatives of the constituencies along the line of route be requested to support the petition and ask Government aid to the proposed road. The municipalities represented were: Brantford, Burford, Paris, Woodstock, Embro, West Zorra, East Nissouri, Kirkton, St. Marys, Zurich, Exeter, Mitchell, Seaforth, Clinton, Kincardine, Bayfield, Hay, Osborne, Blanstard and Goderich. The meeting was one of the most enthusiastic railway gatherings ever held in Ontario.

After running some distance one of the horses fell and broke one of his legs. Turner, when his loss became known, threw himself on the body of the beast and loudly bewailed his misfortune. The horse was valued at $180.

AN ABSURD RUMOUR.

The Tory papers are gleefully circulating the rumour that Hon. Edward Blake is about to resign the leadership of the Liberal party. The wish is plainly farther to the thought. Mr. Blake is a lion in their path of the Tory leaders and no matter what sinuous turns they take he still confronts them to thwart their unrighteous schemes. Therefore, it is no matter of surprise that they wish him removed from the position he now occupies The present Opposition in Parliament is a strong one per se, but with Mr. Blake to lead it, it will give no end of trouble to the ministerial party. In building any hopes on Mr. Blake's absence from the front ranks of the Opposition benches, they are hugging a delusion. That there is some ground for the rumour there is no doubt. The Globe thus comments on its origin :

"When a new Parliament is elected the Liberal members choose one of their men to lead them and voice their wishes in the House. We would therefore be much surprised if Mr. Blake did not take an opportunity, as we are informed he has always done, at or before the first caucus of the new House, to lay his withdrawal from the leadership before his friends and to request them to relieve him of his onerous position. We have no doubt that Mr. Meredith has done the same, as leader of his smaller following in the Ontario Assembly. The suggestion that any change in the Liberal leadership at Ottawa is contemplated as feasible by any one in his senses is simply absurd upon its face."

This simply means that, as a matter of form, Mr. Blake will submit his resignation to the Opposition caucus of the new House but that it will be accepted no one will believe, and that he will be re-elected leader of the Opposition no one doubts. The country cannot afford to lose Mr. Blake's assistance at the present critical juncture—cannot afford to remove the chief barrier to the present Ministerial party, having its own way in the matter of corruptly ruling the country. Hon. Mr. Blake may desire rest and retirement but he is too patriotic to desert the cause of his country when his country most needs his services.

THE NORTH-WEST ELECTIONS.

The result of the elections in the North-west Territories, so far as known, are in favor of the Government, and it is not probable that the full returns will affect the result. The outcome of these elections is what might have been expected, from the manner in which they were conducted—the employment of outrageous coercion and terrorism. Like all people living in a comparatively unsettled country, the North-westerners are largely dependent on Government favors, and the alternative was plainly put before the electors—to either support the Government candidates or have their claims ignored by the Government. Those asking for seed grain were told to vote Government or they would get no seed grain ; those having claims for compensation for rebellion losses were told that unless they voted right their claims would not be considered. The voting being open and the lists sent to Ottawa, the ministry would have the knowledge, as well as power, to make good their threats. Under the influence of terrorism, the people of the North-west voted, and the result was just as might have been expected. There is only the difference in method between the agents of the Government pursuing the course pursued and their holding a loaded pistol to the head of the voter, to induce him to vote according to Government dictation. What a shameful prostitution of the functions of responsible government!

VENTING HIS SPITE.

Sir John can never forgive Ontario for remaining Reform. This has been shown by his repeated attacks on the rights and material interests of this Province. It is also shown in the smallness of the grants given to the Ontario railways. For instance the following is the proportion in which twenty millions voted for railway grants within the past five years have been distributed :

Ontario	$ 3,238,000
Quebec	10,750,000
Nova Scotia	2,494,000
New Brunswick	3,476,000
	$30,011,000

By way of comment on this, the Hamilton Times remarks that "Ontario has nearly half the population of the Dominion and pays more than half of the taxes. Having built her own railways she is now compelled to pay for the railway needs in the other Provinces. Of course an Ontario Tory, who recognizes no other political issue than the N. P., will find no fault with this state of affairs. An office hunter or a timber limit grabber, such as many members of the late Dominion Parliament were, would vote to close all the schools in Ontario and throw open all the prisons, if Sir John Macdonald so directed. But the men of this Province who have sense enough to know that all wealth is produced by labor, honesty enough to desire nothing more than they fairly earn, and intelligence enough to understand that taxes are a burden even when sweetened by the name of protection, will be alarmed at the way Ontario has been treated. Confederation has certainly not been a boon to this Province. Ontario is rich enough to pay all her own necessary taxes and leave the people plenty to live upon. But to keep up a swarm of poor relations more numerous and far more clamorous than the family proper is too much of a task to be permanently pleasant."

THE EVILS AND MISERIES OF INTEMPERANCE.

SERMON BY LAYMAN.

(Written for The Examiner.)

No one can look upon the drunkard and his family without anger and pity. Anger against the man who has wasted his life and his substance in the use of strong drink, and pity for his wife and children who have thereby been doomed to suffering and poverty. And yet no one but themselves can realize the full extent of their misfortunes. No one but themselves can tell of their weary lives, of the loss of hope and of the dread future which lies before them. And yet how few there are who feel any sympathy for these poor, broken hearted, forsaken creatures. Oftentimes struggling on in hopes of better days, oftentimes trying hard to hide their troubles, oftentimes enduring in silence their lonely, miserable existence. The mother bowed down with grief and care and the children crying for bread. Oftentimes with threats and curses, and sometimes with blows, turned out into the cold and driven from the door, wandering with fear and trembling and passing the night as best they may, sometimes upon the highway and sometimes in some frail, unoccupied building, with thin and scanty clothing, not daring to return. And oftentimes subjected to the cruel remarks of thoughtless persons that they are a drunkard's wife and children. And how few there are to pity them. And yet their miserable condition arises from no fault of theirs. But the drunkard has no mercy. All his thoughts and desires are for that terrible poison which is fast consuming both soul and body. All his thoughts and desires are how he is to get more. He cares not for those whom he is bound by every law, human and divine, to protect, for the wife whom he once promised to love and to honour. He disregards their cries and their sufferings. And, if he can only get drink he is satisfied. Once upon a time, not many years ago, in one of the western states of the neighbouring republic, several men of standing were one dark stormy night drinking in a saloon. Presently the door opened and a woman in deep mourning, but thinly clad, entered the room and approached the bar where the men were standing. She was evidently a woman of refinement, though poor and feeble looking and bowed down with grief. Every one ceased talking and looked inquiringly and sympathetically upon the stranger. With as few words as possible she told them her past history. She told them to look at her and then think of their own wives and children and take warning before it was too late. She told them of her once happy, comfortable home, and how it had been made desolate through strong drink. She said her days in this world were few and were full of misery, but she wanted to warn them against the terrible fate of the person before them ere it was too late. The landlord, seeing the effect which her words would have upon those present, ordered her to leave the house. The men protested against this and they made up a large purse of money and handed it to the woman, and they one and all then and there declared that from that time forth they would never again touch the accursed thing. And they then left and went home, resolving henceforth to keep their wives and families from the terrible fate of the woman before them. Read the following, of the poor sick woman and child reduced, through strong drink and a drunken husband and father, to poverty and woe:—"I remember, one Sunday night in London, in particular. The sky was cloudless and the stars were bright, and so still was the great city in its busy haunts, methought I could hear them sing. On Westminster bridge I met a little waif and stray, scarce six years old. Her little frock was in tatters and her feet shoeless. Yet, as she stood on the water's edge, looking up at the stars, she seemed radiant with pleasure, and with the light of joy in her eyes, which made her wondrously beautiful, I was attracted by the quaint picture, and hearing the child laugh, walked over and questioned her. It was the first night in the "long, long time," she said, since she had seen the stars, and her mother had told her they sang sometimes, and, said the little waif, "I laughed because I thought I heard them now. My mother did not know I was going out, but I ran away to see the stars and hear them sing. You can't see them where we live, away 'in a big, black cellar.'" Need I feel shame to say that the tears ran down my cheeks as I listened to this little wanderer of the night, who, born of poverty and woe, and living, perhaps, in the lowest haunts of crime, yet found a wish in her young heart to leave the squalor and filth of the "big black cellar" to come out and listen to the voices of the watching stars. Had the mother told her of Bethlehem and the song whose glorious melody rang round the world? The bridge policeman knew her and said her mother was not long for this earth, but was fast dying from the effects of the "big black cellar's" dampness. The gold I slipped into her little cold hand made gladness for a time—at least in the wretched abode she soon ran back to, and I feel quite sure the prayer which my lips uttered, that "God would temper the wind to the poor shorn lamb," was carried straight to the foot of the throne." These are but mild examples of the evils and misery resulting from strong drink. Murders and robberies, truth violated, homes ruined and made desolate, families broken up and turned out upon the highway, sickness and poverty are some of the results of intemperance. The wife of the drunkard, broken hearted and desolate, the poor, famishing children, pinched with hunger and cold, all watching and listening with fear and trembling for the coming of their besotted husband and father, with scarce clothing to cover them and a hovel without furniture. These are some of the fruits of strong drink, and who can tell how many honest hearts and well meaning women and children have been driven by it to lives of shame and crime, with no one to guide and no one to cheer their wasted hopes. Nothing but dreariness and desolation, and broken hopes, and cries, and tears, where there might have been health and peace, and comfort and happiness.

A wee bit raggit laddie gange wan'rin through the s reet,
Wadin' mang the snaw wi' his wee hackit feet,
Shiverin' i' the cauld blast, greetin' wi' the pain;
Wha's the puir wee callan? he's a drunkard's raggit wean.

He stans at ilka door, an' he kocks wi' wistfu' e'e,
To see the crowd aroun' the fire a' laughin' loud wi' glee,
But he daurna venture ben, though his heart be e'er sae fain.
For he mauna play wi' ither bairns, the drunkard's raggit wean.

Oh! see the wee b t bairnie, his heart is uncon fou,
The sleet is blawin' cauld, an' he's droukit through and through,
He's speerin' for his mither, an' he wun'ers wiaur she's gane.
But oh! his mither she forgets her puir wee raggit wean.

He kens nae faither's love, an' he kens nae mither's care,
To soothe his wee bit sorrows, or kame his tautit hair,
To kiss him when he wauknes, or smooth his bed at e'en.
An' oh! he fears his faither's face, the drunkard's raggit wean.

Oh pity the wee laddie, nae guileless an nae young,
The sun dochna shine the gladest for 'ill mike on
An' sinfu' cheek 'ill his mither spatnkr his infant lips 'll stain,
For oh! there's nane to guide the bairn, the drunkard's raggit wean.

Then surely we micht try an' turn that sinfu mither's heart,
An' try to get his faither to act a faither's part,
An' mak them lea' the drunkard's cup, an' never taste again,
An' cherish wi' a parent's care, their puir wee raggit wean.

I once knew a man who had a wife and large family, who, when sober and in his right mind, was a good husband and father. He was given greatly to strong drink and when under its influences was a perfect demon. Often, when in that state, when coming home at night, he would pursue his wife and children and they, to save their lives, would fly to the woods and there, oftentimes in cold and rain, would remain all night, not daring to return. Through his dissipated habits he became blind and thus he suffered the penalty of his wickedness and folly. And he died an early death and was forgotten. I have seen little children crying on the roadside and trying to get their drunken father home. I have seen wife and children cold and hungry, with scarce clothing enough to cover them, reduced to their pitiable condition through the intemperance of the husband and father, who were once well off and happy with every good prospect before them. I have known young men, carefully educated and honestly trained, leave home to seek their fortunes in other places, with every encouragement and every prospect of success, yet go to ruin and shame through indulgence in strong drink, the family at home often speaking of them and hoping that they would come to no evil and would do well, and hoping one day to see them return honored and prosperous men. I have read of mothers murdered by their own sons through strong drink. And of whole families driven to ruin through the influence of strong drink. The presence of sickness and death has no effect upon the man given to strong drink and he will oftentimes take the last vestage of furniture or clothing and sell it to get money with which to satiate his brutal appetite, caring nothing for the sufferings and the cries and tears of those he leaves behind. Drink, drink, drink! That is all he cares for or thinks about. And yet some men foolishly say that there must be no prohibition, but simply moral suasion. As well might it be said the thief and the murderer should not be prevented from committing crime, but that it must and can be prevented by moral suasion alone. There must be no restrictive laws, but human nature must be influenced and controlled by moral suasion. Place the drink before the intemperate man, and tell him not to take it. As well might you ask the fire in a burning building to go out of its own accord, as to ask the drunkard voluntarily to quit.

Father, dear father, come home with me now.
The clock in the steeple strikes one,
You promised, dear father, that you would come home,
As soon as your day's work was done.
Our fire has gone out, our house is all dark,
And mother's been watching since tea,
With poor brother Henry so ill in her arms,
And no one to help her but me.

Come home, come home, come home,
Please father, dear father, come home.
Hear the sweet voice of the child
Which the night winds repeat as they roam;
Oh, who could resist this most plaintive of prayers,
Please father, dear father, come home.

Father, dear father, come home with me now
The clock in the steeple strikes two,
The night has grown colder, and Benny is worse,
But he has been calling for you.
Indeed, he is worse, ma says he will die,
Perhaps before morning shall dawn,
And this is the message she sent me to bring,
Come quickly or he will be gone.
Come home father, come home, &c.

Father, dear father, come home with me now,
The clock in the steeple strikes three,
The house is so lonely, the hours are so long,
For poor weeping mother and me
Yes, we are alone, poor Benny is dead,
And gone with the angels of light;
And those were the very last words that he said,
I want to kiss father good night.

Come home father, come home,
Please father, dear father come home.
Hear the sweet voice of the child
Which the night winds repeat as they roam;
Oh, who could resist this most plaintive of prayers,
Please father, dear father come home.

R. W. MUNCASTER.

A Grecian Bathing-Room.

Among the rooms which cluster about the megaron at Tiryns is one of quite unique interest. This is a small chamber—in size some ten feet by twelve—whereof the floor is formed of a single gigantic slab of stone weighing about twenty tons, and the walls were wainscoted with solid and close-fitting planks. A gully at the corner, evidently made for the exit of water, at once suggested that this was once a bathroom, and no other theory seems tenable. That Homer's heroes, like Greeks of later times, betook themselves to the baths before they went to dine in the hall is well known to all scholars, and here again excavation gives material confirmation to the poet's words. But it does more than confirm, it also explains. Homer speaks of the chiefs as repairing to the cuzesta asaminthoi, and the commentators have variously interpreted the phrase in the light rather of their own ingenuity than of comparative archæology. But a fragment of a large terra cotta vessel, evidently used in bathing, has come to light at Tiryns, proving beyond reasonable doubt that the bathing customs of the Homeric Greeks differed but little from those which the representations on vases show to have prevailed in historical times. In the midst of the floor of the bath-room was placed a large vessel full of warm water. In this, after laying aside his clothes, the bather sat, or over it he cowered, while a bathing man ladled over him the water, which, falling on the floor, ran away by the sink in a corner of the room. After the washing came rubbing and oiling. It is, however, to be observed that the place of the bathing man is in the Homeric descriptions supplied by a woman, sometimes even a high-born lady. At Pylos, Polycasta, youngest daughter of Nestor, bathes and dresses young Telemachus. Helen bathes Odysseus when he comes to Troy as a spy, and recognizes him in bath by personal marks, as does old Nurse Eurycleia at a later period. It seems to be a mark of the extreme modesty of the same hero that he declines to be bathed by the maidens of Nausica. Thus always, when we compare Homeric and later Hellenic customs, we find strong likenesses and sharp contrast, presenting to the historian and anthropologist one of the most fascinating of fields for study, a field which they can not as yet be said to have half occupied.—The Quarterly Review.

Literary Notes.

The first instalment of the collection of unpublished letters of Thackeray, to be published in Scribner's Magazine, will appear in the April number. The letters will be preceded by an introduction by Mrs. Brookfield, to whom most of them were written. They will be arranged in a simple chronological order, regardless of their relative importance, and will be accompanied by Mrs. Brookfield's and by other notes. In the arrangement of the letters, as well as in some additional annotation, the Editor has had the privilege of advice and assistance from Mr. James Russell Lowell, who kindly consented, with the cordial approval and thanks of Mrs. Brookfield, to give this aid in their preparation for the press. A brief note from Mrs. Ritchie to Mrs. Brookfield is also printed with the first instalment, expressing cordial pleasure in the knowledge of Mrs. Brookfield's intended publication.

The letters in the April number are about twenty, of varying length, written from 1847 to 1849—several of the longer ones from Paris, Brussels, and elsewhere on the Continent. It would be difficult to speak too strongly of the interest and value of the longer letters in this and the following instalments, and of the great importance of many to a true understanding of Thackeray's character. They are like reading a new and more than ever interesting story from the well-known pen; but one with an intimate personal character which no other could have. Everything in them is intensely characteristic of Thackeray; his humor pervades them all; they abound in shrewd comments on men and events, and contain many glimpses of his own opinions and beliefs on subjects of which he seldom spoke. They are especially notable for their references to his own work; and to characters who are now everybody's friends, and whom he mentions always as though they were relations.

Our Wealthy Men.

Much has been said in newspapers of men who have made large fortunes in comparatively a few years in various business industries. Many of these articles are written by correspondents of prominent newspapers, and copied into others of lesser note. Correspondents generally are seldom men of business qualifications and wrongfully picture these men and their business as a thing of accident: this is not the case with those we have met. We find that where men have made large fortunes by their own business talent and industry they chose with sagacity and forethought such business as would lead to success when handled with business judgment. No man has been brought before the public as an example of success, both in wealth and magnitude of his business (outside of stock and railroad men) more prominently than Dr. G. G. Green of Woodbury, N. J. He is at the head of many large business industries, and yet comparatively a young man. When the fact that August Flower, for dyspepsia and liver complaint, and Boschee's German Syrup, for cough and lung trouble, has grown to a wonderful sale in all parts of the world, it proves that it was not an accident or spontaneous strike at wealth. His medicines are recognized as valuable and established remedies and the business has grown gradually and permanently during the last eighteen years on account not alone of Dr. Green's abilities as a business man or his "good luck," but on the actual merits of the two preparations.—Copied from the N. Y. Weekly Sun, of Dec, 18, 1887. 1d1w

Doubly Benefited.

There is no one remedy known that has more curative power over dyspepsia and liver complaint than Burdock Blood Bitters. Chronic Neuralgia—Instantly Cured.

Market Place, Sussex Road, Eastbourne, Eng.

Up to five months ago, I have been subject to the most serious form of neuralgic attacks in the head and temples, which came on always once a week, and sometimes as often as once in four days. I had heard of St. Jacobs Oil, and most remarkable to say, in less than two hours from the time my wife rubbed the Oil on my temple, I was free from pain and able to attend to my business. But the most remarkable thing about it is, I have never had an attack of the neuralgia since.

LOCAL NEWS.

"Our Regiment."

Last evening E. A. McDowell's Comedy Company appeared at the opera house in a three-act comedy, "Our Regiment." There was a very large audience, and all seemed to enjoy the performance. The play is a very amusing one, which, if properly handled, will cause the most lugubrious person to laugh. The fun commenced when the curtain rose, and was maintained uninterruptedly until its close. The plot is briefly as follow: A regiment of lancers put up for a few days at the town of Mudborough, and the officers receive invitations to stay with different families. One of these, a Mr. Dobinson, received two officers, Lieut. Warrener and Capt. Featherstone. Mr. Dobinson has a daughter, Olive, and a niece, Enid Thurston, from Jamaica. The Lieutenant makes a dead set on the niece, who is an heiress and in love with the captain, who however, is deceived by her actions, and treats her with coldness. The play was mounted in first-class shape.

Mrs. McDowell was most enthusiastically applauded. She is a favorite here, and an artist of rare grace and culture. Her husband shared with her the honors of the evening.—Kingston (Ont.) British Whig, Oct. 23, 1886.

A Display of Curiosities.

A number of interesting relics, the property of Mr. Cornell, of Lindsay, were displayed on a table at the "At Home" in the George street church last night. There were two French parchments, official declarations, one dated 1688 with official seal attached, the other bearing the signature of Louis XIV. A Chinese New Testament, read backwards, was a great curiosity. There was a pair of bracelets taken from a Zulu warrior who was killed during the Kaffir war at the battle of Ulundi; a seed mat made by the natives of Barbadoes, and a couple of Chinese idols. These exhibits excited a great deal of curiosity.

Mangled by an Express Train.

This morning residents on Reid street were startled by seeing a trail of blood in the snow. It was produced by a Newfoundland dog owned by Mr. T. C. Tucker, Reid street, which was run over by the Toronto express on the Missing Link. The dog, a beautiful brute valued at $50, had been paying too much attention to a bone and the train surprised him, cutting off both hind legs close to the body. He dragged himself home leaving a trail of blood behind. He was put out of misery.

Curlians.

The two rinks which beat Lakefield Wednesday afternoon, Messrs. A. McNeil and A. Hall, skips, played against each other last night, the stakes being a barrel of flour, to be given to the Protestant Home. It was not concluded, and will be played again probably on Monday.

Lindsay curlers will visit Peterborough next week.

The 13-point game has dwindled down to Messrs. E. B. Edwards and H. M. Allen, with Mr. S. Clegg as a bye.

The "At Home" Not a Success.

The "At Home" at the George street church was nearly, but not quite, a success. It lacked a supply of "Calver's Cough Balsam," which should be "at" every "home." The most rapid cough remedy on earth for all forms of coughs, colds, and lung diseases. No "home" is complete without it. Sold at 25 and 50 cents a bottle by Geo. A. Sherin, Floral Drug Store (opposite the market.) 2d

It seems that the Cobourg World, which will appear in its new daily form in May, is not to be without opposition, as the Sentinel-Star of that town has also decided to become a daily newspaper. Verily, opposition is the life of trade.

The Men's Mass Meeting.

The meeting to be held in the Opera House on Saturday evening by Messrs. Hebdon, Stead and Dunnett, of Hamilton, is likely to draw a large attendance. Mr. Stead is among the foremost bass singers of Hamilton.

"At Home", in the Church.

The Teachers and Pupils of the George Street Methodist Church Hold an "At Home"—The 17th of Ireland Duly Celebrated.

It was a success in every way, and realized about $75 for the Sunday School fund. Parlor suites, carpets, curtains, flowers and bric-a-brac in endless quantity, artistically arranged by skillful hands, converted the school room of the church into a large and beautiful drawing-room, which was last night thronged with people intent upon making themselves "at home" and enjoying a social evening together. All afternoon a score or more enthusiastic young people worked like beavers in the onerous task of decorating the school room in a suitable manner, and their efforts were greatly appreciated. Encomiums were freely lavished by the visitors upon the nicety and completeness of the arrangement of things—and it was all deserved, too.

A dining room was made of the large class-room adjacent to the school room proper, in which were stretched three tables loaded with edibles, and presided over by the ladies, who did their level best to please. Abundant thanks are due to those who so kindly furnished material, time and labor in the effort to make the "At Home" a success.

A programme of considerable merit was rendered, as given below. A feature of the programme was the singing of the "Hamilton Helpers," Messrs. Stead and Dunnett, which was loudly applauded and encored. Their songs seemed to be especially attractive.

Rev. Mr. Tovell ably presided. Following is the programme:—

Part I.

Overture	Mr. J. K. Jaques
Vocal solo	Miss F. Dame
Violin solo	Mrs. Hamilton
Recitation	Mr. A. E. Scott
Song	Mr. J. K. Jaques

Part II.

Bad Italian—Carries a "Razor."

An Italian Tries to "Shave" a Comrade—He Carries a Pocketful of Razors.

"Jim," the Italian who figured in the shooting scrape last January, in which Joe Murphy was badly wounded, is in trouble again. Thursday afternoon he visited the house of Frank Anthony, a fellow-countryman, who lives on Aylmer street, better known as "Peanut Frank," and became involved in a quarrel with another Italian bearing the highly Milesian name of Mike Williams. Jim drew a razor and made for his adversary, but one of the women of the house interfered and succeeded in disarming him. Jim wasn't satisfied. He wanted blood—he-blood—and exhuming another similar weapon from his pocket, returned to the attack. Again was he stopped, and Jim became so disgusted at the idea of being prevented from exercising his right to slash and murder a friend in this free country, that he left the house. A warrant was sworn out against him, and P. C. McGinty finally captured his man in the gaol-yard, where, it is presumed, he went to meditate upon the disappointments of life. Jim had his back up and refused to go, until Charlie laid hold of him and handled him without mitts, as it were, when the Italian tried to draw another razor from his pocket to exercise his carving powers upon the "limb of the law" who had so rudely disturbed his meditations. After a lively tussle Jim was finally placed in limbo, where he became frantic with rage, shouting like a fiend, battering the door and raising Cain generally. After the hose had been turned on him, and he received a thorough drenching, Jim cooled off and became reasonable, not, however, before avowing his intention to commit suicide; he even had a handkerchief tied about his neck and was preparing to hang himself when interrupted. On being searched two more razors were found on him. Everything that could possibly be utilized in the way of self-destruction—handkerchiefs, suspenders, neckties, razors, etc—were taken from him, and in consequence Jim is in the land of the living yet.

At the police court this morning he acted very queerly, and his Italian comrades believe that he is insane. He is constantly jabbering to himself and making contradictory remarks, while he leads the life of a vagrant. Jim Peion, for that is his name, was committed to gaol for one month until it can be ascertained if he is really insane.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Ninth Parliament—First Session.

WEDNESDAY, March 16th.

Several petitions were presented and several bills received a first reading.

Mr. EVANTUREL moved for copies of correspondence, papers and reports on the subject of public schools in French settlements of Prescott and Russell, or upon the alleged difficulties between the English and French ratepayers of L'Orignal, and the establishing of a Protestant Separate School in that town. Passed.

Mr. MEREDITH moved for a return showing the agreement entered into between the province and the Roman Catholic Episcopal Corporation of the Diocese of Kingston for the use of the building known as Regiopolis College; the amount expended for repairs and improvements made at the expense of the province upon the building.—Passed.

Mr. O'CONNOR'S bill to abolish distress for rent was, on the promise of Mr. Mowat that the government would introduce a bill on the subject or announce its policy, laid over.

A bill to amend the Municipal Act, which provided that reeves, deputy-reeves, and members of county councils should be ex-officio Justices of the Peace, and another to amend the Act incorporating the Eastern Ontario Railway Company, were read a second time.

The debate on the Budget was concluded.

A Case of House-breaking.

Some time ago Mr. Wm. Whitehair closed up his house in "Englishtown," his family having broken up, and went to live elsewhere. Wednesday afternoon the house was visited, and it was found that the door had been broken open and a considerable quantity of the contents extracted, including a parlor set, sewing machine, and many other minor articles. A couple of suspected houses were searched yesterday afternoon, but nothing was found. The last of the matter has not yet been heard of, though.

If you have heard of anything new and have not seen it, look for it at Turnbull's, the great novelty house. His counters are now piled with New Spring good which he is pleased to show.

SATURDAY, MARCH 19, 1887.

IRISH MUCH EXCITED.

THE ARREST OF A PRIEST DEEPENS THE DIFFICULTY.

LONDON, March 18.—The Times asks why the Parnell party do not try to refute the charges made in its articles on "Parnellism and Crime." "None of the party has taken legal action," says the Times, "although if the charges were proved to be untrue heavy damages might be asked. Can Mr. Gladstone and his friends persist in telling the English and Scotch Liberals that it is safe and honorable to surrender the government of Ireland to the allies and instruments of anti-British plotters in America?"

Arrest of a Priest.

CORK, March 18.—Father Keller, of Youghal, was arrested to-day, charged with being concerned in the plan of campaign applied on the Ponsonby estates. When Father Keller reached this city in custody of the police he was met at the depot by the mayor, the municipal council and a large crowd that filled the streets. When the priest alighted from the train he was greeted with great cheers, followed by music from a band engaged for the occasion. The mayor and council then, on behalf of the people of Cork, presented Father Keller with an address.

Addresses were presented to Father Keller by the municipal authorities of all the towns through which he passed, and at every station there were crowds of people with bands of music to greet him.

Archbishop Croke, in his address to Father Keller at Thurles, said: "You represent two great principles—opposition to unjust action in regard to rent, and fidelity to the confidences of your flock. No government has ever grappled successfully with the Irish priesthood, and the present Government will rue the day they threw down a fresh gage of battle."

Father Keller replied that he had no reason to regret his action.

Several members of the House of Commons were in the crowd that awaited Father Keller at the Dublin station. The police were obliged to retire before the people who stormed the train and bore Father Keller to the Lord Mayor's carriage. Upon arriving at the Imperial Hotel Father Keller was presented with an address by the Lord Mayor. In his speech he said his journey had been more like that of a conqueror than an humble pastor. Standing in the midst of noble leaders he was ashamed and humiliated to be made the recipient of such an address. The rack rented tenants, he said, had exhausted every means before they adopted the plan of campaign. They could be sure of his sympathy. They had confided to him their hopes and fears, which he held sacred. He would never become an informer against his flock, not if he had to suffer death.

Father Keller Taken to Dublin.

DUBLIN, March 18.—Father Keller, on his journey to Dublin, met with ovations at all the stations. He was received at Thurles by Archbishop Croke and twelve priests. The archbishop assured Father Keller of his sympathy and approval, and he warned the Government that any attempt to crush the priesthood would fail. On his arrival at Dublin Father Keller was enthusiastically received. He was not conveyed to jail. Entering the Lord Mayor's carriage he was driven through the city to the Imperial Hotel. The carriage was followed by thousands of people with banners, bands of music, etc.

The Lord Mayor, in a speech, said that thousands of priests were ready to follow Father Keller to jail.

Mr. Dillon's Protest.

LONDON, March 18.—Mr. John Dillon, in the House of Commons this evening, protested against the arrest of Father Keller at Youghal to-day.

Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, denounced Mr. Dillon's violent language and his partizanship in accusing the Irish police of misleading the magistrate in the case and goading the people to resistance. Mr. Balfour declared that the Irish agitators were really responsible for goading the people of Ireland into rebellion.

Mr. Balfour, continuing, said the Bankruptcy Court had the power to summon anybody, whether priest or layman, as witness, and if such summons be disobeyed the only option of the court was to enforce the law and imprison the recalcitrant.

Mr. Labouchere reproached Mr. Balfour for having as he said, shirked his duty in failing to consider the charge of inhumanity brought against the police. He hoped that whenever Mr. Balfour turned loose his myrmidons without consulting a magistrate the Irish people would resist as they were now resisting.

Mr. Parnell protested strongly against the absence of any attempt on the part of the Government to meet the strong case that had been brought against them. Mr. Balfour, he said, would not escape retribution and the judgment of history as one who had entered upon a task of bloodshed in Ireland with a light heart—[cries "withdraw," which the speaker did not notice, and Irish cheers]—or as one who during a short period in office, had shown more callousness and indifference than any previous secretary. It was unfortunate for him (Balfour) that his assumption of office had been signalized by two such events as the arrest of Father Keller and the murder of Hanlan.

On a call for a division the members on the front Opposition bench left the House in a body amid tropical cheers. A motion to adjourn was negatived, 226 to 86, and the debate on the closure rules was resumed.

The Police Condemned.

LIMERICK, March 18.—The Municipal Council of Limerick to-day adopted a resolution condemning the police and Government of Ireland for [illegible]

BIG FIRE AT BUFFALO.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE BELIEVED TO HAVE RESULTED.

BUFFALO, March 18.—The splendid new Richmond Hotel, at the corner of Main and Eagle streets, only a stone's throw from the Miller-Greiner Block, burned on Tuesday, was totally destroyed by fire early this morning, together with St. James' Hall adjoining on Eagle-street, and other adjacent property. But the most distressful part of the disaster is not the destruction of valuable property, great as that is, but the loss of several human lives. At present it is impossible to say how many persons are killed and injured, but the number is large. In this respect the fire is one of the most serious disasters that has ever visited Buffalo. The rapidity of the fire, cutting off the means of escape, led some persons to leap for life from the windows. Others got down the fire escapes, or the Hayes ladders raised by the fire department, and others must have met a horrible death in the flames. The shrieks and cries of the poor people in the upper stories of the burning structure were heartrending. One man leaped from a third-story window and was picked up on the stone sidewalk on Main-street a mangled and bleeding corpse. Several who succeeded in making their escape were badly injured and burned, and some of these will probably die. Others more fortunate escaped with slight injuries, and sought refuge in the neighboring hotels. Carney's saloon on the upper corner of Eagle and Washington streets was turned into a temporary hospital, and here many of the wounded were taken, afterwards being removed to the hospitals. Among these was F. H. Bryant, a New York traveling man. He was badly burned about the feet and hands. The Hon. M. W. Barne, one of Olean's most prominent citizens, was terribly burned about the hands and wrists. Mr. Robert Stafford, the senior proprietor of the hotel, with his wife, occupied rooms on the second floor, and had a narrow escape. He, however, with Mrs. Stafford, got out in safety. Mr. Stafford was crazed with grief, and could only moan, "My God, my God," and hold his hands to his ears, to shut out the awful sounds of shrieks and groans, and frantic cries for help by the people above. Terror overcame everybody, and even those who escaped in safety were, in many cases, prostrated by their awful experiences. To this, however, there was at least one noble exception. A man stood, scantily clothed, at one of the windows of the fourth story, alternately surveying the flames darting up behind him, and then coolly and collectedly watching the operations of the firemen raising the Hayes extension ladder to save him. He uttered not a word, but was apparently busy calculating his chances. Up went the ladder, slowly but surely, and finally reached him just as the fire was bursting out of the window where he stood. He reached the top rung of the ladder in safety, and descended deliberately, and without the slightest sign of uneasiness or fear.

Among the guests in the hotel during the fatal night, were about twenty insurance agents, who had come of to adjust the losses growing out of the Miller-Greiner, Commercial and Courier office fires of Tuesday.

One of the most remarkable and thrilling experiences of those who escaped, was that of Mr. H. P. Whitaker, a member of the firm of Stafford & Co., proprietors of the hotel. He occupied a room in the fifth story, and was awakened by the ringing of the electric bell, with which each room was connected from the office.

Instantly comprehending the situation, he put on a few articles of clothing, and getting out of the window, walked or groped along the ledge, about forty feet, till he reached the fire escape, on which he descended in safety.

The small balcony on the Main-street front of the Richmond, second story, afforded a place of refuge for many of the occupants of the house, and from this point they were easily rescued with ladders. Among the last to escape were some of the servants in the upper story.

The Discovery of the Fire.

Mr. Wm. H. Alport, the night clerk, states that he was sitting in the office about 3.45, when he saw a reflection on the tile floor. Turning round, he discovered a blaze in the cost and cloak room, directly under the stairway, on the main floor. What caused the fire he could not tell, and he did not stop to investigate, but immediately gave the alarm, and started the electric annunciators which communicated with every room in the house. The flames at once darted up the elevator-shaft with tremendous force, and in an incredibly short space of time, the interior of the hotel was filled with smoke and flame. Then the terrible scenes began. Patrolman Henry Clark of the first precinct, who was standing on Main street opposite, turned in the first alarm at 3.45 a.m., and a detachment of the fire department arrived promptly. Second and third alarms brought the entire department to the scene, but it was impossible to save any portion of the blazing structure. The fire had reached the roof in less than five minutes from the time it was discovered. It soon reached and gutted old St. James' Hall, occupied as Bunnell's Museum, and Tivoli Hall, adjoining and fronting on Washington-street. At one time it was thought the whole block, down to North Division-street would go, but fortunately this was prevented, and the fire, which was under control by 5 o'clock, was confined to the Richmond, and the Museum property, together with the saloon of James Creighton and the cigar store of J. C. Palaco, on the Main-street side. Both of these were small buildings. The Main-street stores of the Richmond, three in number, were occupied by Ulbrich & Kingsley, booksellers and stationers, Peter Paul & Bros., in the same line of business, and Fuller & Townsend, proprietors of the Boston Clothing Store. The stock in these stores was totally destroyed, entailing heavy loss. There was no time to save anything.

The Dead and Injured.

There were about 100 or 125 people in the house, and, as the register was now burned, it was difficult to get a list of the names. It seemed evident from accounts of guests and others that the death list would be large. Eight of the wounded were taken to William A. Carney's saloon at Eagle and Washington-streets, which was turned into an impromptu hospital. The ambulances of the Pitch and Emergency hospitals were quickly on hand and the doctors worked with a will, caring for the injured.

At the undertaking rooms of Brady & Drullard are the bodies of Wilson Purcell and an unknown woman. Purcell was for a number of years a reporter with R. G. Dun & Co., but lately has been engaged in the investment broker business. He was about 42 or 43 years of age and single. He was a man of some means. The body was horribly burned, the jaw being fractured and the whiskers and hair burned.

It is said by his friends here that his home is in Chatham, Ont., at Stratford, where he has a sister. Coroner Keane took charge of Purcell's personal effects and a certificate of deposit in the Buffalo Loan, Trust and Safe Deposit Company, where he has a box. Purcell's friends in Port Arthur and Toronto have been notified. He was the man who lost his life by leaping from one of the upper windows.

The body of a woman horribly burned and clothed only in a wrapper was taken from Wahle's basement. The brains were oozing from a fracture in the skull. The only means of identification are that she had a large scar on the right side of the neck as if a surgical operation had been performed. She wore three gold rings on the third finger of the right hand. Two of the rings were plain; the other was chased and had the name "Annie" engraved on top of it.

To the list of dead must undoubtedly be added the name of Mark Osborne, the day clerk.

Many of the injured are at the Sisters' and the Emergency Hospitals, where a large force of medical men and nurses is attending them. There are also many scattered around the hotels, whither they were hastened when rescued. Until a complete list has been made it will be impossible to say how many lives are lost. All the injured at the hospitals and hotels will recover.

A Girl's Terrible Death.

James McGuire, night engineer at the post-office, got into the Richmond soon after the fire broke out, and at great risk saved the life of a man who was coming down stairs in his night clothes, and was prostrated by the flames and smoke. "I don't know who he is," said Mr. McGuire. "I didn't have time for an introduction. He was all used up when I found him. After getting him out I tried to rescue a young girl from a room on the third floor, but she was lost in the fire. It was terrible to hear her cries. For some reason she could not open the door. I had the postoffice keys in my pocket, but none that would start the door, and I wasn't able to break it in. Finally I was driven away by the fire and smoke, and had to leave her to her fate. I could only tell from the voice, but I suppose she was a young girl anywhere from 16 to 18 years or so. She was in a room on the third floor of the Main-street front.

None of the inmates of the hotel saved any of their effects and in many cases guests got out only in their night clothes.

Mr. Whitaker reports that a large amount of diamonds were in the hotel. B. E. Robinson of Lambert & Co. had a stock valued at $50,000, which were deposited in the safe. Mr. Addler had in his room $30,000 worth, and a Mr. Smith had another considerable stock but the amount was no known.

The Death List so Far.

BUFFALO, March 18.—The sidewalks and roadways in the vicinity of the destroyed hotel were literally packed with people up to the time when darkness made further search impossible. No more bodies have been recovered.

So far as known the list of dead and missing is Wilson Purcell, whose people live at Clifford; Martin Osborn, day clerk of the Richmond House; Minnie Kelly, Katie Kent and Mary Connel, servants of the house; and a railway man from Toronto named Johnson.

An unknown woman was found dead in the ruins of a cigar store on the ground floor.

Peter M. Daly, Passenger Agent of the Erie Railway at Toronto, was among the first to escape from the burning building. It was at first reported that Mr. Daly was among the missing, but happily the report was unfounded.

Hope for Consumptives.

PHILADELPHIA, March 18.—Dr. T. N. McLaughlin, chief physician of the Philadelphia hospital, has under treatment 30 patients supposed to be in the last stages of consumption. In each case the treatment recommended by a French professor in the University of Lyons has been adopted. The treatment consists of two rectal injections of carbonic acid gas daily, all medicines being abandoned. The treatment was begun a month ago and the patients have improved wonderfully. The night sweats have disappeared, the general health has improved and the patients have gained from three to twelve pounds in flesh.

The Dedham Disaster.

BOSTON, March 18.—The funerals of five victims of Monday's railroad accident took place yesterday at Roslindale, one in West Roxbury, one in Medfield and one in West Medford. ELEMENTARY EDUCATION IN EUROPE.

It is now some months since we purposed calling attention to a very candid, impartial and interesting report on Elementary Education in France and Germany which was made to the English educative department by Mr. Matthew Arnold. The writer was commissioned to deal with four definite and special heads of enquiry which may be considered salient points in the education question at present. These were free education, quality of education, status and training of teachers and compulsory attendance. His report is not therefore a complete or exhaustive account of the systems in vogue in the countries to which he was sent—Germany, France and Switzerland—but it gives some very interesting facts and impressions and these are recorded almost without note or comment. It will be serviceable for those interested in the progress of education in Canada to contrast the state of affairs in Europe with our own system.

In Prussia, we learn from Mr. Arnold's report, that by the Constitution of 1850, education in the public popular school is gratuitous, while the state helps in the erection and maintenance of schools in cases of proved inability. The communes, however, may, with the sanction of the provincial government, charge school fees, and, as a matter of fact, nearly all of them do, the chief exceptions being Dusseldorf and Berlin. In Saxony only a few foundation and charitable schools are wholly free, and opinion is altogether against the abolition of fees.

In Bavaria, school fees are the rule, and in Switzerland it was declared in 1874, that primary instruction shall be obligatory, and in the public schools, gratuitous. Indeed books and material are also given free to those children whose parents cannot afford to provide them. In France, the Minister of Public Instruction abolished the payment of fees in the public, primary and normal schools, six years ago.

With regard to the quality of instruction given in the Continental schools, Mr. Arnold speaks in the highest terms. Especially for Germany he claims more definite, scientific, comprehensive and interesting teaching than anything England can offer. The instruction is given less mechanically and more naturally. The aim of the teacher is to see that the children thoroughly understand the rule and the processes to which the teaching of arithmetic, for example, is applied. In the Hamburg schools the fixed obligatory subjects of instruction are no fewer than fourteen, viz: religion, German, English, (French is optional,) object lessons, history, geography, natural history, arithmetic algebra, geometry, writing, drawing, singing and gymnastics. The lowest classes attend 26 hours per week, the highest 32 and there is no Saturday holiday.

In England the statatory hours of obligatory school attendance are twenty per week for all classes. The additional time thus secured for instruction on the continent enables the teachers not only to cope with a greater variety of subjects, but to teach every subject more thoroughly.

Mr. Arnold says he was particularly struck with the patience, the clinging to oral question and answer, the avoidance of over-hurry and the being content to advance slowly, exhibited by all the teachers in geometry, arithmetic and natural science. In Germany it is a regular exercise for children to be made to give their answers complete, and the discipline in accuracy and collectedness thus obtained is very valuable. This is pure Pestalozzian doctrine, and every one who knows the theory will echo the wish that, among ourselves, these principles were better understood and more generally applied.

Compulsory attendance is universal during the period a child has to attend school, the only excuse being illness of the child, or serious illness in the family. In Hamburg and other parts of Germany the scholar must enter just after his sixth year and must remain at school seven years. A certificate of discharge is necessary before leaving school. In Prussia there is a half-day system. In the majority of cases the teachers must undergo training for about six years, and in some countries—Saxony, e. g.—a proportion of the teachers must have a university education.

Religious instruction is given in Germany and Switzerland, according to the profession of the majority, and the teaching is given with energy and thoroughness. In France, of course, as the reader knows, the schools are purely secular.

A PRIVATE despatch from Cayuga gives the information that Senator McCallum, one of Sir John's most recently shelved political hacks, has been in that village boosing the operation of counting Mr. Colter out. A meeting of Reformers will be held on Thursday evening, March, 24th, at which Mr. Paterson, M.P., will be present, and steps will be taken to overturn Judge Upper's decision, the giving of which was attended by such peculiar circumstances as to excite much unfavorable comment.

The Canadian Gazette, —the London (England) organ of the Ottawa Government—says:

"It is doubtful if Sir John's health will justify his long holding to the Prime Ministership, and towards, or at the close of, the coming session he may renounce his leadership in favor of Sir Charles. Sir John might then, on the ground of his declining health, see his way to become the High Commissioner here."

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Sixth Parliament—First Session.

THURSDAY, March 17th.

Several bills received their first readings.

The House then went into Committee of Supply, Mr. Harcourt in the chair, and the following sums were voted: Government House, $1,750; Lieutenant-Governor's office, $3,980; Executive Council and Attorney-General's Department, $16,280; Department of Education, $21,250; Crown Lands, $49,150; Public Works, $18,630; Treasury Department, $19,250; Agriculture Department, $500; Secretary and Registrar's Department, $31,075; public institutions, $9,375; Board of Health, $6,975; miscellaneous, $10,400.

On account of Thursday being St. Patrick's Day there was no evening session.

A Tribute to the Late Dr. O'Sullivan.

From the Irish Canadian.

The sudden death of Dr. O'Sullivan of Peterborough has caused the deepest regret among his many friends, not alone in the Midland district, but throughout the entire Province. The particulars of this sad and unexpected event are given elsewhere; and we have only to add our own poor tribute—the tribute of heartfelt sorrow for departed worth. No man could be more highly esteemed by his fellow-citizens than the deceased, and few men better deserved the good opinion that was entertained of him wherever he was known. He was not born in Ireland; yet he was as Irish as his father, who was a native of "rebel Cork." His Canadian birth was to him a matter of pride; but prouder still was he of his Celtic extraction—and this was a trait he preserved till the day of his death. Whether in the privacy of his home or in public or professional life, Dr. O'Sullivan was always the same—affable, genial and warm-hearted—and his unobtrusive manner but thinly veiled faculties of a high order. He was not only endowed with fine mental qualities, but he was possessed also of rare surgical and medical skill, as many can testify from personal experience.

In the death of Dr. O'Sullivan the people of Peterborough have suffered a severe loss. So also has the Irish cause; for the Doctor was second to none in the effort to foster and encourage it in Canada. Mainly to his energy was due the establishment of the Peterborough branch of the Irish National League, of which he became and remained President till he died; and it must have gratified Mr. Justin McCarthy, who lectured there under the auspices of the branch, to find in that somewhat remote locality so much earnestness and faith in the principle of Irish Home Rule. For this, Mother Ireland is not a little indebted to the kind and gentle Irish-Canadian who is gone from us forever—to him and the patriotic men, his fellow-workers of the League. They will continue the work which he began, and thus perpetuate his memory; nor will they cease till the object dearest to his heart is gained—till the Irish people are made happy and contented by the restoration of their Parliament. For this, Dr. O'Sullivan labored—labored indefatigably and unselfishly; and for this exalted love of country, as well as for his many other excellent qualities of head and heart, his name will long remain in affectionate remembrance. May his soul rest in peace.

COLLISION ON THE C. P. R.

The Toronto Express Runs into a Freight —No Lives Lost.

OTTAWA, March 18.—Near 1 o'clock this morning the C. P. R. express for Toronto ran into the rear portion of a train of freight cars stationary on the main line, near Stittsville, fifteen miles from this city. The conductor of the freight had found the grade too heavy and had divided his train in two parts, sending half ahead with the engine. A brakeman was sent back along the line with a lantern to warn the express, which was then almost due. The engineer of the express did not notice the warning signals of the messenger and kept right ahead. It was only when a very short distance off that he noticed a light from the train in front of him. The engine was reversed, but too late. In a moment a terrific crash came. The engine crushed into the rear car, breaking it to pieces and igniting its cargo of vitriol, the fire speedily spreading in all directions. The ten cars of the freight train were, with their contents, consumed. The engine of the express was totally wrecked, and the consumable portion was burned, the fire spreading to the tender and to the first car of the passenger train before a relief engine could be got to draw off the rest. Fortunately there was no loss of life. The fireman of the express was the only one injured. His hurt was in the spine. The track was not cleared until 7 o'clock this evening and trains for the east and west were detained all day.

Fire at Ingersoll.

INGERSOLL, March 18.—About 5 o'clock this morning the skating rink, a large frame building, was destroyed by fire; also two or three buildings adjoining; loss about $4000, insured in the Royal and Phœnix for $2000.

HIS LAST SERMON.

LAST PULPIT WORDS OF REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Delivered in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, on Sunday Evening, Feb. 27—Resolution and the Necessity of Living up to Fixed Standards.

"And he said unto his disciples: There was a certain rich man which had a servant, and the same was accused unto him. * * * No servant can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and Mammon."

Text—Luke, xvi, 1, the first clause: "I am resolved what to do."

I read in your hearing this narrative, this parable of our Lord. The unjust steward had been accused, and rightfully, of betraying his trust and wasting that committed to him. His master called him to an account, and he was satisfied that the end had come, and he communed with himself, and as the result of that, and looking over all the circumstances, he said, "I am resolved what to do."

What he resolved to do was not very honest, but it was very shrewd. He resolved to make friends of all the debtors of his lord. He called them up and settled with them in such a way as to lay them under obligations—gratitude to him. And so, although he and they cheated the master, he made his own nest warm and the master praised him—not Jesus, but the man that owned the property in the one. When he heard that he said to himself: "Well, that is shrewd; that is cunning; that is wise," and the comment on it is: Children of this world are wiser than the children of light; that is to say, men who are acting in worldly reasons, for worldly reasons, are very much wiser than the men becoming good from the highest moral considerations. But that that they have selected is simply this: "I am resolved what to do."

What, then, is the nature of a resolution—what is the scope of it, the potency? And what are the drawbacks? The self-consideration of these questions may throw light upon the path of many of us. Now, our long effort of making up our mind is equivalent to forming a purpose. When a man resolves he means, or should mean, to do something; and all resolutions carry, or should carry, not simply the end sought, but also the capable and necessary means by which the end is sought. I am resolved to cross that river, by the bridge, by boat or by swimming. To stand on one side and to resolve to be on the other, without any intermediate means of doing it, would be folly indeed. I am resolved to-morrow to go to market. All the intermediate and implied steps by which that resolution could be carried out are included in the resolution itself. A resolution is a purpose in so far as simple things, uncompounded, incomplex, are concerned. A resolution may be executed immediately, without loss of time; indeed, the greatest number of resolutions are those which, like the stroke of the hammer or the explosion of the gun, are almost without any appreciable interlapse of time. "I am resolved what to do." Natural resolutions: At the cry of fire the man instantly looks out to see what to do; at the call of a man to step to the door and see a stranger or a friend; he resolves to do it; although the resolution is latent in such a sense by repetition, he is not conscious of making up his mind.

In regard to a great many of the acts of a man's life, celebration—that is to say, the action of the brain—has become so common that it takes place without any appreciable appearance of taking place. A multitude of things—if one gets in a crowd, and a man would strike him, his defense is not the result of reflection, and yet it was in him as a result of experience to protect himself; and, if it be a shadow, it is just the same, for a shadow seems like a substance, and he puts himself in a ludicrous attitude of defense; he smiles, and he goes on, but the action of the mind, the unconscious cerebration, is there.

As, for instance, in things that apply to the now, that are uncompounded and simple, a man resolves and executes almost at the same moment. The child calls from above "Father," and incidentally there is no thought whether he shall or shall not answer, yet the train goes on without him and he replies, "My son, what?" Or the call has come to him for help, and he instantly, before the last echo of the sound dies out of his ear, is on his feet, on his way. But these are very simple things; they are the primary forms, which afterward, becoming more and more complicated, running through longer periods of time, imply a great many intermediate steps. For a man can resolve that he will go to bed—it doesn't take long, either—he resolves that to-morrow morning he will get up and go "cruising," but to-morrow is dark and stormy, and the resolution is not half so strong when he wakes up as it was when he went to bed. There are a great many considerations that come. Or the man resolves that to-morrow he will go to market; neighbors come in; he waits; it is noon, and then it is too late to go. "And come again." And he puts it off until the next morning. So between God and thy neighbor as thyself." Therefore you must lift yourself, and he that lifts himself shows, not by partiality toward the lower and worst features in himself, but toward his whole self—the regent understanding, the moral power and element and spiritual in him. Now, when a man has this presented to him and he is urged to enter upon a Christian life as the only honorable one, the only one that has the greatest satisfaction in it, the only one that carries in it the idea of duty and gratitude toward God, how thoughtlessly men heed that. To-night how many are there of you that say in thus looking over the sphere of life—life to come: "I am resolved what to do." Bearing in mind what a resolution means and what it includes, how many men can say to-night, "Yes, I am resolved what to do." There are very few of you that would say, "I am resolved not to be a Christian." That is a very hazardous thing, which very few men care to resolve. Men may say, on the other hand, "I hope some time to be a Christian; I feel sometimes as if I would like to be one; I wish I was one;" just as a lazy man wishes he had the products of industry. But how many men are there here to-night that can say, "I am resolved what to do," "I am resolved what to do."

Are you then resolved at once to become a Christian? Can I be a Christian at once? In one sense, no; in another sense, yes. Nobody ever learned a trade at a blow, but he can begin this day; no man ever became a scholar by resolution, but he never can become one without resolution; it is a complex one and a constantly repeating one, ancillary resolutions upholding the main one. Are you resolved to be a Christian to this extent—I will begin to-night? "I am resolved as far as I have light and as far as I know my way. I am determined, God knows I am determined to square my life hereafter on Christian principles. I am resolved to be a Christian man." Now, this may include churches. I may be a Roman Catholic and resolve it, or a Protestant and stay out of that church, and stay out of any other church. This resolution doesn't include I will be a Christian like to this scheme or that scheme, according to this church or that church; it simply means in its simplest form, its primary condition, "I will regulate my life, both inside and out, according to the principles laid down for me by the Lord Jesus Christ." Is not that a very simple thing? But what does it carry with it? It carries, in the first place, this: "I will therefore begin by excluding everything that I know will hinder this resolution from a consciously wicked way, I will begin as a part of the fulfillment of this resolution; I will stop." That is the meaning of the repentance John began and Christ took up. Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; that is to say I will get over every known wrong that is inconsistent with this purpose that I have formed; I am going to live as a Christian man, as a Christian woman; and if there be that which I know to be fundamentally wrong I shall carry out my resolution by repenting or turning away from that. And then, in the next place, a resolution to be a Christian applies immediately; it is not that I will be a Christian next year, or by and by, or long time—death, but it is going on, beginning at once to live, as far as I know how, righteous. Do you mean, then, to take the steps that are necessary? Are you ready to begin your attempt to live a Christian life by saying in sincerity, "God, show me the way; give me thy help?" Are you willing? Not to say your prayers; there are a great many prayers said; a great many too few prayers that are felt and true. Is there sincerity in you? I would to God that you have spiritual refilling and the sustaining power of the whole spirit, that you have the certainty that he was working in me to will and to do his good pleasure. Are you ready to begin your Christian life then by consulting the Word of God and reading, not a chapter, but a verse or two every day, but to apply it the bread your mouth? When any great combination, schemes, is being formed in New York—any syndicate—there is always a lawyer, and they will never take a single step until they consult him, and he is about all the while; he is the man of their counsel: it's a complicated thing, and a great deal depends upon it, and they cannot afford to go wrong. Are you willing to take the New Testament as the line of your counsel? See what it says about lusts, about appetites, what it says about crime and envy and jealousy, and all ill will and evil speaking, and all selfishness in the grasping mood. Are you willing to look through the New Testament to see what the law of the Lord is? Not by discussion. God will take care of his own defense and doesn't thank you for any help; nor has he any occasion to thank anybody. Are you willing to take the Bible just as a shipmaster takes the chart of a person he leaves the last shore light and takes his direction he steer sails: 'Read me] adbreath by two of the darling questions, and then read me the draughtings I made again and then again.' They have no relation at all to his course, to his actual sailing; but he is not going to read so many parts of his chart and of his sailing directions. Why, no; he lays out his voyage from the beginning and every day he takes observations, and then he checks down on the chart just where he is. At noon to-morrow he takes another observation; not because there is any need of reading his chart, in reading any book on navigation; not because he is studying astronomy for the sake of anything that is in astronomy. He has got a definite purpose in life; after which he sells his astronomy, and after which he sells his books, or those which lay his course. Are you willing to begin a Christian course and voyage by going to the word of God to ascertain exactly what is expected of you, both what you are to reject and what you are to adopt? That is sensible, that is right, resolving, according to a practical basis and resolution. Or, on the other hand, are you, while you are weighing, that is, in yourself, are you saying to yourself: "If other people of God got on the best way. There is my father and mother. If there were ever any Christians they were such. I believe they were real Christians." Now, a man's mother is infinitely more to him than the Virgin Mary is to any devout Catholic.

You come into the church because you find sympathy there and kindly help there. Are you willing to take advantage of all these kindly helps, so that you may be able to keep your purpose and your will? Are you willing to begin it now? You don't need any more knowledge. You have been brought up in Christian knowledge from the very cradle; you have no bad associations; you have necessarily none by the average, but what Christian life was and Christian duty, is there—there is no man here that needs to have additional instruction; he knows that he is bound to live obediently to God and in love with Jesus Christ. But can a man come into a state of emotion? Can a man by simply saying I will, feel? No; no; but by saying I will feel he can take the steps to feel. A man shivers and says, "Chills and fever are not agreeable; I am determined to get over them." Well, you cannot get over them by determining it, but if you will take quinine enough you can. Now, let your purpose be not simply this, "I am resolved to be a Christian," but "I am resolved so unostentatiously. I am going to feel myself for all the help I can and all the Christian institutions that are necessary for my weal." Now, that is practical, and that is common sense as well as moral sense. Or are you going to say, "Well, I will see about it." No, you won't; you know it. And that thing we have in our times, when a loth debtor, he has given a note not for the sake of paying a debt—but for the sake of getting rid of paying it they put it off for four months, and then they give another note. It is the greenback business, in which they pay one note by giving another. There are multitudes of people that form a resolution for the sake of not fulfilling a duty, and a man says, "Well, I have made up my mind I am going to be a Christian as soon as I get ready." When are you going to get ready? It has clouded your conscience and clouded your reason now by promising to do that, by and by, when the convenient time comes: and the devil will see to it that it never comes. It is a resolution that simply means the feeling of having done your duty. And I think the most scandalous meannesses and dishonorableness that can very well be imagined, when the parties concerned are regarded, is that resolution that people form to be a Christian, when they have wasted themselves in the service of selfishness, and when they have come into old age and lie on their death bed.

I should think myself very mean if, in the summer time, I should gather a peck of peas and shell out the peas, and send the pods over to my neighbor as a present. That is what men mean to do with God; they mean to live in youth after their passions; they mean to live in middle age after their ambition; they mean to live in old age after ease, and before they die they hope to whip on the right side and get into heaven. When you come to examine such conduct in relation to men, there is not a scrage that would not feel that was infamous—to repay protection, divine benediction, the ministration of God through all the channels of nature and the kindness of God through Jesus Christ for the ministration of the gospel; and the man deliberately says, "I will seek all the money out of these things and all the rest that is in life, and when we are no longer of use to ourselves we are going—we will repent so as to get into heaven. Two Dutch elders had been warm friends and yet one day they fell out with each other and the fire grew fiercer until they came positively to hate each other, and one Sunday morning the dominie going behind one of the elders heard him mutter to himself, "Van Alstyne is a hypocrite; he will go to hell, he will go to hell." The old dominie spoke up to him and said: "Oh, oh, my brother, he won't go to hell." "Yes he will go to hell." "Well, but, my dear fellow, he may repent." "No—well, he is just mean enough to do it." But this is—it is, candidly—the condition in which some of you are. You mean to live hatefully, disobediently, dishonorably, and yet in the last estate you mean to whip up and get into heaven. you are "just mean enough to do it."

Now, on the other hand, blessed be God, he is long suffering, and he is patient, and as we would pay a debt, by installments, little by little, showing all the time that we endeavor to do it, he respects your endeavor to live, to repent and to live a Christian life, by installments.

If you make up your mind honestly to do it, he will bear with your incompetence and your ignorance and your endearments; he will bear patiently with you, and help you from day to day, and from month to month, and from year to year, "growing brighter and brighter unto the perfect day." Is there any man here that can say in regard to the past, I am resolved that I will cut loose from everything that has been a detriment to me, dishonorable to God? Is there any man that will say in regard to the future, "I am resolved what to do? I am resolved to take a higher life, the nobler life; I am determined, by the help of God, that I will live in such a way that I should live." And if there is, don't wait until to-morrow morning; readjust your life to-night; go home and tell God of it; go home and tell your wife of it. That is the very thing you don't dare to do, because when a man has once committed himself he is ashamed to go back: and if you are ashamed to tell anybody "I have made up my mind to live like a Christian man," it is because you have not made up your mind. When a man has determined that he will live a Christian life he will be willing to show to all that are around about him, "I am going to try. I have made up my mind to try." If you have mind you will enter upon your journey. "The time is past in which I have served the will of the flesh, and now, to-night, I have determined that I will begin, with the help of God, to live a Christian life." Are there any of you that are willing to make that resolve? God help you. For a little while it will be a troublesome thing, for a little while, but then easier and easier, with remuneration and exhilaration and joy and final victory."

They Won the Money.

Dr. Leeds, of Lincoln, Ills., offered $5 to the Ladies' Missionary society if twenty or more young ladies would sit together two hours without speaking. Twenty-six won the money, in spite of efforts to make them talk.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,130.70, being the amount due under life policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a calamity if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurances with six per cent. per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,120.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

LOCAL NEWS.

Narrow Escape From Another Town Baby.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Floyd, who lives in the North Ward, called upon the Mayor with a little bald-headed, three-months-old specimen of humanity in her arms, which she desired to transfer to the tender mercies of the Mayor, as the head of the corporation. The baby's mother, it seems, was a single woman employed in a hotel, and at its birth placed the infant in charge of Mrs. Floyd, promising a weekly instalment for its care. Some time having elapsed since the last payment, Mrs. Floyd wanted to get rid of the incumbrance. The Mayor of course declined the gift, and the baby was taken away, and for the present the honor of playing the role of foster father and mother combined to the worse than orphaned infant is denied the town. It is supposed the mother has skipped out.

Literary Society.

The regular weekly meeting of the Business College Literary and Debating Society was held on Friday evening. A very enjoyable hour was spent in disposing of the following programme: Readings by Miss Brown, Mrs Sawyer, Mr. M. Reid and D. S. Sawyer; song by Mr. Ruth; a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer. The publisher then read the second number of the College Mirror. This number was a decided improvement on the first; it is expected the next will be still better. In the absence of Miss Ratcliffe, Mr. Sawyer acted as critic. Miss Reid and Mr. Law were appointed an entertainment committee for next week. After singing "God Save the Queen" the society adjourned.

Prohibition Club.

At the meeting Tuesday night for the purpose of forming a Young Men's Prohibition, Club there were about ten present. Officers were elected as follows:—

PRESIDENT.—Mr. Bannell Sawyer.
1ST VICE PRESIDENT.—Mr. Wm. Yelland.
2ND VICE PRESIDENT.—Mr. J. Carlisle.
SEC. TREASURER (pro tem).—Mr. M. Rossiter.

The Constitution of the Toronto Y. M. P. C., was adopted, and the remaining officers and committees will be apointed at a meeting to be held, probably not until after the "Hamilton Helpers" have concluded their series of meetings.

Gray Dress Goods are all the rage this season. You can have your choice of eight shades in thirteen different qualities at Turnbull's. Also Ball Trimming Hercules Braid and buttons to match. Miss Morgan, our dress-maker leads the fashion in dressmaking. All her work turned out promptly.

A New City Daily.

That leading and excellently conducted weekly, the Stratford Beacon, has blazed out as an evening daily, and the first numbers give promise of a bright future. If the daily edition is conducted with the same ability and energy that marked the management of the weekly, there must be before the daily Beacon the prosperous career which the EXAMINER hopes it may enjoy.

A Serious Accident.

At 2.30 this afternoon Eugene, a 7-year-old son of Mr. Joseph Hetu, was clinging to a farmer's sleigh loaded with square timber, when one rolled off and crushed him to the ground, breaking his thigh and cutting an ugly gash in his head. The accident happened just in front of Dunsford's grocery, on George street. Dr. King attended the little sufferer and Dr. Bell was also called in.

Mass Meeting To-night.

The temperance band from Hamilton will occupy the Opera House to-night, in connection with the Young Men's Christian Association. Besides the music supplied by the visitors, a male choir will be present. No charge for admission. Collection taken to cover expenses.

If you have heard of anything new and have not seen it, look for it at Turnbull's, the great novelty house. His counters are now piled with New Spring good which he is pleased to show.

Public Holiday.

The Dominion Government has issued an order-in-council appointing Tuesday, June 21st, as the official date for celebrating the Queen's Jubilee. This date is not obligatory on the part of municipalities, who can celebrate on any day they choose.

The Success

of business done by R. Stinson & Son since the commencement of their closing out sale has shown a largely increased majority in the number of the electors who have secured bargains since the 1st of February.

No. 2 Company Attention.

The Northern Division Formed

An Enthusiastic Meeting of Canoeists From all Parts of Ontario.—The Division Formally Organized.

The organization meeting of the Northern Division of the American Canoe Association Friday night was highly successful. Every man present was enthusiastic over the scheme, and the Northern Division is bound to be a big thing. Those present were:—

LINDSAY CANOE CLUB.—Messrs. McGachen, Porteous, J. G. Edwards, Hopkins, Dean, Munson, Walters, Montgomery, White, Barron, Orde and Britton.

LAKEFIELD CANOE CLUB.—Dr. Douglass and Mr. A. I. Wright.

BOBCAYGEON CANOE CLUB.—Messrs. W. J. Read and Mims.

BROCKVILLE CANOE CLUB.—Mr. J. Bell.

ROYAL MILITARY COLLEGE CANOE CLUB.—Mr. Greenwood. 'Col. Fairtlough, of the R. M. C. C. C., was on his way to the meeting but telegraphed that owing to the snow blockade he could not get farther than Sharbot Lake.'

MONICAN CANOE CLUB.—Dr. C. A. Neide.

There were a large number of representatives of both the Peterborough and Otonabee Clubs present, also Mr. Jacques, of Toronto Canoe Club; Mr. W. G. McKendrick, of Galt Canoe Club; Mr. Colin Fraser, of Ubique Canoe Club.

PETERBOROUGH CANOE CLUB.—H. C. Rogers, C. H. Clementi, A. Elliott, D. Breese, Wm. English, E. H. D. Hall, J. Macklin, J. D. Collins, R. B. Rogers, J. E. Rogers, A. P. Poussette, E. J. Toker, A. Thomas, E. B. Edwards.

OTONABEE CANOE CLUB.—John Miller, G. A. Schofield, C. Lawford, H. W. Stock, A. N. Brown.

This meeting was the outcome of a meeting of the Executive Committee at Toronto on the 12th of February, 1887, authorizing the formation of a Northern Division of the A. C. A.

A motion was passed to the effect that the members present form a Northern Division of the A. C. A., and a Nominating Committee was appointed, composed of Messrs. Porteous, of Lindsay; Minns, Bobcaygeon; Dr. Douglass, Lakefield; Toker, Peterborough; Millar, Otonabee; Jacques, Toronto; Fraser, Ubique; Bell, Brockville; McKendrick, Galt; Greenwood, R. M. C. C.; Dr. Neide, Deseronto.

The Nominating Committee recommended the following officers, who were accepted:—

VICE-COMMODORE—Col. H. C. Rogers, Peterborough.

REAR COMMODORE—Col. Fairtlough, Kingston.

PURSER—Mr. J. D. Collins, Peterborough.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—Messrs. Jacques, B. D., Toronto; McGachen, A. F. D., Lindsay; Douglass, Lakefield; Fraser, Toronto; F. S. Rathbun, Deseronto; Minns, Bobcaygeon.

Messrs. Porteous and Minns, on behalf of Lindsay and Bobcaygeon, offered the hospitality of the clubs they represented to all canoeists that might pass that way.

Letters of commendation on the formation of the Northern Division were read from Kingston, Ottawa, Deseronto and other places, the clubs of which places entered heartily into the idea and wished to become members.

Before adjourning those present signed the roll, which made of itself a good membership to start with.

At a subsequent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Northern Division there were present Messrs. Rogers, Douglass, Minns, Jacques, McGachen and Fraser.

It was decided to hold the Stony Lake meet from the 1st to the 13th of August; the Vice-Commodore was empowered to appoint a sub-committee to carry out the arrangements; and the Vice-Commodore, Purser and Ex-Commodore Edwards were appointed to prepare and issue a descriptive circular relative to the meet in August.

ACCIDENTS.

On Saturday last while a young son of Mr. John Madill was working in Mr. Baptie's planing mill, he tripped and fell, inflicting a scalp wound between four and five inches long. Although the blood was pouring all over his person and the other workmen were aghast, the urchin took it as a matter of fact, and after having it dressed, was quite ready to go back to work if he had been allowed to do so.

On Wednesday afternoon while Mr. T. Sullivan, of the village, was engaged on the farm of Mr. Hugh Davidson, Smith, chopping, a falling tree broke off the dead top of an adjoining tree, which caught Mr. Davidson before he could get out of the way, striking him full in the face and inflicting several wounds which laid bare almost the entire side of his face and upper lip. Mr. Davidson at once went to his assistance, and after dressing the wounds as well as possible, drove him home and medical assistance was obtained, thirteen stitches being required to close the wounds.

On Thursday one of our "fox-hunters," in the person of Mr. Ash, came to grief while out after his favorite game. He slipped and fell while trying to obtain a favorable position for a shot at an approaching fox that the hounds were after, and fractured two of his ribs. A Mr. Armstrong, of Douro, on whose farm they were hunting, saw him fall, came to his assistance and kindly drove him home, where medical assistance was rendered and the "old man" felt more like himself, though his "fox-hunting" days for this season, at least, are over, and worse than all the "black fox" is still free, and likely to remain so.

—Gough, the clothier, has hung three life-size oil paintings outside on the brickwork between the second-storey windows of his shop on George street. Inside, a polished brass pipe full of gas jets runs down the centre the whole length of the store, and a large mirror at the rear reflects in such a manner as to give it the appearance of being twice its real length. Gough's store is an elaborate one, of metropolitan proportions and beauty, and Gough knows just how to manage it. He advertises liberally.

Lord Tennyson's latest effort is a morning and evening hymn, dedicated to the boys in the Gordon Home at Portsmouth.

Worthy of Confidence.

The praptration sold by druggists known as Hagyard's Yellow Oil is worthy of all confidence as a household remedy for pain. It has been over a quarter of a century in the market, and never fails to cure or relieve rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, quinsy, deafness, burns, scalds, bruises, frost bites and internal or external pains and injuries. 2w9d

COERCION PRESSED.

THE AMENDED BILL AIMS AT THE SUPPRESSION OF THE LEAGUE.

LONDON, March 19.—The Government will hardly be able to introduce their Coercion Bill on Monday after all, but it is expected that the great battle of parties will open in earnest next Tuesday, when Mr. Smith will move the urgency for Crimes Bill. This is sure to make a fight, unless the hopelessness of their cause may deter the Opposition from arraying themselves for the contest. The Government have good reason to be confident of their ability to carry their coercion measure by a large majority. The collapse of the negotiations for reunion, between Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Chamberlain, has had the effect of cementing the bonds which unite the Liberal Unionists to the Tories, while it further weakens the already diminished strength of the Gladstonians, and leaves them without a shadow of hope in the present conflict.

The Government are now so secure of the aid of the Unionists that they will hazard a stronger coercion bill than they at first intended. Their originally mild bill has been transformed into an aggressive and uncompromising measure which aims at the suppression of the Irish National Land League, the suspension of "seditious" newspapers and an alteration of the method of selecting juries for the trial of traversers and plan of campaign agents.

Briefly the bill as now modeled combines the worst provisions of the Crimes Act of 1882 which Mr. Gladstone introduced and had passed in spite of Parnellite and Tory obstruction, after the Phœnix Park murder of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke on May 6 of that year; and of the Coercion Act or Irish Land Act of 1870, which was carried through by the Liberals in Mr. Gladstone's first administration. The Parnellites declare that the Government will never dare to use the full powers to be created on them by this bill if they obtain its enactment, and that any attempt to do so will cause a terrific outburst of indignation and rebellion by the populace throughout Ireland. Secret societies are already formed, they assert, in view of the probable necessity for united action, and are actively preparing to resist by every possible means every endeavor that the Government may make to enforce the provisions of the bill.

Mr. Parnell was asked the other day whether, among the radical party, there was material for forming a party of stalwarts capable of working for the interests of the common people of England as he and his party had worked for the interests of the common people of Ireland. He replied in the negative: the English radical members at present in Parliament were either too old, too lukewarm-cated, or too wealthy to work together with the discipline and resolution that the home rule contingent has displayed through successive Parliaments. During the debates on the closure bill, the latter have taken into the lobby on each division nearly nine-tenths of all their men who were in London. From ten to a dozen were unavoidably detained in Ireland, either from ill-health or other causes; but of those who came to Westminster they polled six out of every seven, an average which cannot be rivalled by any other party in the state. Most of the Parnellite members of Parliament are young men, and the proportion of unmarried men is also higher among them than in any of the English parties.

Father Keller Committed.

DUBLIN, March 19.—Father Keller, who was arrested at Youghal yesterday, was driven to court to-day in the Lord Mayor's carriage, receiving an ovation from the people in the streets. He refused to give any testimony as to his custody of tenants' moneys as trustee under the plan of campaign, and was committed to prison for contempt of court. The judge declared that if the priest's action in disobeying the order of the court were permitted the whole machinery of the bankruptcy law would be upset.

Cheered to the Jail Gate.

DUBLIN, March 19.—The scene in the streets when Father Keller was being taken to court is unparalleled in the history of Dublin. Vast crowds had collected, and when the priest appeared riding in the Lord Mayor's carriage cheer after cheer greeted him. The noise and excitement, both inside and outside the court-room, were so great as to prevent the hearing of the case, and the judge threatened to clear the court unless silence was maintained. Finally order was restored and Father Keller took the oath. He refused to testify on the ground that he would disclose confidence reposed in him as a priest. The judge said there was no legal justification for his refusal and said the question had no reference to witness' spiritual capacity. Father Keller was then committed for contempt and was taken out of court and placed in a cab in the custody of officers. The people immediately made a rush for the vehicle, removed the horses, and dragged it through the streets to Kilmainham Jail, where the priest was locked up. Archbishop Walsh of Dublin was among the spectators in court, and he, Mr. Wm. O'Brien, Lord Mayor Sullivan and Mr. Timothy Harrington, M.P., followed the priest to the jail in carriages. Father Keller received a continuous ovation on the passage from the court to the jail.

The populace marched to Kilmainham Jail singing, alternately, "God Save Ireland" and "We'll Hang Judge Boyd on a Sour Orange Tree." The people uncovered their heads upon arriving at the scene of Emmett's execution. Father Keller entered the prison leaning upon Archbishop Walsh's arm. Mr. O'Brien hemmed the crowd. He predicted that the conflict which had been begun would end in the destruction of Tory power and "the present infamous system of alien misrule."

THE BUFFALO FIRE.

IT IS KNOWN THAT SEVEN LIVES HAVE BEEN LOST.

BUFFALO, March 19.—Henry B. Rumsey of New York, who was one of the guests at the Richmond on the night of the fire and who was terribly burned about the body, died at the Fitch Hospital at 1.45 o'clock this morning. This makes six known deaths thus far.

Louis Zandmann of New York was one of the many who had very narrow escapes from the burning building. He says that about 3.45 o'clock he was awakened by the ringing of the electric bell, which he answered, not knowing what was the matter. It continued to ring, so he slipped on some of his clothing and stepped out into the hall, when he saw the fire rushing up from below. Several persons, among them a number of women, ran into his room in the greatest consternation. He made preparations to escape and sprang from his window for the roof of Budnell's Museum, but caught on the telegraph wires, cutting his hands. His foot rested on an iron girder and he fortunately secured a rope by which he was enabled to descend. He then picked up a board and found himself in the museum dressing room. He made his way to an opening and dropped, landing in the orchestra. He then rushed to a door, gave it a push and fell on the outside pretty well exhausted, but thankful for his escape. Mr. Zandmann says he is positive there were seven persons in his room when he left it, and all he saw escape was one man and one woman. It is his belief that the others lost their lives.

Three of the four persons taken to the Sisters of Charity Hospital yesterday are in a very precarious condition. They are Misses Mary Nolan, Fanny Harty and Maggie Mulrick, three girls employed at the Richmond. Their injuries are frightful and it is uncertain whether they will recover or not. George F. Michaels is doing nicely to-day. Clinton Bidwell, who is at the General Hospital, had a very bad night. He was very restless, but is easier this morning.

Dr. K. H. Norton, the attending surgeon at the Fitch Hospital, said this morning that all of the injured persons under his care were doing as well as could be expected. He thinks they will all recover.

The ruins of the Richmond Hotel presented a dismal spectacle this morning, and crowds continued to gather in the vicinity. The firemen were still engaged in wetting down the ruins, preparatory to making a search for bodies known to be somewhere under the debris, if not entirely destroyed. The search will be commenced most likely some time to-[illegible]

At 11.15 o'clock this morning the body of a [illegible] was found in the ruins near the south wall. The body was burned probably beyond recognition. The remains were removed to an undertaking establishment pending an effort to establish the identity of the deceased.

This morning the body of Henry D. Rumsey of New York, who died at 1.30 a.m. at the Fitch Hospital, was given in charge of his brother-in-law, E. C. Edgerton of Fort Wayne, and a friend, Edwin Mead, jr., of New York. The deceased was 42 years old and was connected with the United States navy. His parents reside at Santa Fe, N.M., and his wife and daughter at Fort Wayne, Ind., where the remains will be taken. He has a son in the United States navy stationed at Madeira. The deceased lost his life by going back to rescue the little daughter of Mrs. Mann. He heard her scream and put her inside of his shirt to protect her from the fire. Coroner Kenny has impaneled a jury of representative citizens and business men and says he will endeavor to have a thorough investigation.

Following is a revised list of the dead:

Wilson Purcell.
Kate Wolfe of Lockport.
Mark Osborne, body not yet recovered.
Lizzie Welch, servant.
Katie Kent, servant.
Henry H. Rumsey, died at the hospital.
Max Dahlman of Rochester, died at the hospital.

Those missing and unaccounted for are:

J. B. Acker of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, supposed to have arrived on Thursday night and registered at the Richmond Hotel.

Hiram Benedict, jr., of Lockport. A special from Lockport this morning says: "Hiram Benedict, jr., was undoubtedly lost in the Richmond Hotel fire. His father gives up all hope of his son being alive."

Mr. Johnson of Toronto, a railroad man.

Joseph Sayre of Erie, Pa.

J. C. Pratt of Albany. The last-named gentlemen was known to have been at the Richmond Hotel.

Mr. Goodrich of New York, reported missing, has been heard from at Cleveland, O.

The list at present stands: Seven persons dead, twenty-one injured, five or six seriously, and five missing.

Little Jennie Mann, daughter of one of the proprietors of the hotel, in rescuing whom Mr. H. B. Rumsey sacrificed his own life, was reported very low this morning, and it is feared she cannot recover. The body of the man found in the ruins this morning is thought to be that of Hiram Benedict, jr., of Lockport. His father has been telegraphed for.

Arthur Perry of Welland, Ont., arrived this morning to search for his brother, who is missing and was supposed to have been at the Richmond Hotel on the night of the fire.

A gentleman at Tonawanda reports this afternoon that Capt. W. H. Shepard, of Cleveland, whom he met in that city a few days since, intended to come to Buffalo on business Thursday and was to stop at the Richmond. He has not since been heard of, and a telegram from his family states that they have heard nothing from him.

The Wires Must Go Underground.

BUFFALO, March 19.—A largely-attended meeting of representative citizens was held at the Mechanic's Exchange this afternoon to take action in favor of the removal of all electric wires from the streets and placing them underground. The meeting grew out of the experiences of the fire department at the recent great fires, especially with cables strung by a telephone company. A resolution was adopted declaring the sense of the meeting that the telephone company be required to move their cables before Monday next at noon, and if they failed to do so then the proper authorities are requested to remove them forthwith.

The committee subsequently held a conference with the officers of the Bell Telephone Company of Buffalo, who declared that the summary removal of cables would paralyze the telephone service of the city and in a measure cripple the Fire and Police Departments. The company agreed to remove all cables not in use at once, take down the most dangerous cable on Main-street and remove the others as soon as practicable. The burial of the telegraph wires will be considered on Monday afternoon.

BUFFALO CITIZENS EXCITED.

The Numerous Fires There Supposed to be of Incendiary Origin.

BUFFALO, March 20.—Fire broke out in Morrison's Hotel, 773 Broadway, this morning about 8 o'clock, and the entire building, with contents, was consumed. All the guests succeeded in escaping without injury but [illegible]. This and several cabins of the numerous fires of the [illegible] are supposed to be of incendiary origin, and citizens are greatly excited.

FLOODS IN DAKOTA.

A LARGE TRACT OF COUNTRY UNDER WATER.

BISMARCK, March 19.—The gorge at Sibley Island is still intact, despite the use of dynamite. The scene here to-day is desolate and dreary. The river is still over six miles in width, the gorge at Sibley Island holding water to the highest mark that it reached yesterday. All of last night a swinging light was seen in the woods and several vain attempts were made to send a rescuing party thither; the light was a signal of distress from a settler who, it is learned this morning by looking through a field glass, has been on top of his house since the rising of the waters, swinging a lantern in the hope of calling and securing help. His house is completely surrounded by water and is two miles from the shore of the new made stream and is almost afloat. Two rescuing parties were sent out this morning and have found several families on the roofs of their houses. Field glasses are being used with good results, as numerous settlers have been discovered, some of them perched on floating timbers.

To-day a snow-storm prevails. The current over the new made channel is running over ten miles per hour and the drift ice shoots along at a terrific speed. A large bear was seen on a cake of ice this morning. The City of Mandan is completely inundated and the water is running through the streets. The situation at the river landing here is unchanged. The river is still running through the boarding houses and the river residences up to the second floor.

The worst is coming. The great rise at Fort Buford is now half way here, and will reach this point some time to-night. This will make the highest water ever known in these parts, and unless the gorge breaks at Sibley Island the City of Mandan will be in danger of annihilation. Little Heart River flows into the Missouri just below Mandan, and should ice in this stream break to-day or before the Buford rise arrives the entire surplus water of the flood will be backed into Mandan.

The high trestle of the Northern Pacific Railroad is wrecked. Bismarck is the terminus of the Northern Pacific. Yesterday's passenger train with its load of people, bound for the Pacific coast and intermediate points, lay on the side track here all night, and will not be able to leave for several days. Renewed efforts to break the gorge at Sibley will be made, but it will be waste of dynamite. The gorge consists of six miles of solid ice, wedged into the bottom of the river and piled to a hight of thirty feet. Rescuing parties have not returned and there is the greatest anxiety over the result of their journey. All the mail routes are blocked. A stage starts for Fort Yates this morning with a load of passengers.

A Blizzard Intensifies Suffering.

ST. PAUL, March 19.—A Bismarck special to the Pioneer Press says: There is a furious blizzard raging to-night and the air is so thick with snow that it is impossible to see across the street. Relief parties which were sent this morning, and about whose safety the greatest concern was felt, came back this afternoon, one boat bringing "Dutch Mike" and Thomas Whitey, taken from a shack where they had been for nearly twenty-four hours, and the yawl bringing H. McCarty and wife and C. A. Beal, found on a little mound opposite Fort Lincoln, with the water within six inches of them. In such a blinding storm the return of the boats is little short of miraculous. The report of the drowning of Supt. Graham, on the Mandan side, can not be verified here, as there is no communication. There is no ice running in the river, which indicates that the gorge is still holding above. The Buford rise of thirty feet cannot get here before to-morrow. The train from the East to-day brought more emigrants, and there are now over 100 here. The Northern Pacific is returning East passengers who desire it free.

Perilous Position of the Settlers.

BISMARCK, March 20.—The fearful blizzard of yesterday abated last evening and left over six inches of snow throughout the Northwest. This will add to the flood, and as the sun has come out warm to-day, the tributaries of the Missouri are already growing from the melting snow. The rescuing parties that made the wonderful journey into the lowlands yesterday and saved the lives of six men and one woman, who were perched upon the tops of houses and in the trees, are the heroes of the day.

A telegram from Fort Lincoln yesterday announced that people could be seen from that point standing on hay stacks and in trees, and that unless they were rescued they would perish in the flood. It is believed that the people rescued are the ones referred to in the Lincoln despatch, although many claim that the country directly opposite the fort is settled, and numerous inhabitants of the flooded district are still in danger, if not swept away. A report also comes from the north to the effect that at Painted Woods the settlers have been in the trees and on hay-stacks for two days, and relief parties have been sent to that point.

If the present state of affairs should remain a week, the Missouri would have a permanent channel cut across the country, at least two miles east of its old course. The ice is floating freely to-day and is being lodged in blocks of from a rod to a quarter of a mile in length on the farms and meadow land of the settlers. The Northern Pacific trestle has not been repaired and it is impossible for the company to work upon the structure on account of the floating ice.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottle, 10 cents. Try it. eodw4

Satisfied Confidence.

J. B. H. Girard, of St. Edwidge, Clifton, P. Q., says, "I am well satisfied with the use of Burnock Blood Bitters; it has cured me of dyspepsia that I had for three years. I used five bottles, and shall tell every person I know that may be attacked with similar sickness, and should not be afraid to guarantee every bottle used." 2w12d

A Good Medicine.

Harry Ricardo, of Toronto, agent for Fine Art Publications, states that he was so troubled with deafness for eight years that he could scarcely attend to business, until he tried Yellow Oil. He desires to make this fact known, for the benefit of others afflicted. 2w.21

PUBLISHING THE ASSESSMENT ROLL.

Commenting on a correspondence that appeared in a recent number of the EXAMINER, advocating the publication of the assessment roll, the Trenton Courier says:

"The correspondent of the EXAMINER touches a vital point in the affairs of the municipality. We pay our assessors $300 to assess the town, and the two chosen to the office are as well qualified as the collective wisdom of the Council can select. The men exercise their best judgment in fixing the value of each parcel of property, personal and real, but in many instances they are dependent on the owner for the figures set down. Now, in the matter of personal property and income there is a latitude taken that makes the record a farce. No man wants to tell of property (known to many but hidden from the assessor) possessed for the pleasure of paying taxes on the same. In the case of real estate values differ very much also, and property set down at a thousand dollars would not be sold for five times the assessed value. If the roll were published most of these irregularities could be remedied. The cost need not be a hindrance to the publication. The Advocate and the Courier will do the work on a guarantee of the balance after the sale of copies is complete, or we will accept a bonus of a sum to guarantee against absolute loss, or the town can get the work done and charge so much per copy. We feel assured there is no property owner who would not willingly give 15 or 20 cents for a copy of the roll printed. How much better it would be before the Court of Revision sat to have the printed roll in the hands of the property owners. We hope our city fathers will order the work done at once and thus prepare the way for a just and equitable assessm-nt of our town. There are many other considerations that will strike the thoughtful reader for the publication of the roll."

No doubt the suggestion dealt with, if carried into effect, would have a good result. In general, municipal assessments are imperfectly made, and any plain promising to secure a more comprehensive and equitable assessment, should be favorably considered.

We can sympathise with the following complaint of the Ottawa Free Press, and would suggest that some of the subordinates be ministerially stirred up. Our contemporary says:—"The distribution department of the Ontario Legislature is badly conducted. The votes and proceedings, for example, are kept for days and then issued in one bundle, and when received are old and useless. They should be issued day by day. The annual reports are distributed in the same manner, and when received are practically useless to newspapers. It is a small grievance, perhaps, in the eyes of the cabinet ministers, but it is one which causes considerable annoyance and ought to be remedied."

The Sultan of Morocco has rigidly prohibited the sale or purchase of intoxicating liquors of any kind. This is an easy edict to enforce in a country where plurality of wives is a custom. It is an easy matter for a man to swear off when his indulgence is attended with so serious results—for instance, when he has from fifteen to twenty wives sitting up for him till he "comes home from the club." The average man can stand the expostulations and cross-questionings of one wife, but when twenty wives open their batteries in a volley, he is quite ready to "swear off" and stay sworn.

If the distribution of railway subsidies among the different provinces had been conducted by the Dominion Government, on a fair basis, that is in proportion to population or in proportion to the amount contributed in the way of revenue, Ontario's share of the twenty millions voted to provincial railways during the past five years, would have been much greater. On the former basis, that of population, the grants would have amounted to nine millions instead of three millions; on the basis of the amount contributed to the Dominion revenue, Ontario's share would have been ten millions. But the distribution was made on political grounds, or, in other words, to purchase political support.

THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Sixth Parliament—First Session.

FRIDAY, March 18th.

The Legislature met at 3.30 p.m. About a score of petitions were presented, representing almost every part of the Province, asking the Legislature to provide instruction in public schools regarding the effects of alcohol on the human system.

Among the new bills introduced was one to prevent frauds in connection with the sale of horses.

Mr. Murray's bill regulating the driving of saw logs on Ontario streams was read a second time and referred to a special committee.

Mr. Wood's bill to amend the Railway Act came up for a second reading, and was supported by Mr. Wood and Mr. Pardee. The bill provides for a check on railroad engineers in making surveys, and prohibits the condemnation of lands not absolutely necessary. Referred to a special committee.

Mr. Graham's bill to amend the Real Property Limitation Act was the occasion of a brief debate. The author of the bill supported its provisions, and contended that the present act allowed the introduction of abuses in the vesting of titles. The Attorney-General opposed the amendment and said that while the present act might not be perfect in all respects he had been unable for years to form a workable amendment. He proposed to introduce an amendment when he could find one commendable to his judgment.

The bill was withdrawn.

A number of private bills were read a second time.

DR. TALMAGE IN THE WEST

"NO MAN CARED FOR MY SOUL."

CHEER FOR THE DISHEARTENED.

No Blame Attaches to Those Who Are Able to Render Assistance If They Are Not Asked—If You Miss Heaven It Will Be Your Own Fault.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 20.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., preached in the Second Presbyterian church of this place this morning. He arrived here yesterday from St. Louis, and is stopping over Sunday on his way to Topeka, Kan. After expounding an appropriate chapter he gave out the hymn beginning:

Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to Thy bosom fly.

His subject was "Cheer for the Disheartened," and his text, Psalms cxlii, v. 4: "No man cared for my soul." Dr. Talmage said:

David, the ruddy lad, had become the battle worn warrior. Three thousand armed men in pursuit of him, he had hidden in the cave of Engedi, near the coast of the Dead Sea. Utterly fagged out with the pursuit, as he must often been worn out with the trials of life, he sat down and cried out: "No man cared for my soul."

If you should fall through a hatchway, or slip from a scaffolding, or drop through a skylight, there would be hundreds of people who would come around and pick up your body and carry it to your home or to the hospital. I saw a great crowd of people in the street, and I asked: "What is the matter?" and I found out that a poor laboring man had fallen under sunstroke; and all our eyes were filled with tears at the thought of his distrusted wife and his desolated home.

We are all sympathetic with physical disaster, but how little sympathy for spiritual woes! There are men in this house who have come to midlife who have never yet been once personally accosted about their eternal welfare. A great sermon dropped into an audience of hundreds of thousands will do its work; but if this world is ever to be brought to God it will be through little sermons preached to private Christians, to an audience of one. The sister's letter postmarked at the village—the word uttered in your hearing, half of smiles and half of tears—the religious postcript to a business letter—the card left at the door when you had some kind of trouble—the anxious look of some one across a church aisle while an earnest sermon was being preached, swung you into the kingdom of God. But there are hundreds of people in this house who will take the word that David used in the past tense, and employ it in the present tense, and cry out: "No man cares for my soul."

You feel as you go out day by day by the tug and jostle of life that it is every man for himself. You can endure the pressure of commercial affairs, and would consider it almost impertinent for any one to ask you whether you are making or losing money. But there have been times when you would have drawn your check for thousands of dollars if some would only help your soul out of its perplexities. There are questions about your higher destiny that ache, and distract, and agonize you at times. Let no one suppose that because you are busy all day with hardware, or drygoods, or groceries, or grain, that your thoughts are no longer than your yard stick, and stop at the brass headed nails of the store counter. When you speak once about religious things you think 5,000 times. They call you a worldling. You are not a worldling. Of course you are industrious and keep busy, but you have had your eyes opened to the realities of the next world. You are not a fool. You know better than any one can tell. You know that a few years at most will wind up your earthly engagements, and that you will take residence in a distant sphere where all your business adroitness would be a superfluity. You sometimes think till your head aches about great religious subjects. You go down the street with your eyes fixed on the pavement, oblivious of the passing multitudes, your thoughts gone on eternal expedition. You wonder if the Bible is true, how much of it is literal and how much is figurative law, if Christ be God, if there is anything like retribution, if you are immortal, if a resurrection will ever take place, what the occupation of your departed kindred is, what you will be 10,000 years from now. With a cultured placidity of countenance you are on fire with agitations of soul. Oh, this solitary anxiety of your whole lifetime! You have sold goods to or bought them from Christian people for ten years, and they have never whispered one word of spiritual counsel. You have passed up and down the aisles of churches with men who knew that you had no hope of heaven, and talked about the weather and about your physical health, and about everything but that concerning which you most wanted to hear them speak, viz., your everlasting spirit. Times without number you have felt in your heart, if you have not uttered it with your lips, "No man cares for my soul."

There have been times when you were especially pliable on the great subject of religion. It was so, for instance, after you had lost your property. You had a great many letters blowing you up for being unfortunate. You showed that there had been a concatenation of circumstances and that your insolvency was no fault of yours. Your creditors talked to you as though they would have 100 cents on the dollar or your life. Protest after protest tumbled in on your desk. Men who used to take your hand with both of theirs and shake it violently, now pass you on the street with an almost imperceptible nod. After six or eight hours of scalding business anxiety you go home and you shut the door, and throw yourself on the sofa and you feel in a state of despair. You wish that some one would come in and break up the gloom. Everything seems to be against you—the bank against you. Your creditors against you. Your friends suddenly become critical against you. All the past against you. All the future against you. You make reproachful outcry: "No man cares for my soul!"

There was another occasion when all the doors of your heart swung open for sacred influences. A bright light went out in your household. Within three or four days there were compressed sickness, death obsequies. You were so lonely that 100 people coming into the house did not break up the solitariness. You were almost killed with the domestic calamity. A few formal, perfunctory words of consolation were uttered on the stairs before you went to the grave; but you wanted some one to come and talk over the whole matter, and recite the alleviations, and decipher the lessons of the dark bereavement. No one came. Many a time you could not sleep until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, and then your sleep was a troubled dream, in which were re-enacted all the scene of sickness, and parting, and dissolution. Oh, what days and nights they were! No man seemed to care for your soul.

There was another occasion when your heart was very susceptible. There was a great awakening. There were hundreds of people who pressed into the kingdom of God; some of them acquaintances, some business associates, yes, perhaps some members of your own family were baptized by sprinkling or immersion. Christian people thought of you, and they called at your store, but you were out on business. They stopped at your house; you had gone around to spend the evening. They sent a kindly message to you; somehow, by accident, you did not get it. The Minister of the Gospel swept through the surf and everybody seemed to get in but you. Everything seemed to escape you. One touch of personal sympathy would have pushed you into the kingdom of God. When on communion day your friends went in, and your sons and daughters went into the church, you buried your face in your handkerchief and sobbed: "Why am I left out? Everybody seems to get saved but me. No man cares for my soul."

Hearken to a revelation I have to make. It is a startling statement. It will so surprise you that I must prove it as I go on. Instead of this total indifference all about you in regard to your soul, I have to tell you that heaven, earth and hell are after your immortal spirit—earth to cheat it, hell to destroy it, heaven to redeem it. Although you may be a stranger to the Christians in this house, their faces would glow and their hearts would bound if they saw you make one step heavenward. So intricate and far reaching is this web of sympathy that I could by one word rouse a great many prayers in your behalf. No one cares for your soul! Why, one signal of distress on your part would thrill this audience with holy excitement. If a boat in any harbor should get in distress, from the men of war, and from the sloops, and from the steamers the flying paddles would pull to the rescue. And if now you would lift one signal of distress all these voyagers of eternity would bear down toward you and bring you relief. But no! you are like a ship on fire at sea. They keep the hatches down, and the captain is frenzied, and he gives orders that no one hail the passing ships. He says: "I shall either land this vessel in Hamburg or on the bottom of the ocean, and I don't care which." Yonder is a ship of the White Star line passing. Yonder one of the National line. Yonder one of the Cunard line. Yonder one of the Inman line. But they know not there is any calamity happening on that one vessel. Oh! if the captain would only put his trumpet to his lip, and cry out: "Lower your boats! Bear down this way! We are burning up! Fire! Fire!" No. No. No signal is given. If that vessel perishes, having hailed no one, whose fault will it be? Will it be the fault of the ship that hid its calamity, or will it be the fault of the vessels that, passing on the high seas, would have been glad to furnish relief if it had been only asked? In other words, my brother, if you miss heaven it will be your own fault.

No one care for your soul! Why, in all the ages there have been men whose entire Business was soul saving. In this work Munson went down under the knives of the cannibals whom he had come to save, and Robert McCheyne preached himself to death by 30 years of age, and John Bunyan was thrown into a dungeon in Bedfordshire, and Jehudi Ashman endured all the malarias of the African jungle; and there are hundreds and thousands of Christian men and women now who are praying, toiling, preaching, living, dying, to save souls.

No one care for your soul! Have you heard how Christ feels about it? I know it was only five or six miles from Bethlehem to Calvary, the birthplace and the deathplace of Christ; but who can tell how many miles it was from the throne to the manger? How many miles down, how many miles back again? The place of his departure was the focus of all splendor and pomp; all the thrones facing his throne; his name the chorus in every song and the inscription on every banner; his landing place a cattle pen, malodorous with unwashed brutes, and dogs growling in and out of the stable. Born of a weary mother who had journeyed eighty miles in severe unhealth that she might find the right place for the Lord's nativity—born, not as other princes, under the flash of a chandelier, but under a lantern swung by a rope to the roof of the barn. In that place Christ started to save you. Your name, your face, your time, your eternity, in Christ's mind. Sometimes traveling on mule's back to escape old Herod's massacre, sometimes attempting nervous sleep on the chilly hillside, sometimes earning his breakfast by the carpentry of a plow. In Quarantania the stones of the field, by their shape and color, looking like the loaves of bread, tantalizing his hunger. Yet all the time keeping on after you. With drenched coat treading the surf at Genessaret. Howled after by a bloodthirsty mob. Denounced as a drunkard. Mourning over a doomed city, while others shouted at the sight of the shimmering towers. All the time coming on and coming on to save you. Indicted as being a traitor against government, perjured witnesses swearing their souls away to insure his butchery. Flogged, spit on, slapped in the face and then hoisted on rough lumber, in the sight of earth, and heaven, and hell to purchase your eternal emancipation. From the first infant step to the last step of manhood on the sharp spike of Calvary a journey for you. Oh, how he cared for your soul! By dolorous arithmetic add up the stable, the wintry tempest, the midnight dampness, the abstinence of forty days from food, the brutal Sanhedrim, the heights of Golgotha, across which all the hatreds of earth and all the furies of hell charged with their bayonets, and then dare to say again that no one cares for your soul.

A young man might as well go off from home and give his father and mother no intimation as to where he has gone, and, crossing the seas, sitting down in some foreign country, cold, sick and hungry and lonely, saying: "My father and mother don't care anything about me." Do not care anything about him! Why, that father's hair has turned gray since his son went off. He has written to all the consuls in the foreign ports, asking about that son. Does not the mother care anything about him? He has broken her heart. She has never smiled since he went away. All day long, and almost all night, she keeps asking: "Where is he? Where can he be?" He is the first thought in her prayer and the last thought in her prayer, the first thought in the morning and the last at night. She says: "Oh, God, bring back my boy! I must see him again before I die. Where is he? I must see him again before I die." Oh, do not his father and mother care for him? You go away from your Heavenly Father, and you think he does not care for you because you will not even read the letters by which he invites you to come back, while all heaven is waiting, and waiting, and waiting for you to return. A young man said to his father: "I am going off; I will write to you at the end of seven years and tell you where I am." Many years have passed along since that son went away, and for years the father has been going to the depot in the village, on the arrival of every train, and when he hears the whistle in the distance he is thrilled with excitement, and he waits until all the passengers have come out, and then he waits until the train has gone clear out of sight again, and then he goes home, hastening back to the next train; and he will be at every train until that son comes back, unless the son waits until the father be dead. But oh, the greater patience of God! He has been waiting for you, not seven years, not nine years, but for some of you, twenty years, thirty years, forty years, fifty years—waiting, calling—waiting, calling; until nothing but omnipotent patience could have endured it. Oh, my brother, do not take the sentiment of my text as your sentiment. We do care for your soul. One Sabbath night, years ago, in my church in Brooklyn, a young man appeared at the end of the platform and beckoned to me: "I have just come off the sea." I said: "When did you arrive?" Said he: "I came into port this afternoon. I was in a great 'blow' off Cape Hatteras this last week, and I thought that I might as well go to heaven as to hell. I thought the ship would sink; but, sir, I never very seriously thought about my soul until to-night." I said to him: "Do you feel that Christ is able and willing to save you?" "Oh, yes," he replied, "I do." "Well," I said, "now are you willing to come and be saved by Him?" "I am," he said. "Well, will you now, in the prayer we are about to offer, give yourself to God for time and eternity?" "I will," he said. Then we knelt in prayer, and after we had got through praying, he told me that the great transformation had taken place. I could not doubt it. He is on the sea now. I do not know what other port he may gain or lose, but I think he will gain the harbor of heaven.

Star of peace, beam o'er the billow,
Bless the soul that sighs for Thee;
Bless the sailor's lonely pillow,
Far, far at sea.

It was sudden conversion with him that night. Oh, that it might be sudden conversion with you to-day! God can save you in one moment as well as he can in a century. There are sudden deaths, sudden calamities, sudden losses. Why not sudden deliverances? God's spirit is infinite in speed. He comes here with omnipotent power, and he is ready here and now, instantaneously and forever, to save your soul. I believe that a multitude of you will to-day come to God. I feel you are coming, and you will bring along your families and your friends with you. They have heard in heaven already of the step you are about to take. The news has been cried along the golden streets and has rung out from the towers, "A soul saved! A soul saved!" But there is some one here to-day who will reject this gospel. He will stay out of the kingdom of God himself. He will keep his family and his friends out. It is a dreadful thing for a man just to plant himself in the way of life, then keep back his children, keep back his companion in life, keep back his business partners—refuse to go into heaven himself and refuse to let others go in.

A young man, at the close of a religious service, was asked to decide the matter of his soul's salvation. He said: "I will not do it to-night." Well, the Christian man kept talking with him, and he said: "I insist that to-night you either take God or reject Him." "Well," said the young man, "if you put it that way, I will reject Him. There, now, the matter's settled." On his way home on horseback he knew not that a tree had fallen aslant the road, and he was going at full speed, and he struck the obstacle and dropped lifeless. That night his Christian mother heard the riderless horse plunging about the barn, and, mistrusting something terrible was the matter, she went out and came to the place where her son lay, and she cried out: "Oh, Henry! dead and not a Christian. Oh, my son! my son! dead and not a Christian. Oh, Henry! Henry! dead and not a Christian." God keep us from such a catastrophe.

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,130.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance with six per cent. per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

LOCAL NEWS.

All About a Girl.

On the twenty-third day of February, Lizzie Straition, a young girl about fourteen years of age, laid an information before Police Magistrate Holland of Port Hope, says the Times of that place, against John Weatherup, a farmer of Hope, that he did on the night of the 14th January criminally assault her at his house. It would seem that the girl was without friends in this country, and had for a couple of years been hired out as a servant among the farmers in that vicinity, and was at the time of the assault hired with Weatherup. The assault, she said, was committed during the absence of Weatherup's wife, and while the girl and he were alone in the house. She explained her long silence by saying that her opportunities for coming to Port Hope were very infrequent, but that on the first opportunity she had laid the information.

When the day appointed for the hearing arrived, the girl did not appear, and the case has been adjourned and remanded time and again, while all search for her has failed to discover her whereabouts. Provincial Detective Joseph Rodgers came down a few weeks ago and took the search in hand, but without success as yet. The case again came up before P. M. Holland, Friday, Weatherup being brought from Cobourg jail, where he has been incarcerated. Another case having grown out of the Weatherup one, in which George Staples, of the township of Hope, was charged by Detective Rogers with having, by force or persuasion, procured the absence of Lizzie, the Weatherup case stood until after the hearing of this charge against Staples. The evidence elicited from one witness, who overheard a conversation, went to show that Staples had given the girl Straition $25 to skip out. Staples was committed for trial and Weatherup was remanded to gaol.

The Hamilton Helpers.

Programme of Their Work for This Week—Their Efforts so Far.

Already the influence of the Hamilton Helpers, Messrs. Hebdon, Stead and Dunnet, is being felt. Their meetings are attended by large crowds, and their earnestness and simplicity of their speech and manner of procedure will continue to draw full houses. All of yesterday's meetings were well attended, particularly the afternoon mass meeting for men in the Opera House, which was jammed. At the men's meeting Saturday night the house was about half filled. A number of young men were on the platform as a choir, and were assisted by the piano and a cornet. A feature of the evening's proceedings was the personal experience related by Mr. Dunnet, a young man of 28 years, though looking much younger. When 16 years old he went to work in a printing office, and got in with bad companions. He began to attend the pool room, and there learned to drink the liquor which afterwards proved such a curse. His first attempt at reformation was induced by the solicitations of his sweetheart, who made him promise to give up the habit before allowing him to attend upon her. For three months he kept the pledge, and then he was married. Two weeks after marriage he was taken home drunk. Again he straightened up, only to sink still lower, and the operation was repeated until at last he found himself raging in the delirium tremens. He recovered, a wreck of his former self, and for a time lived correctly; but the demon once more took possession of his breast, and he fell. Through all this his noble young wife stuck to him. Position after position he lost, after gradually working himself up to a place of merit, by the habits of intemperance which mastered his reason. At last, he and his brother, while both half-drunk at the time, were saved in a Salvation Army barracks in Hamilton, and from that time to this he has been leading a sober and Christian life. Mr. Dunnet inveighed strongly against pool-playing. He knew no game so enticing and soul-destroying as pool. He related several narrow escapes he had while braking on the railway, which he attributed to a kind Providence, and some terrible scenes he had witnessed, the result of intoxication. He was very earnest, and exhorted young men to cling to Christ and never touch a drop of whisky.

Mr. Hebdon conducted services in the Baptist church Sunday morning and evening to large congregations. Messrs. Stead and Dunnet sang in the two Methodist churches.

Owing to some misunderstanding, the children's meeting announced for Saturday afternoon was not held. It will take place to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon in Mr. Sproule's hall at 4 o'clock.

Monday, 21st, 8.30 p.m.—Charlotte street Methodist Church.

Fairweather's Fine Fix-up.

A Brief Glance at the Improvements in Messrs. Fairweather & Co's Large Dry Goods Store.

In a few days everything will be in applepie order again, and then customers may prepare to take a holiday and run through Messrs. Fairweather & Co's. dry goods store at the corner of George and Simcoe streets. Their new spring stock is arriving every day, and as soon as the alterations are completed, the firm will be prepared to hold a permanent "At Home" every day during the season in regular business hours. All visitors will be treated with courtesy—and bargains.

A noticeable improvement has been made in the store front, which is now completely plate glass, except for the frames and supports. On the Simcoe street corner the show window area has been increased by the removal of the brickwork and the substitution of a large plate glass, uniform in size with the other two windows of the front. The common sash-light windows on the sides of the recess forming the doorway have also been replaced by plate-glass, while a double glaze door of handsome pattern has been swung. Further along Simcoe street, next the rear doorway, a large plate-glass, 9-10 x 9-3, has taken the place of the ordinary sash-lights. It is intended to substitute for the centre side-door another plate-glass window, which will make three plate-glass show windows along Simcoe street, where formerly there was but one, and that a very common one.

Inside the alterations are almost as startling. The interior has been renovated from stem to stern. A new floor has been laid, the ceiling nicely papered, all the woodwork painted, the counters grained in imitation of mahogany and walnut, with real walnut tops, while the other fixtures are nearly all new—a completeness of renovation which makes the establishment practically new.

Upstairs the front windows of sash-lights will be removed and in their place will be put plate glass windows, while the ceiling will be papered, the woodwork painted and everything be done up in thorough house-cleaning style. The work has been done under the supervision of Mr. James McLennan, foreman for Mr. Geo. A. Cox proprietor of the buildings.

Ennismore.

The Late Mrs. Shannahan.

It is with regret that the death is recorded of Mrs. Daniel Shannahan. She has been suffering for some time, from lung disease, and on March 17th her long and painful illness, borne with Christian patience and fortitude, was brought to a close. The deceased lady was the daughter of the late Joseph Sheehan, one of the pioneer settlers of the township of Ennismore. Her death leaves bereaved a husband, and nine children, most of whom are grown up. Mrs Shannahan enjoyed the love of all her intimate friends and the respect of all who knew her, which was shown by the exceedingly large gathering assembled at the funeral, which took place on Saturday. The funeral was one of the largest which ever occurred in the township, 120 equipages having been in the funeral procession. A solemn requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Kailty, parish priest. During the services the reverend father took occasion to pass a high eulogy upon the character of the deceased lady, who was noted for her piety, fidelity to the church, and her many excellent qualities as a wife, mother and neighbor. The body was laid at rest beside that of the father and mother in Chemong Lake cemetery.

South Monaghan.

A musical and literary entertainment will be held in South Monaghan, under the auspices of the South Monaghan Agricultural Society in the Agricultural Hall, Centerville, on Tuesday evening, March 22nd. The programme will consist of vocal and instrumental music, readings, recitations, etc. Admission, adults 25c., children 10c.; proceeds in aid of the building fund of the Society. All are invited.

A BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

The Lake Carriers Will Have All They Can Do This Season.

CHICAGO, March 20.—The managers of the Lake Marine Insurance pool held a conference here yesterday and decided to maintain the present organization, with headquarters at Buffalo. The outlook for the coming season at this port is unprecedented in the amount of tonnage that will arrive and depart. The operation of the Interstate Commerce Bill will, it is thought, make the demand for grain bottoms constant and imperative, and it is reported that there is now being stored at Duluth and Milwaukee grain and flour enough to employ the whole available fleet during the entire season.

A St. Thomas Dentist Burned Out.

ST. THOMAS, March 19.—About 11 o'clock last evening a fire broke out in Dr. C. Fitzsimmons' dentist office, Talbot-street east. The firemen were promptly on hand and succeeded in confining the fire to the one building, which was considerably damaged. The loss on Fitzsimmons's tools and furniture will probably amount to $400, and is insured in the Norwich Union for $600. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A Canadian Crook in New York.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Albert Chabot, a young Canadian, was held to-day charged with forgery. He obtained $25, on a bogus check two years ago from Joseph Delano. He has also committed other forgeries, and confesses to having perpetrated two burglaries. For the past two years Chabot spent the most of his time in Maine and Canada.

—The ladies shun the March sun shine. Every lady who ventures out in daylight has her handsome visage swathed in veiling as if she were suffering from toothache or as if she were an obaliisque, escaped from the Turkish Sultan's harem. One can't blame them; the complexion of Peterborough girls is worth preserving.

GERMAN EMPEROR

THE EMPEROR WILLIAM'S NINETIETH BIRTHDAY.

BERLIN, March 21.—Telegrams congratulating Emperor William are coming from all the German colonies. The Emperor and suite went to the opera on Saturday evening. Yesterday the Emperor received the Grand Dukes Vladimir and Michael, and afterwards returned their visit at the Russian Embassy. The Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria has been much feted. The Prince of Wales yesterday wore the Prussian uniform. Sir Arthur Sullivan has arrived here.

Congratulations From the Pope.

ROME, March 21.—Monsignor Galimberti, the special delegate sent by the Vatican to convey its congratulations to the Emperor William on the attainment of his 90th year tomorrow, telegraphs from Berlin that he has been very favorably received; that he has had an audiences with Prince Bismarck and has requested an audience with the Emperor in order to personally present to him the autograph letter of congratulation sent by the Pope.

A Gay Crowd at Berlin.

BERLIN, March 21.—Emperor William's birthday festivities virtually began yesterday, many societies and clubs throughout Germany holding reunions in honor of the occasion. The influx of strangers into Berlin continued to-day. The concourse in front of the Emperor's palace was even greater than that of yesterday, and there was a similar enthusiastic demonstration, the crowd chanting the hymn "Heil dir Sieger Kranz." The day was observed as a general holiday, and the streets were thronged with people watching the completion of the decoration. All the thoroughfares are gorgeous with flags and floral designs. The weather is clear and cold. There was a constant stream of equipages along Linden-avenue of royalties exchanging visits or going to the palace. The Prince of Wales, Archduke Rudolph and the Grand Duke Vladimir were especially ovated. Among the latest arrivals are the King and Queen of Saxony and Prince Louis of Bavaria.

The Emperor in the afternoon gave a special audience to foreign envoys, headed by Mgr. Gallimberti. Count Herbert Bismarck officiated at the reception. This was the only official reception of the day. Afterward there was a state dinner to the royalties.

The students at a reunion this afternoon made final arrangements for a torchlight procession to-night and for the reception of delegates from the German universities. It is reported that many pardons will be announced to-morrow and civil and military honors conferred.

The Gazette says that Dr. Lauer, the body physician of the Emperor, will receive 300,000 marks, with a statement recognizing his efficient services. The Berlin municipality will give 300,000 marks to the William and Augusta Benevolent Institute. The Emperor will receive to-morrow the municipal delegates appointed to present the donation.

Russia and Germany.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 21.—The Official Gazette censures the Russian press for reviving the allegation that the relations between Russia and Germany are unfriendly despite the Government's denial. The paper adds that the revival of this statement is especially reprehensible just because it is made so soon after the expression of the "bloody judgments at Rutschuk," for which many partisan journals have held Germany and her agents in Bulgaria responsible. The Gazette in conclusion says: "Such statements are idle calumny. Russia is perfectly satisfied in confiding her interests to Germany's agents in Bulgaria. Newspaper statements discrediting the measure are groundless."

Austria's Peaceful Hopes Fortified.

PESTH, March 21.—Herr Tisza, Hungarian Premier, in a speech delivered in the lower house of the Hungarian Diet to-day, said that since the Austro-Hungarian extra military credits had been voted, the peaceful hopes entertained by the Government had been fortified. The Government, he contended, could only maintain peace if the monarchy was in a position to throw its weight into the scale with decisive effect, and if necessary make an energetic defence of the country's vital interests against other powers which, although equally desirous of peace, kept themselves prepared for war. The sacrifices made for the army, Herr Tisza declared, had been well employed, for the military strength of the monarchy was now on a footing not that of any other power.

FIRE AT CHAUTAUQUA.

A Good Number of Summer Cottages Totally Destroyed.

ERIE, Pa., March 21.—At Chautauqua last night fire started in the old Curtis building and made steady progress up Temperance avenue, which lies along the bank of the lake, working its way towards the Assembly building of the Chautauqua assembly. At 12 o'clock seventeen buildings were on fire, and nearly all the property of transient residents. At midnight the fire had taken hold of the new and magnificent Assembly Hall building, rapid work with it. At 2.15 a.m. the flames had swept Summerfield and Simpson avenues. The Children's Temple and amphitheatre have both been completely destroyed. The handsome cottages of the members of congress destroyed to-day. At 3 o'clock the Athenaeum Hotel, at Mayville, was saved, and the fire was under control.

The burned district includes the entire length of Summerfield and Simpson avenues, extending from the old auditorium to the hotel grounds. Simpson-avenue was the most fashionable thoroughfare of the grounds. The

HARD FIGHT AT HAND

THE COERCION BILL BEFORE THE BRITISH HOUSE.

LONDON, March 21.—A. J. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, intimated in the House of Commons this evening that the Government would to-morrow introduce a bill making better provision for the prevention and punishment of crime in Ireland.

W. H. Smith gave notice that the Government would move that the new Irish Crimes Bill have precedence over all orders of the day.

John Morley gave notice that he would move an amendment to the Government's motion to the effect that the "House declines to set aside business in favor of a measure increasing the stringency of the law in Ireland, whilst no effective security is taken against the abuse of the law by the exercise of excessive rents." Mr. Morley's notice was received with loud cheers by the Irish members.

Coercion to be Vigorously Opposed.

LONDON, March 21.—Mr. Smith's motion for urgency for the Coercion Bill will be opposed to the uttermost by the combined strength of the Gladstonians and the Parnellites. Mr. Smith promises an early statement of the land proposals, but the Opposition are determined not to permit the introduction of the Coercion Bill until the land question has been dealt with.

Ministerialists admit the inability to enforce the new closure rule without a protracted debate extending beyond Easter.

The Gladstonians greeted with derisive laughter Mr. Smith's statement that he hoped to reach the second reading of the bill on Monday.

The Irish Conservatives will raise a question why Father Kelleher is allowed special privileges in Kilmainham Jail. Father Kelleher provides his own food and has a servant, and his friends have free access to him. Dr. Kenny, medical officer of the National League, has applied to be allowed to attend Father Kelleher and to supply him with champagne if his health requires it. The Conservatives will insist that the prisoner be treated according to the rules as a first class misdemeanant.

Mr. James Ferguson in the Commons tonight said he hoped to lay before the House before the Easter recess a despatch from the United States Government relating to the fisheries dispute.

Mr. Morley's Amendment.

LONDON, March 21.—The Parnellites are gratified at Mr. Morley's amendment and heartily approve of it. The amendment was drafted last week by Morley, Harcourt and Gladstone with the view of embarrassing the Radical-Unionists, some of whom the Conservatives admit, may possibly abstain from voting. Lord Hartington is aware of the Government's plans, and has approved them. He will doubtless carry the bulk of his followers with him. The debate on Mr. Morley's amendment will last several nights, and it is certain Mr. Gladstone will speak.

It is the present intention of the Parnellites and a large section of the Gladstonians to oppose the Coercion Bill at every stage, even to force a division on the formal motion for permission to introduce the bill. All the parties have urgent whips.

A COMMISSION TO ASIA.

A Proposition Made by the British Columbia Legislature.

OTTAWA, March 21.—The decision of the Government as to whether or not it will abolish tolls on the St. Lawrence canals is anxiously awaited by carriers and merchants. The council did not discuss the question at its meeting this afternoon, but will do so before the week is out.

Sir Charles Tupper leaves on Wednesday for Halifax, where he will receive a deputation representing the iron and steel trade. He will be back early next week.

Postmaster Patteson, who has been in the capital a few days, returns to Toronto to-morrow.

Premier Sullivan, of Prince Edward Island, left for home to-night. While here he urged the Government to make a start at building the tunnel under Northumberland Straits, but there is no probability that an appropriation for this work will be recommended to Parliament.

Col. Ross, of the Finance Department, comes into a superannuation allowance of $1800 in two weeks. On his return in a few months from England the Colonel will take up his residence in Toronto.

The Journal to-day says the Government intends to send a commissioner to Asia to collect and study the trade statistics of China, Japan and other countries, the kind and amount of trade done, where to and where from, also as to what manufactures, commercial and agricultural products of Canada are suitable to these countries. Sir John A. Macdonald told The World that the Government had not yet decided on the proposition, which emanated from the British Columbia Legislature.

A Judge Suspected of Being Connected With the Organization.

ST. LOUIS, March 21.—The latest advices from Christian County are that three more Bald Knobbers have been arrested and that on Saturday fifteen of the twenty-eight prisoners waived examination and were taken heavily ironed to Springfield, where they will have to lie in jail until the court meets in August (unless a special session is ordered), the offence with which they are charged not being a bailable one. Judge Reuben L. Hale, of the Christian County Court, has received a written request, by numerous prominent citizens, to resign, as he is accused of being a member of the Bald Knobbers, and of having induced others to join the organization.

The examination of thirteen of the prisoners will be held at Ozark to-day or to-morrow. All of those for whom warrants were issued for the killing of Edens and Green have been arrested, except Wm. Watke, the leader of the attack on the Edens' house, who was wounded and is believed by many to be dead. The authorities feel certain they have sufficient evidence to convict all the persons implicated in the murder. It is evident now that the organization is not nearly so strong as was at first reported, and that it contains not over two hundred members.

Stringency in Montreal.

MONTREAL, March 21.—The wholesale grocery establishment of Tees, Wilson & Co., corner of St. Peter and Lemoine streets, was entered by burglars some time between Saturday night and Sunday morning. The robbers attempted to blow open one of the safes, but were unsuccessful. They then cried their hands on the small safe in the office, but must have been frightened away before they had accomplished their ends, as they decamped leaving several of their tools behind.

Stringency in Money at Montreal.

MONTREAL, March 21.—There was a spell of stringency in the money market to-day, caused by brokers adopting a more cautious policy, in view of the present high prices of stocks, and calling in their loans, making it more difficult to carry stocks on the street. A week ago loans were made at 4½, and it was understood that 7 was bid this afternoon.

ANNEXATION GUN.

CONFEDERATION ASSAILED IN THE QUEBEC HOUSE.

QUEBEC, March 21.—The debate in the Assembly to-day on the address in reply, took an unexpected tone, which, if carried out to its legitimate conclusion, is fraught with danger to confederation.

Mr. David, member for Montreal East, one of the most noted Liberals in the province, and who defeated Attorney-General Taillon at the late election, resumed the debate and startled the House by the tone of his evidently prepared speech. Referring to Mr. Mercier's proposition of a convention of provincial Governments at Quebec to consider the best way of securing more money from the Federal Government, he denounced Confederation in the strongest terms because it was tending to Legislative Union, which, he declared, was the height of Sir John's ambition. He was one of those who had left the Conservative party when Confederation was proposed and now he find a majority of the province, certainly all the French Canadians on his side. In England, he declared, Sir John Macdonald would have succeeded in accomplishing his sinister design (i.e. Legislative Union), had it not been for Sir George Cartier. He had not renounced his design and he was the testamentary executor of Lord Durham. He then dealt with the disputes between the provinces of the Dominion, particularly in regard to Quebec, and laid the blame for the financial position of the province on the framers of Confederation, who had only given Quebec a paltry annual allowance, which was utterly inadequate to their wants. "In other words," said he, "we, who had enriched the other provinces, whose customs and excise duties had been expended in opening up new provinces, which in the future may be used to crush us, were obliged to play the role of the mendicant. The present state of things, if continued, would inevitably lead to Legislative Union, and in such an event the people of Quebec would be forced to look for relief across the border and seek for a union by which, at any rate, their material interests would be benefited."

The speech caused a great sensation and is everywhere regarded as signifying, that in the event of defeat the Liberals will make annexation their leading plank.

ARCHBISHOP LYNCH'S LETTER.

He Addresses Lord Randolph Churchill on the Irish Question.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Herald publishes a letter written by Archbishop Lynch of Toronto to Lord Randolph Churchill. The letter begs His Lordship to study the Irish question, to join Mr. Gladstone in bringing peace and prosperity to Ireland, and to effect a more stable union between England and that country. The Archbishop tells "Her Most Gracious Majesty" that she "need not be grateful to her responsible ministers for disgracing her otherwise glorious reign of fifty years by periodical oppression of the poor and starving Irish and finishing it up by more than savage acts of cruelty and violation of all true law and order." The Archbishop, after drawing attention to the great growth of the Irish element in the United States, hints that Canada is at the mercy of the Americans. "Should a misunderstanding," he says, "happen between England and the United States Canada would in a few days be over-run by American troops. It would cost that republic very little, as Irish-American military organizations would supply very largely both men and money. It is well known that there are many annexationists here in Canada of pocket loyalty who think that annexation to the United States would bring them more trade and money."

The letter concludes as follows: "Let us finish, my dear lord, this perhaps too long letter, by imploring you again and again to help your country, England, out of the murky chaos in which she is, and induce her to do justice at length to Ireland. Don't wait for the opportunity of the oppressed Irish, 'England's difficulty.' Ill-treatment and calumnies will never reconcile former friends or foes. Union is strength, and the condition of the Irish at home and abroad does not add to the strength or honor of England. We must not forget how the great Roman Empire fell. England is not beyond the reach of eternal justice."

THE BUFFALO FIRE.

Workmen Engaged in Razing the Walls of the Ruin.

BUFFALO, March 21.—To-day men were put to work tearing down the walls of the Richmond Hotel, and as soon as safety is assured search will be made in the ruins for any remains that may be buried there.

The additional deaths make the list stand at present as follows:

Wilson Purcell.
Kate Wolfe of Lockport.
Mark Osborne, body not yet recovered.
Lizzie Welch, servant.
Katie Kent, servant.
Minnie Kelly, servant.
Henry B. Rumsey of New York, died at hospital.
Max Dahlman of Rochester.
Jennie Mann, aged 8 years.
Joseph Sayer, included among the missing, has turned up at Lockport.

Several of the injured at the hospitals are so badly injured that no hopes of their recovery are entertained, and others, if they succeed in pulling through, will be disfigured for life.

THEY ARE NOT NIHILISTS.

The Russian Constitutionalists Publish a Manifesto.

VIENNA, March 21.—The manifesto by the Russian Constitutionalists is published. They repudiate any connection with the recent attempt on the life of the Czar. The manifesto enumerates the aims of the present parties, especially emphasizing that of humbling all before Prince Bismarck. The three points of the party creed are: That a representative chamber be summoned, the Czar [illegible] the right to decide with the majority or minority as he pleases; that the press [illegible] freedom of speech, and that [illegible] be amnestied.

The Troy Theatre Burned.

TROY, N.Y., March 21.—The Grand Central Theatre, near the corner of Second and Fourth-street, was destroyed by fire at 2 o'clock this morning. Loss $11,[illegible]; insurance $8000. Several persons running from the theatre heard an explosion as the flames broke out. There had been a light in the building since 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Grand Central was built by fire in December, 1883, and rebuilt the following year by Peter Curley, [illegible]. The building was owned by Zeph F. Mitchell. The theatre will not be rebuilt.

CORNWALL, March 21.—These officers of the Cornwall Lacrosse Club have been elected: President, C. J. Mattice; Vice-Presidents, James Young, Duncan Macrae, J. [illegible] donald; Secretary, C. W. Young; Treasurer, M. W. Mulhern; Executive Committee, the officers and F. Lally, Geo. Orton, A. A. Smith and H. Adams; Delegates to N.L.A., C. W. Young, F. Lally, H. Adams; [illegible] Young, alternate.)

MUSIC IN THE SCHOOLS.

The EXAMINER drew attention to the subject of teaching music in the schools a few days ago, and in speaking of the aims of the Royal Canadian Society of Musicians to have music made one of the compulsory subjects in Model Schools, said this would be favorably received by the present Minister of Education. Our anticipations were absolutely correct. The deputation from the Society waited upon the Minister last week and was very graciously received. Mr. Ross said he sympathized with the efforts of those interested in seeing musical instruction adopted as a part of the school curriculum. He had already instructed inspectors to press the matter on the teachers of the Province. Statistics showed that only about 160,000 out of the half-million of pupils were studying music. These figures were very disappointing. He also stated that he hoped to be able to make music compulsory at the opening of the Model Schools next September. With regard to High Schools and Collegiate Institutes it was more difficult, as they were not directly under Government control, but by influencing public opinion, this, too, might be accomplished in the near future.

ONTARIO'S FINANCES.

The Monetary Times, a sound, financial journal, not much given to being warped by political prejudices, has the following to say respecting the finances of this Province, and "the unbroken career of good management," responsible for this condition of things:

"Treasurer Ross' financial exhibit shows that the total revenue of Ontario last year was $3,148,660.01, and the total expenditure $3,181,709. But he explains that the difference between the ordinary receipts and the ordinary expenditure represents a surplus of $73,483. If exceptional items of expenditure are to ten into account, there is a deficit of $33,049, "accounted for by the large extra sum paid to the municipalities of $93,000 on land improvements." With each recurring budget discussion, the amount of the surplus invariably comes under dispute; objection being made by some [illegible] which is held [illegible] Dominion Government, and interest paid thereon. Whether the railway subsidies, in the form of annual payments should be capitalised, is also disputed. According as these questions are answered, the figures of the surplus are made to vary. But it cannot be denied that, on the whole, Ontario is, in a financial point of view, a model province, and one which other provinces might, if even remotely, imitate with advantage. If a perpetual surplus has in it something abnormal, at least it tells of prudence, and has for its basis an unbroken career of good management.

A PETITION has been forwarded to the Quebec government asking for the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate the charges of boodling preferred against certain Montreal aldermen.

THE Winnipeg Free Press says that the Premier of Manitoba is the weakest of all the public men of Canada. The Premier of Manitoba is near his political end, and, like the old Dutchman's wife, will be a very heavy loss to the party, weighing—like that admirable lady—370 pounds.

THE New Brunswick legislature is about to adopt a license law whose provisions are very much similar to those of the Crooks act, in force in Ontario. It aims at the appointment of inspectors of licenses, the restriction of the number of licenses in proportion to population, the giving of power to husbands, wives and parents to forbid the sale of liquor to relatives, and the making of vendors liable for damages for suicide or death resulting from improper sale. Prohibition, it is conceded, is out of the question at present, and it is desired that the sale of liquor shall be more restricted.

It must have required a mighty conviction of the truth to have extracted the following from the Montreal Star, the most unswerving of Conservative partisans and the blindest to anything good in Liberal methods. The Star says:—"The finances of the Province of Ontario are in a healthy condition. The total receipts were last year $3,148,660 and the total expenditure $3,181,709. The ordinary expenditure of the province was, however, $2,679,976. The small excess of expenditure over receipts in that province is not of any consequence as it, so far from [illegible] its debt, has a surplus of $6,680,339."

The Halifax Morning Chronicle declares that Sir Charles Tupper has secured a majority in Nova Scotia by promises as bribes. Formerly the practice was to purchase votes with money. Now there is a promise to accomplish great things. Formerly a few [illegible] were bought, now multitudes of [illegible] people are corrupted. Sir [illegible] method is not the old fashioned one of paying dollars for votes. This, [illegible] in the case of the indig[illegible], but now in the late elections all [illegible] were to be undertaken, and all [illegible] enterprises were to be [illegible]. These promises, of course, were [illegible] on the hope of realization, and [illegible] was sufficient to turn an adverse [illegible] sentiment in favor of the Government candidates.

A Reality Enough.

"For many years I suffered with my throat and abdominal troubles. I was very weak and debilitated for years, and had advice from [illegible] friends they said I would have to undergo an operation. I tried B. B. B. instead. [illegible] cured me." M. A. Spanish, Regina, Ont. 2w15

Gospel Temperance Meeting.

Another of the Series by the Reformed Rakers.—A Large Audience and Earnest Addresses.

The Charlotte street church was filled to the doors last evening. After the opening exercises, Rev. Mr. Wallace in a brief but impassioned address urgently appealed to all temperance people to do their best in the church [illegible] to support the cause by their backward example, [illegible] the good work. Now is the time to [illegible] work for their cause, their God and their country.

After a song by Messrs. Stead and Dunnet, "The Temperance Lifeboat," Mr. Dunnet spoke for a few minutes on the subject of temperance. He declared that the whole evil of intemperance rested upon the first glass, and the man who drank one glass of liquor, and perhaps never got drunk, was just as guilty as he who drank a hogshead. Mr. Dunnet spoke very pathetically of the miseries entailed upon a man's family by intemperance, illustrating his remarks by several pitiful tales of crime and ruin.

A nicely rendered solo by Mr. Stead was followed by the appearance of Mr. Hebdon, who devoted his time to a refutation of the charges made that the Scott Act was a farce, a failure, and a fraud. He told his stories in a humorous matter-of-fact vein which at once pleased and edified his hearers. He detailed his experiences in several Scott Act towns, which, despite all statements to the contrary, were far better off now than under the license system. Too many of the failings of the Scott Act were due to its careless enforcement, the slack support it received from the authorities, and the unrighteous decisions given by the judges of our land. But it was the fault of temperance people also in not putting the right men in the right place. However, he believed the Scott Act would be better enforced in future than ever before, because the men on both sides in Parliament were being brought to a better understanding of the case. He touched upon political influences in dealing with this matter, but so evidently in a purely disinterested way that no offence could be taken, and accused the Globe of being angry because the Mail got the inside track on it on the temperance question by coming out straight for prohibition. Mr. Dunnet recounted several gains made by the Scott Act during the last year, the most important of which he regarded as the Mail's conversion. He closed with an earnest exhortation for all to come out on the side of temperance and fight the evil to the bitter end.

The usual collection was taken up, and after another duet by Messrs. Stead and Dunnet, "Sleeping on Guard," the Doxology was sung and the meeting closed with prayer.

To-night a meeting will be held in the Mark street Methodist Church, Ashburnham.

Literary Notes.

The Art Interchange for February 26th, contained the most beautiful colored Study of Apples that has ever been published; it was in water-color and showed a branch having a brilliant variety of this fruit; the design being as free as though the subject was a study of flowers instead of fruit. This study has been very cordially received by the public; and when one considers how unlike and how superior it is to the average fruit study, its popularity is not surprising. The Art Interchange, for March 26th, is to be something of an Easter number; it will contain a study in color of Narcissus, and also two pretty designs in black and white for decorating Easter Cards. An admirable figure sketch for panel decoration, 20 x 10, entitled "noon," (the second of a series), will also be given. It shows a beautiful faced girl with her arms thrown above her head supporting a branch of flowers, while on either side of her is a large branch of Sun Flowers, and a column supporting a dial. The frieze to this charming study shows a noonday sun, with butterflies flitting across the face of it.

This series of decorative figure panels is of great use to amateur artists, as the designs are simple and very few lines are made to to have a telling effect. This design can be either be painted in oil, water-colors or dye painting, or it will lend itself very charmingly to embroidery.

The Art Interchange is published at 37 & 39 West 22nd Street, New York. Price, 20 cents a number.—

The board have also resolved to ask the Minister of Railways and Canals that the Welland Canal be opened with seven feet of water before April 15 and with twelve feet before April 26, and have adopted the resolution, of which notice was given at a former meeting, in favor of an international Congress of American and Canadian Boards of Trades in Montreal, from June 1 to 3 of this year, to discuss reciprocity and other matters.

A COLLISION AT INGERSOLL.

The St. Louis Express Runs into a Freight—No Lives Lost.

INGERSOLL, March 20.—About noon to-day a railway smash up occurred in the Grand Trunk yard here. The St. Louis express, No. 53, going west ran into the engine of a special freight, No. 628, going east. The engines were a complete wreck, as was also the baggage car. Two passenger cars were also badly damaged. Although a number of passengers were on the express train, no one was injured, excepting the conductor, who was lightly cut on the face. It was reported that the air brakes being defective caused the accident.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symtoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottle, 10 cents. Try it. eodw4

A Mean Retort.

Satisfied Confidence.

J. B. H. Girard, of St. Edwidge, Clifton, P. Q., says, "I am well satisfied with the use of Burdock Blood Bitters; it has cured me of dyspepsia that I had for three years. I used five bottles, and shall tell every person I know that may be attacked with similar sickness, and should not be afraid to guarantee every bottle used." 2w12d

Never Laughed.

It is asserted that Soloman never laughed. That's not remarkable. A man who had 700 wives, and a few hundred mothers-in-law was not likely to be in a very merry humor.

TO DEPOSITORS—Deposits are received by this Company both on [illegible] and for periods of one year or more. The rate of interest allowed on amounts deposited on current account and which may be withdrawn by cheque in such manner as the depositor may from time to time require, is FOUR per cent., either paid or compounded half-yearly, and the rate on yearly deposits is FIVE per cent.

TO INVESTORS—The five and ten year FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES of the Company which are issued in denominations of $100, $200, $400 and $1000 each, transferable by endorsement, with half-yearly interest Coupons attached, payable at the Head Office of the Company in Peterborough, or at any Branch of the Bank of Toronto in Canada, afford a safe and convenient mode of investment.

The funds of the Company being invested in first mortgages on Real Estate, no better security can be offered to depositors or debenture-holders, they having a first charge on the whole Assets of the Company, the shareholders having the security [illegible] that the amount so invested was over $800,000, and on the security of real estate at least double that value.

By the laws of Ontario, Trustees, Executors and Administrators may deposit Trust Funds of the estates which they control in this Company, and are free from all further liability, a privilege of which many have largely availed themselves.

TO BORROWERS—Money is obtainable from this Company on approved Real Estate security at the Lowest Current Rates of Interest.

The Mortgage may be repaid by yearly instalments, or otherwise as may be agreed upon, the interest ceasing at once on all amounts paid on account of the sum borrowed.

Applications may be made either to the Head Office, or to any of the Agents.

Change of Structure Due to Change of Function.

• • • Here, however, my chief purpose is to add an instance showing, even more clearly, the connection between change of function and change of structure. This instance, dilfied in nature to the other, is presented by those varieties, or rather sub-varieties, of dogs, which, having been household pets, and habitually fed on soft food, have not been called on to use their jaws in tearing and crunching, and have been but rarely allowed to use them in catching prey and in fighting. No inference can be drawn from the sizes of the jaws themselves, which, in these dogs, have probably been shortened mainly by selection. To get direct proof of the decrease of the muscles concerned in closing the jaws or biting, would require a series of observations very difficult to make. But it is not difficult to get indirect proof of this decrease by looking at the bony structures with which these muscles are connected. Examination of the skulls of sundry indoor dogs contained in the Museum of the College of Surgeons, proves the relative smallness of such parts. The only pug-dog's skull is that of an individual not perfectly adult; and though its traits are quite to the point they cannot with safety be taken as evidence. The skull of a toy-terrier has much restricted areas of insertion for the temporal muscles; has weak zygomatic arches; and has extremely small attachments for the masseter muscles. Still more significant is the evidence furnished by the skull of a King Charles's spaniel, which, if we allow three years to a generation, and bear in mind that the variety must have existed before Charles the Second's reign, we may assume belongs to something approaching to the hundredth generation of these household pets. The relative breadth between the outer surfaces of the zygomatic arches is conspicuously small: the narrowness of the temporal fossæ is also striking; the zygomata are very slender; the temporal muscles have left no marks whatever, either by limiting lines or by the character of the surfaces covered; and the places of attachment for the masseter muscles are very feebly developed. At the Museum of Natural History, among skulls of dogs there is one which, though unnamed, is shown by its small size and by its teeth, to have belonged to one variety or other of lap-dogs, and which has the same traits in an equal degree with the skull just described. Here, then, we have two if not three kinds of dogs which, similarly leading protected and pampered lives, show that in the course of generations the parts concerned in clenching the jaws have dwindled.—Herbert Spencer, in Popular Science Monthly for April.

Stradivarius Violins.

"We have persons coming in here every day with so-called Stradivarus violins," said a maker of violins in the Bowery. "They are common German violins with a copy of the Stradivarius label printed or pasted on the inside. Pretty much every violin, no matter by whom it is made, has some such label, so that labels nowadays do not count for anything. Inexperienced persons may be fooled by them, but anyone who knows anything about violins pays no attention to them.

"I suppose makers put the label on because some people like to pretend they have a valuable violin. A Stradivarius violin is worth anywhere from $3,000 to $15,000, and they are not very plenty. They can be told by their shape and by the kind of varnish on them.

"It is unsafe to pay a big price for a violin until it is passed upon by experts. I have known a label to be taken off a genuine Stradivarius and inserted in an imitation one, for the reason that one could be sold on its merits, while the other needed the label."—N. Y. Sun.

The Welsh communities of the United States are talking of taking up 10,000 acres in one locality and buying adjacent lands for the purpose of establishing a monster colony.

A New York young man in three months gave his seat in a car to fifty-nine women and girls—young women, old women, pretty girls, ugly girls, shop girls, cash girls, rich girls, colored girls, washerwomen, women with diamonds and sealskins, and very shabby women. Every one of these thanked the young man. One grateful old soul gave him a doughnut from her basket; several of them held his satchels and bundles while he stood. He had a cough once and a kind-hearted old woman told him what to do for it, and on one occasion a grateful old Irishwoman announced to the car that he was "a gintleman if ever there was wan." Perhaps, after all, when a woman neglects to thank a man for giving her a seat it may only be because she fears he may be a "masher" who will take advantage of her good breeding.

The average salary of the Methodist preacher of the Baltimore Conference is $785 a year. Sixty preachers, some of them married, receive less than this amount, and one receives only $140.

Mothers speak of "soothing Syrup," the quieting of Cholic. Rarely should it be necessary. Dr. Low's Perfect Safe Worm Syrup will cure all stomach troubles of worms, whether stomach, bowel or teething. Mrs. [illegible], Nanton, Ottawa, Co., Mich. 6dw12

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Burdock Blood Bitters to recommend it to the world, and we consider it a duty we owe to suffering humanity to say that after using three bottles of B.B.B. we were entirely cured of a severe case of Scrofula, from which we had been a great sufferer for years. We are now in the prime of life and enjoy perfect health. We cannot say too much in favor of B.B.B. Mrs. Jane Lee, Hamilton, Ont.

Only One Dose

Is required of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil to relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it for the year, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and not one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about its sample bottles to try, only 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and dealers, in the United States and Canada. eodw4

On the Head of it.

"How follow it sounds," said a patient to the doctor regarding his case, "all that's nothing," said the doctor, "wait till we get to the head."

Cure for Croup.

Prompt relief to prevent suffocation from the accumulation of tough mucous—the formation of false membrance—and the constriction of the air passage, is necessary in case of a sudden attack of croup. Hagyard's Yellow Oil should be used at once, afterwards Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. 2w12d

The Story of Hundreds.

I a recent letter received from Mrs. Sarah A. Mills, of Wheatley, Ont., she says, "I was a sufferer for six years with dyspepsia and liver complaint. My food did not digest and I grew weaker every day. I lost appetite and had little hope of recovery. I tried many remedies, but all in vain, till I took Burdock Blood Bitters. The first bottle gave relief; after taking seven bottles, I am thankful that I now enjoy good health." 2w12d.

A Stationary Engine.

"The next thing, I suppose," says old Growler, "will be a steam engine made entirely of paper, and then we shall have what you might call a stationary engine."

This is to certify that I have used McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and do honestly say that if it cost me one hundred dollars ($100.00) a bottle I would not be without it, as it has done me more good than all the medicines I ever used, and I feel like a new man.—Yours truly, ALEX. STEEL, Carleton Place, Ont. This medicine is for sale at 50c. and $1. per bottle at John McKee's drug store. eodw12

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,138.79, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or infirmability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavi s produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interrogated to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Sentry rend we understand, has also paid the policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance with six per cent per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $62,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

LOCAL NEWS.

New Machinery for the Bridge Works.

Last week a new was received at the Central Iron Bridge Works for cutting iron and steel bars. It is a new machine, manufactured at Derby, Eng., only patented in 1885, and this is the first one of its kind yet brought to the American continent. The saw is run by complicated machinery, is of the finest metal and weighs 4,000 lbs., and can cut through a bar of iron or steel 24 inches wide and 9 inches thick. It has three feeds, and saws at the rate of ½, 1½ or 1¼ inches per minute.

Bertram & Sons, of Dundas, Ont., are making for the Bridge Works one of the largest steam hammers ever manufactured in Canada. The weight when completed will be twelve tons, and it will strike an awful blow. The hammer head and piston weighs 2,000 pounds, which, with a drop of 26 inches, will give tremendous force. It is expected to be in operation some time in April.

Triplets.

Mr. T. Dolan is the happy man. He has settled down to an exclusive clothing trade, and in addition to the announcement of this fact made through the medium of the press, (for Mr. Dolan, as a user of printer's ink, is wise in his generation,) he has mounted a triple blazon prominent and permanent on the walls of his block. In each of the three panels so to speak, of the brick work of the Hunter street wall is placed beautifully lettered signs from the artistic brush of Mr. John Simmons. Now he that runs may read, and he that reads may run—inside and find on T. Dolan's shelves a literal verification of the promises and assurances made on his behalf by the picturesque triplets—the "banners hung on the outer walls" —what promises John Simons makes with his facile brush, Pete Simons fulfils, in the cutting and composition of irreproachable and stylish suits. In mounting these signs, Mr. Dolan has done the next best thing to advertising in the EXAMINER.

The Board Elected.

The following Board of Management of St. Paul's church was elected by ballot Sunday :—Messrs. Robert Innes, Hugh Davidson, Thomas Hay, William Walsh, Walter Paterson, Peter Hamilton, Melville Millar, H. S. Macdonald, W. G. Ferguson, Adam Hall, D. B. Gardner, and Thos. Tucker. At a meeting of the new board Monday night Mr. Hamilton was appointed chairman, Mr. Gardner Secretary. Committees were drafted and other business transacted.

Competent judges say Turnbull's is the right house to buy Boys ready-made Clothing, he gives you new styles, low prices and good quality combined.

Mortuary Statistics.

The mortuary statistics for February show the number of deaths during the month to have been as follows in the undermentioned places:—Montreal, 390; Toronto, 157; Hamilton, 48; St. John, N.B., 43; Halifax, 54; Ottawa, 55; Kingston, 28; Sorel, 26; Winnipeg, 76; London, 23; Quebec, 127; Hull, 27; Belleville, 16; St. Hyacinthe, 11; Fredericton, 6; Charlottetown, 13; Three Rivers, 18; Brantford, 11; Sherbrooke, 10; Peterborough, 8; Woodstock, N. B., 7; Guelph, 9; St. Thomas, 12; Chatham, 15; Galt, 6.

THE RIVER-DRIVERS will find it to their advantage to call at R. J. Kidd's and get a pair of river boots. Satisfaction warranted.

BOYS made happy. Only 60c. for a pair of boots at Kidd's new store.

Incorporated Cheesemen.

The Ontario Gazette announces the incorporation of Messrs. Andrew Young, George J. Milburn, Michael Sanderson, Robert J. Edmison, James B. Ewen, Isaac Milburn, Frank Sanderson, Thomas H. Milburn and Thomas Edgar, of the township of Smith, County of Peterborough, under the name of Central Smith Dairy Company, limited, with a capital stock of $3,000.

Sending Brick Abroad.

Messrs. Mark Curtis & Sons have disposed of all last season's make of bricks, and can of course supply no more till this season opens. They are shipping 6 carloads (30,000) per C. P. R. to Tweed. They shipped about a quarter of a million per C. P. R. last season.

GLADSTONE has written criticism on Tennyson's new poem, but forgot to say anything about Kidd's cordovan boots, handsewed, for $3.90 per pair.

The Recount

of business done by R. Stinson & Son since the commencement of their closing out sale has shown a largely increased majority in the number of the electors who have secured bargains since the 1st of February.

Everybody is surprised and pleased at the quantity of the 4 button Kid Glove Turnbull is selling at 50 cts. a pair. All the new grey shades in the popular Alexandre make now in stock.

CHILDREN should not be allowed to go with wet feet, because a pair of solid kip boots from Kidd's new store costs only 75 cents.

The Land of Alligators and Ethiopians.

A Most Descriptive of Florida and Her Chief City—Views of the Oldest City of St. Augustine—Canada is the Best Place After All.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McIntyre returned from Florida Saturday night, whither Mrs. McIntyre went last January for the benefit of her health, and Mr. McIntyre later on. Mrs. McIntyre has brought home with her a number of curiosities and specimens natural to the country, and since her arrival she has been besieged night and day by hosts of admiring friends anxious to congratulate her on her improved health and her safe return home, to each of whom, of course, must be shown the shells, and pictures, and alligators, with a few minutes running explanation of each. She very kindly went through the routine once more for the EXAMINER on Monday, and we must say a more sprightly, business-like little woman than Mrs. McIntyre it has never yet been our good fortune to meet.

Mrs. McIntyre said she spent nearly all her time at Jacksonville and St. Augustine, a book of views of which latter place she exhibited. First came a view of the city from the bay, showing a low, old sea wall built to protect the streets from the depredations of the watery element, composed of a solid, durable and rock-like mixture of small shells and mortar. All the old houses in the city are built of the same material, and Mrs. McIntyre exhibited a small chunk of the composition taken from which is over one hundred years old-quaint and moss grown, a picture of which came next in order. High up on the front gable is an old belfry, the bell in which rings every half hour as designated by a large clock fixed in the front lower down. An interior view of the church discloses a fine altar. A feature of the building is that the windows are built very high up, beyond the reach of men, in order to afford protection from intruders in time of war. The floor is of the same material as the walls, and the centre aisle is hollowed out to a depth of several inches from the effects of a hundred years' travel up and down its length by devout worshippers, while in the pew bottoms numerous little cup-shaped cavities have been formed from the long-continued practice of kneeling in silent prayer. Around the baptismal font, too, a circular hollow has been smoothed out by the constant scuffling of hundreds and thousands of feet. The church is used to this day, and beyond its aged and moss-grown appearance is "none the worse for wear," as the saying is. Then came a picture (a photograph taken from a painting hanging in the church,) of the first mass celebrated by the Spaniards upon their first landing upon American soil in 1565. A rude altar of stones had been built, about which the Spanish soldiers, clad in steel and shining armor, knelt devoutly, while their ships lie in the offing and the natives are gathered curiously about. Only a small part of the fort built by them is yet standing. Some old Spanish residences were shown, like miniature fortresses with their massive walls and porticos fitted with gates, built in times of war to afford protection to the inmates. Two streets of St. Augustine stretched their narrow, torturous lengths between high buildings, one hollowed out in the centre like a ditch by the continual stream of pedestrians, and so narrow as to across the way. There are no sidewalks in St. Augustine; the roads are built of the same hard substance as the houses, and answer for walking, as well as the driving of two-wheeled carts, the only vehicles in use there. A four-wheeler is never seen in that southern city. A Spanish tower and fort, viewed from its various entrances, and the United States barracks and Governor's house, a beautiful place, were next shown. Pictures of the oldest house in St. Augustine, the old and new light-houses, and some hotels were followed by a view of the old Spanish graveyard, in which are three large pyramids, underneath which rest the bones of 700 soldiers. The graveyard is kept up by the United States Government, but the old tombstones are succumbing to the ravages of time and gradually crumbling away under their mantles of mould-gathering moss. A picture of the old city gates and wall of St. Augustine was shown. Only the one gate and a small remnant of the wall are now standing. In the gate is a large niche where the sentinels used formerly to stand on guard, but the recess has been barred over to preserve it from despoliation by mischievous persons. The wall and gates tell a story in themselves of the old-time grandeur and capacity of the Spaniards, and their speedy downfall. The live oak, which never dies, and the palmetto were shown in their contrasting beauty, the oak's broad, umbrageous branches hung with masses of moss trailing almost to the ground; the palmetto's long, stark trunk, pointing a hundred or more feet into the air, and capped by immense tufts of palm radiating their luxurious leafage in every direction. The Green Cove Springs, about fifteen miles up St. John River, are the resort mainly of rheumatics, who expect to derive benefit from the sulphur springs there. A few more views of minor importance, including some Jacksonville hotels, all magnificent buildings, concluded the book.

Mrs. McIntyre then displayed some of her curiosities, including a basket of small shells of beautiful coloring and design, which were picked up on the beach, just as shown now, without any polishing or cleaning. She had also a piece of sponge torn from the bottom of the sea and some white coral, which grows in immense reefs all over the bay. Some king and queen conchs were also shown, with the most delicate coloring in the world and of imaginable, on one of which was painted a view of the tower. Mrs. McIntyre stated that these various shells were cast up on the shore in a storm, after the subsidence of which and as soon as old Sol again bursts forth in all his red-hot glory, so to speak, these testacea begin to revolute towards their native element, gliding, rolling or tumbling along as the case may be. These shells may be purchased very cheaply. Mrs. McIntyre paid only $3 for her whole collection, "but" said she, "I would not sell them again for $35." A star fish, sea-egg, (a thin, egg-shaped shell made of a hard, limy substance by insects,) and a sea-gull, dressed and shaped into a screen were also exhibited.

In reply to questions, Mrs. McIntyre said Florida was a very hot country, the temperature averaging 85° in the shade, and at times reaching as high as 96°. One week ago last Thursday she was wearing white dresses and seeking cool spots and shady nooks—to day, in Canada, a fire is far from uncomfortable. The soil of Florida is white, glistening sand—sand that blisters the feet and blinds the eyes by the power of the sun's reflection. Vegetables are available all the year round, but the principal fruit is the orange—oranges here, oranges there, oranges everywhere, nothing but oranges. One of the most extraordinary things Mrs. McIntyre saw on this her first trip to Florida, was ripe oranges, ripe oranges and orange blossoms on a tree at the same time. This is a common thing in Florida, but decidedly novel for a Canadian. Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre travelled through a good part of Florida, and met plenty of white people; nearly all tourists, though, as there are very few white inhabitants of that tropical country. The heat was bad enough in winter; what it is like in the depth of summer can better be imagined than told. Every white man who has $50, in his pocket, said Mrs. McIntyre, goes off far away from Florida in summer as that $50 will take him. The negroes, though, —and "the woods is full of 'em"— and survive the season through. Florida cities appear to be about 100 years behind the times, and are extremely filthy; even now, in March, the stench is something unbearable to a cleanly person. "After all," said Mrs. McIntyre, "I would not live there for half a dozen fortunes. Canada is the place for me."

Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre also visited Charleston, S. C., and saw the terrible ravages of the recent earthquakes in that city. As a souvenir of the city, Mrs. McIntyre brought home with her two canaries with wonderfully beautiful songs, vastly superior to the ordinary Canadian canary-singer.

"Oh, you mustn't go yet without seeing my pets, my little alligators," said Mrs. McIntyre, and we were shown a small cage in which two little alligators were waddling about on a white cloth bottom. One was about a foot long, being over a year old, and the other was somewhat shorter and younger. They are very tender little dears, and have to be kept in an even, warm temperature. In the course of a hundred years or so Mrs. McIntyre expects to have a nice little pet of an alligator big enough to eat a man.

She told an amusing story of her first arrival at Port Royal in a steamer. It was at night, and as soon as the vessel had been made safe for the night, its passengers were serenaded by half a dozen negroes, who sang "Swanee River," "Gathering up the Shells from the Shore," and other fine old melodies. Mrs. McIntyre said she was delighted, and could scarcely find adjectives sufficient to express her thoughts. It was the sweetest singing she had ever heard in all her life—"perfectly divine," as she finally termed it. On enquiring of the Captain who their musical visitors were, she was told they were the Methodist choir, of Port Royal, who were working on the docks shovelling coal for 20c. a day.

The EXAMINER wished Mrs. McIntyre a very good day and expressed many thanks, and retired to make room for others who were claiming her time and attention.

Guinn vs. Taylor.

This was an action tried at the sitting of the County Court in Dec., 1886, and argued in the January term of same court, when decision reserved. The question in dispute was the illegal seizure of timber by defendant for rent alleged to be due to him by one Prenevean. Judge Weller in giving judgement held that there was no sale, as the landlord was the real bidder, though the bidding was done by an agent, consequently no property passed and defendant was a trespasser. Judgement for plaintiff; damages, $100.00. R. E. Wood for plaintiff, Geo. Edmison for defendant.

GERMANS JOYFUL.

AND HASTE TO HONOR THEIR BELOVED EMPEROR.

BERLIN, March 22.—Among the numerous birthday rumors are reports that the Grand Duke of Baden will be made King of Baden, and that Bismarck will be created Duke of Lauenburg.

Prince Bismarck will give a dinner to the ambassadors and diplomats, the foreign office officials and other imperial secretaries and their chief officials.

Yesterday most of the schools celebrated the event in advance, with speeches and recitations. Each child received a portrait and a short biography of the Emperor in memory of the occasion.

The students cheered loudly at Prince Bismarck's palace, where the Chancellor, Count Herbert Bismarck and Count Rantzau were awaiting their procession. In response to the calls of the students Prince Bismarck opened the window and bowed his thanks. A similar ovation was tendered to Gen. Von Moltke at the offices of the general staff.

The whole affair was conducted in a most orderly manner. During the procession the Emperor called up several students to express his gratification at their manner of congratulating him.

He said he rejoiced greatly in the spirit displayed by them, and that he expected much from the academic youth of Germany, as the circumstances and times were serious.

He questioned many students separately regarding their birthplace, the studies they pursued, the number of terms they had completed and the corporations to which they belonged.

The Empress also expressed her thanks for the ovation. At 11 o'clock, when the cuirassier regiment came to retire the guard at the palace, thousands who still remained burst into enthusiastic cheering, which continued so long that at last the Emperor came to the window and again thanked the people. His appearance had a magic effect. The cheers were redoubled and the national anthem was again sung. The Emperor waved his hand and disappeared.

At a late hour crowds still remained in the vicinity of the palace.

Berlin in Its Best Dress.

BERLIN, March 22.—The city is decorated as it never was before. Garlands, flags, laurels, festoons of evergreens, banners, bright drapery and brilliant carpets are hung on every conspicuous spot. The monument of Frederick the Great is covered with wreaths and flowers. Wherever there is a bust or statue of the Emperor it is buried in flowers. The people are all out in holiday attire and the streets are thronged. Early in the day special memorial religious services were held in all the churches and synagogues and the edifices were crowded. The children from all the schools went in procession, accompanied by bands of music to the church services.

The student's procession past the palace was a grand affair. The bands played the National Anthem and the students sang to the music. The Emperor appeared at the window and bowed, remaining there a considerable time. The great crowd in the street gave him an ovation, the multitude cheering itself hoarse, tiring itself out waving hats and handkerchiefs.

All the members of the Imperial family and all their princely guests drove in procession to the palace and personally tendered their congratulations to the Emperor. The procession was cheered by the crowds in the street.

The municipal procession was preceded by heralds and marshals, bearing the town banner, the whole body of the evangelical clergy, the chief civil and military authorities, representatives of German science, art and commerce, the directors of the Gymnasium and the Burgesses and Communal officers, in all two thousand persons. The procession was accompanied by several bands, which played marches alternately with chorals by trumpeters. The procession went in state from the Town Hall to attend the commemorative religious service in the Church of Nicholas. The clergymen wore all full robes and the officials wore their uniforms and regalia. When the procession entered the church the organ played a prelude. This was followed by the singing of the "Salvum fac Regem" and the chanting of the Ambrosian hymn. The festival sermon was preached by Provost Braechmer. At noon a royal salute of 101 guns was fired from the Koenigsplatz.

Prince Bismarck and Marshal Von Moltke went to pay their congratulations to the Emperor at 1 o'clock. They were enthusiastically cheered all along the route on their way to and from the Palace. The day is being celebrated with similar and equal enthusiasm in all the towns of the empire. A rain storm which set in at 3 o'clock and lasted until 6 had scarcely any effect upon the crowds of enthusiastic Germans who thronged the streets.

The illuminations to-night throughout the city are superb. An especially striking feature is the picture, 100 yards long and 20 yards wide, in front of the Academy of Arts, depicting events in the Emperor's life. Prince Bismarck and General Von Moltke say they have received a wonderful reward for their services, the character of which is as yet unknown to them. All the secretaries of departments were decorated by the Emperor. In receiving the Household deputation the Emperor said: "I have reached this age by the grace of God, and if the Lord helps me, and wants me to, I may live to see another year."

Rejoicing at Canada's German Centre.

BERLIN, March 22.—To-day has been a gala day for the German population of Berlin. From many a housetop the German colors were to be seen floating in the breeze, and from every German's lips patriotic sentiments were heard and many a "hoch" was given for the Vaterland and the aged Emperor. The residences of nearly all our leading German citizens, and even many places on King-street were gaily decorated with flags and evergreens, but the feature of the day was the march of the veterans who had fought and bled for the vaterland, as medals on many a breast demonstrated, in the wars of 1848, 1864, 1866 and 1870-71. Indeed a notable fact was the large number of medals which adorned the breasts of these sons of Germany. The procession was formed at about 2.30 p.m. in front of the North American Hotel and fully 100 ex-soldiers of the Germany army were in the ranks. Headed by the band of the Berlin Musical Society they marched along King-street to the Market House where they were drawn up in line and addressed briefly by Mr. Hartmann. After the address the veterans, joined by the large crowd of people who had assembled, sang "Die Wacht Am Rhein," and forming again, marched to their headquarters. This evening a banquet was given by the veterans, which was attended by the leading citizens.

Celebration at London.

LONDON, March 22.—Count Von Hatzfeldt, the German Ambassador, will give a banquet at the Embassy to-night to celebrate the birthday of Emperor William. The German Imperial standard is hoisted to-day over the German Embassy. Count Von Hatzfeldt received congratulations from all the ambassadors and the English Ministers, as well as from most of the celebrated and distinguished persons in London.

The Times, in an article on the Emperor's birthday, says: "When we reflect upon the scope and vastness of the events in which Emperor William has played a leading part he becomes certainly one of the most remarkable and typical figures to be found in history."

The Berlin correspondent of the Times says that the students' procession yesterday evening occupied half an hour passing a given point, and although its dimensions were respectable enough in point of length, it failed to hold a candle to the grand torchlight demonstration, with costumed groups and historical and allegorical chariots, which greeted Prince Bismarck on the occasion of the 70th anniversary of his birth.

A Brilliant Affair at Paris.

PARIS, March 22.—Count Von Munster, the German Ambassador, held a reception last night in honor of the Emperor and the occasion proved of exceptional interest and brilliancy. The whole diplomatic world, all the members of the French Cabinet and other political celebrities of France, including M. Clemenceau and the prominent foreign residents of Paris, were present. The only representative of the Conservatives who attended was the Duc De La Rochefoucald De Bisaccia. Gen. Boulanger was the lion of the evening. He told Count Von Munster that he was happy to associate himself with those who wished to celebrate the birthday of the German Emperor. De Lesseps arrived after midnight so as to appear, as he explained, at the very beginning of the birthday.

At the Austrian Capital.

VIENNA, March 22.—Banquets and thanksgiving services in celebration of Emperor William's birthday have been arranged for to-day at Gratz, in Austrian Styria, and in several Bohemian towns. Two hundred German residents of Vienna have subscribed the expense of a great banquet to be given here to-night. The Bavarian Minister will preside. All the papers publish laudatory articles of Emperor William's character and career.

At the Czar's Capital.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 22.—The Russian press unite in extolling Emperor William's merits and his efforts to maintain peace and friendship between Germany and Russia.

A Banquet at Montreal.

MONTREAL, March 22.—The German citizens of Montreal celebrated the 90th anniversary of the birth of the German Emperor here to-night by a grand banquet at the Windsor. The German Consul for Canada, W. C. Munderloh, presided. During the evening a despatch of congratulation was sent His Majesty.

THE BUFFALO FIRE.

Another Added to the List of Dead—The Injured Recovering.

BUFFALO, March 22.—The work of leveling the walls of the Richmond Hotel ruins was resumed this morning. A large gang of men has been engaged to clear away the debris, and the search for missing bodies will be continued. It will take two or three days to remove the rubbish between the walls, and it is hardly likely that anything beyond a few charred bones indicating the loss of further lives in the flames will be found among the burnt and molten material beneath the ruins.

The latest addition to the death list is Edward Whelan of Newburg. He died at the General Hospital about 9 o'clock last evening. His remains will be removed to his home to-day. He was a traveling salesman and about 40 years of age. Kate Pierce, at the General Hospital, was in a critical condition this morning but will probably recover. The other patients are improving.

At the Sisters' Hospital all the injured are doing well except Maggie Mulrach and Mary Nolan. The latter is very low. Inflammation of the lungs has set in and her physician fears she cannot recover.

A. W. Merriam of Toronto, at the Tifft House, P. E. Robinson, who is stopping with T. V. Dickinson, the jeweler, M. W. Barse, at Mrs. Hoxsie's, and Hugo Alsthal, at the Stafford House, are rapidly recovering from their injuries. William A. Haven and J. W. Cone, at the Homeopathic Hospital, are convalescent, and Jacob Kahn and Edwin A. Finch, the only patients at the Fitch Accident Hospital, are improving slowly.

Mrs. W. J. Mann is in a critical condition and continues to remain unconscious. Her physician, Dr. Fell, fears that she will not survive her injuries. Mr. Mann's condition remains unchanged. Neither has been advised of the death of the little daughter.

THE RUSSIAN CONSPIRACY.

The St. Petersburg Executioners Have Plenty of Work to Do.

NEW YORK, March 22.—The Star's London cable says: Placards signed by the Revolutionary Committee decreeing the death of the Czar were discovered posted in various parts of St. Petersburg and torn down by the police to-day. Seizures were made of copies of a revolutionary proclamation calling for the adoption of a natural constitution and demanding the freedom of political prisoners. The police report that among the nihilists arrested in the recent loss Hartzman and two men associated with him whose names are for the present withheld. The police to-day discovered documentary evidence that Dr. Gay-eff, the murderer of Colonel Sudeikin, Russian Chief of Police, was elected by the nihilist committee leader of the band of fifty men appointed to assassinate the Czar. Vienna special to-night asserts that one general officer in active service, three cavalry officers and seventeen infantry, artillery and engineer officers have within the past forty-eight hours been suddenly removed their quarters, and that their whereabouts are unknown with the exception of three, whose relatives state that they have been shot on alleged proof of treason.

PERSECUTION IN QUEBEC.

A Bomb Thrown Into a Meeting of the Salvation Army.

QUEBEC, March 22.—While the French portion of the Salvation Army were at worship in the Jeffrey Hale School Hall to-night, some person or persons placed within a broken pane a bomb, which exploded and caused fearful havoc to the front of the building. Fortunately the first meeting, which was largely attended, had closed, and only what is known in the order as the prayer meeting was in progress when an explosion occurred, and but few persons were present outside the staff. No persons were killed, but two or three have been seriously injured, one man having his wrist partly severed by flying glass. The force of the explosion sent the broken glass and debris a distance of some forty feet and over into the interior of the building and came nearly making a victim of Capt. Simcoe, who was at the time leading in the prayers.

The building was filled with smoke and the gas extinguished, leaving the place in utter darkness. The inmates were nearly frightened to death, the women fainting and screaming and the men rushing to and fro in the greatest excitement, unable to realize what had really occurred. The force of the explosion can be easily imagined when people living two blocks away were startled by the loud report and rushed from their houses imagining an earthquake or a repetition of the Parliament building dynamite plot had occurred. It seems almost a miracle that the building was not entirely blown to pieces and all the inmates killed. It can only be conjectured that the plotters placing the bomb became nervous and dropped it to the outside of the window and it thus spent its greatest force in the air.

A visit to the interior of the building shows that the shock must have been terrific, as benches, chairs and tables were overturned in all parts of the hall, the woodwork powder-burned and the place altogether in a dilapidated condition.

The conspirators are believed to be young men belonging to the higher class of society who made themselves very conspicuous in the riots waged against these defenceless women when they first arrived here. The police have set to work upon a clue and it is hoped that the perpetrators will be apprehended.

A HOLY WAR AGAINST RUSSIA.

The Ameer of Afghanistan in Arms Against the Czar.

LONDON, March 22.—Advices from Cabul state that the Ameer has sent printed circulars to the tribes of Kohistan urging them to join him in a holy war against Russia. The circular denounces the Czar as a tyrant and a promise-breaker. It warns the tribes that the Russian troops are daily advancing, and that if they ever occupy Afghanistan they will continue in possession of that country. The circular also tells the people how Turkey, fighting for the cause of Islamism, opposes Russia. The Ameer has summoned the Moslem teachers and doctors throughout the country to Cabul, where they were feasted at his direction, after which the Ameer ordered them to invite the nation to a religious war against Russia. It is asserted by the Ameer's council that the war is now being actively preached. There is discontent in the garrison at Herat. The troops are paid in provisions, as no cash is available. It is stated that trouble is being fomented by Russian spies.

A CHURCH DYNAMITED.

An Episode of the Temperance Agitation in Kansas.

FREDONIA, Kan., March 22.—The Dunkard church at Buffalo, Kansas, twenty miles north of here, was blown to pieces by what is supposed to have been dynamite at 8.30 o'clock last night. A buggy track to and from our window of the church is plainly to be seen, and it is expected that the unknown guilty party will soon be apprehended. The cause is understood to be a bitter feeling upon the temperance question.

The Ocean Yacht Race.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Few steamers arrived at this port yesterday and they brought no definite news of the Coronet and Dauntless. The steamship Rugia, which arrived at the bar late last evening, reports that on the night of March 18, when in latitude 42 deg. .05 m., longitude 49 deg. 38 m., she passed a vessel which showed white, red and blue night signals, followed by a blue light. The officers of the Rugia could not tell whether the lights were on a sailing vessel or a steamer, but the description of the lights makes it very probable that the vessel was the yacht Dauntless.

It was agreed before the race began that in addition to the night signals of the New York Yacht Club, the Dauntless should burn a blue light on passing a vessel at night, and the Coronet a red one. The club's signals are red, green and white, but blue and green are colors easily confounded. According to the Rugia's reckoning this would make the Dauntless to have traversed about 1115 miles, almost exactly east of New York, or about 39 100 of the distance to her destination, on Friday evening. This is not as far as was expected the yachts would have made with the strong westerly gales they have had.

A New Sport in Texas.

GAINESVILLE, Tex., March 21.—News has reached here of an accident which occurred near Whitebread Hill, Indian Territory, last week, resulting in the serious injury of a man named Foster and his wife, the killing of two of their children, and destruction of their house. Foster and his family lived in a log cabin on a ranch. In the corner of the room sat a can of powder. Foster observed a mouse come up through the floor and run around the can, when he secured a pistol and fired several times at the mouse. Finally one shot struck the can and exploded the powder. The house was almost entirely wrecked. A 2-year-old boy was killed outright. A 10-year-old girl was mortally wounded, and Mr. and Mrs. Foster were very badly hurt.

Burglary at Waterford.

WATERFORD, March 22.—About 2 o'clock this morning burglars gained an entrance to H. H. Smale's tailoring establishment by bursting the lock on the front door. They carried off ready-made and other goods to the amount of $100. They also extended their tour to Wm. Perkins' shoe store, and took about $15 worth there. A liberal reward is offered for the guilty parties.

POLITICS IN THE PULPIT.

Considering the active part taken by several ministers and clergymen in recent political contests, it is not surprising that the Toronto Ministerial Association, at its latest meeting, took up for discussion the subject of the introduction of political questions into the pulpit. There was, of course, difference of opinion, but the trend of opinion evoked was in the direction of excluding politics from the pulpit. Rev. Septimus Jones, M.A., who had introduced the subject, said his reading of the New Testament was that Our Saviour did not intend his ministers to be politicians, but he maintained that it was the duty of the minister to inculcate the principles of true citizenship. A minister should certainly speak out on such matters as affected us as Christian citizens, and advise his flock to think a certain way, to pray a certain way, and then to vote the way they prayed. He honored and respected men who had the courage to speak out and declare their opinions, but there was one exception, and that was in the case of men who spoke out just on the eve of an election, in order to benefit their party thereby. Rev. G. M. Milligan agreed with the drift of the Rev. Septimus Jones' remarks, and thought the thanks of the association were due to him for introducing the subject. He went on to point out the unfortunate fate of the prophet Jeremiah who had been put in gaol for preaching politics. The curse of this country, Mr. Milligan properly enough asserted, was party bitterness. A minister should do his duty to instruct his hearers in Christian citizenship, an assertion which warrants the conclusion that a minister does his part when, to the best of his ability he indoctrinates his flock as to the principles of political ethics, and leaves results to the Master he serves, and to the enlightened consciences of his hearers. Rev. D. J. Macdonnell intimated that the only case where a minister should speak out on political questions was where he could do it safely, and he could do it safely where his congregation were all of one stripe and the minister was of the same stripe. There he touched a most important aspect of the subject. With a congregation of this character a minister might carry his partisanship with his sermon into the pulpit and no great harm beyond a prostitution of a sacred calling, to the promotion of purely secular matters, might result, but when a minister, with a congregation of mixed political complexion, enters the pulpit fired with political party zeal, and preaches a purely political stump-sermon, for the benefit and behoof of his party, he is treading on dangerous ground, even if he can satisfy his conscience as to his neglect of discharge of the duties of his trust. Where he should be a peace maker, he sows discord. He excites political bitterness and political animosity among the members of his flock. It is generally conceded that when politics are introduced into secular organizations the usefulness of the latter is gone. By a parity of reasoning, the introduction of politics into a church organization cannot hope to end in more beneficial results. Rev. Mr. Jones touched the core of the subject when he said that political and religious reforms were achieved, not by a crusade against any one evil, but by the premeation of Christian truth, leavening and elevating human nature.

JOURNALISTIC AMENITY.

The fire-eating style of journalism, with its concomitants of ribald language, personal abuse and bitter invective, was prevalent enough among rural newspapers years ago, but it appears that it still survives in Lindsay, and the Warder is responsible for its survival. A short time since Mr. D. J. King, who was a scrutineer at one of the Mariposa polls in the interests of the Liberal candidate, wrote to the Post a letter giving explanations respecting some irregularity. His letter was temperate and moderate, but the Warder in almost a column of reply, pours out the vials of its wrath, charged with verbal vitriol, upon the correspondent's devoted head, using the most insulting and bitter personalities, and "calling names" with the free mouthed facility of a fishwife. Of the merits of the contention we have no knowledge, but it seems that so trifling a local matter could have been discussed, with some regard to decency. One is not surprised that a correspondent may in the heat of the moment use "unparliamentary language," but that an editor should so forget himself, as to flood his columns with personal abuse is contrary to the spirit of decent modern journalism. An editor may hit hard without hitting below the belt, he may controvert the arguments of an opponent and still retain a fitting style of language—and such language as, "in a long mess of trash that hare-brained creature," etc, does not belong to that class. No good end is served by the use of abusive language in a newspaper. The journal, which thus offends, loses the respect of both opponents and friends, and to a large extent destroys its usefulness. If a Demosthenes should employ the ravings of a Thersites his eloquence would be wasted and a newspaper which uses the jargon of the cook pit or the prize ring cannot expect that its utterances will command the respect of that portion of the public whose good opinion is worth courting.

A short-hand writer at Washington can report a speech with such rapidity that the speaker finds it almost impossible to keep up with him.

PROTECTIVE TREE PLANTING.

The EXAMINER has more than once taken occasion to point out and emphasize the importance of tree-planting. Every farmer knows by experience the shelter afforded to crops by a belt of forest alongside the fields thus benefitted, and it is largely to the wholesale destruction of these protecting belts of timber that the ravages of the seasons, in spite of favorable conditions of soil and tilth, make crop raising so precarious and unremunerative an industry. Now, there are hundreds of young trees growing wild in every pasture, on every farm, which, if properly disposed, would make valuable wind breaks, and if the planting of these wind-breaks became general throughout the province, the country would enjoy the protection which was afforded by stretches of the original forests. In winter the fall wheat and clover are aided, and often doubled in value by sheltering trees, in summer the great advantage of preventing the too rapid drying out of the ground, and securing the retention of the favorable influence of showers, is also shown. Mr. R. W. Phipps, whose deep and intelligent interest in forest preservation and tree culture place him prominently in the ranks of public benefactors, gives the following directions as to the planting in early spring :—

In early spring, when the ground has thawed out, select some time when, as often happens, a sharp night has frozen it an inch or so deep. Then is the moment. Get all the aid you can, and cut a circle around as many young evergreens as you need. Cut it about nine inches from the stem, and the slight frost will hold it all together so that you can move the tree with a thickness of from two to four inches of earth round the roots. Place them at once where they are to stand, fill all gaps around, with the best mould you have, and so contrive, that the roots do not chafe much with the wind, either by stakes, (but avoid chafing,) or by earth which can, if too much, afterwards be partly removed. Plant at its old level. An evergreen gives more hold to the wind than a deciduous tree, but on the other hand, it should not be nearly as tall, under three feet being best, though I have known six or seven feet to do well. They should never be trimmed.

The above method, if the proper time be hit, has proved very sure and rapid, but if the time pass, then about the end of May will do very well. These rows of trees will undoubtedly use some valuable land, but the loss so incurred is very trifling to the benefit of their shelter, especially if we could make such planting general.

Now, in the "between-times" season is the time for the farmers to take action. A farmer may argue that the tree-planting he may do will have little effect. But he should remember that he has his part to do, and that it is combined individual effort that produces the general result. Every intelligent farmer is convinced of the wisdom of moving in the direction indicated, and he is urged to appreciate the importance of prompt action. A little tree-planting done by every farmer every season would, in ten years, produce beneficial as well as beautifying results beyond all present computation.

THE IRISH CAUSE.

The Plea of a Colonial Prelate to an English Lord—An Interesting Letter From Archbishop Lynch to Churchill.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Herald publishes a letter written by Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto, to Lord Randolph Churchill on the 18th February. Following are extracts from the letter :—"My Dear Lord Churchill,—You must recollect the Prelate from Canada who paid a visit to the vice-regal lodge at Dublin in 1879, to thank your venerable and noble mother Duchess of Marlborough, for her kindness, liberality and charity toward the starving Irish. I had the honor then of a short acquaintance with Your Lordship. On that occasion I predicted you would become a great statesman. The twinkling of your brilliant eyes, however, portrayed that you would be a little restive for a few years. I have assiduously watched your course since then, sometimes with regret, (Belfast), at other times with joy, but always with great hope. The motives of your resigning the very honorable and important post in the Cabinet of England proved the honor, valor and self-respect of a great mind. Now, my dear Lord Randolph, the object of this letter is to beg you to study the Irish question root and branch, not in a spirit of party but of "justice to all men." I am confident, from your character of uprightness and honor, that you will even, for this once, join Gladstone and bring peace and prosperity to Ireland, and between England and Ireland. Your Lordship cannot but feel the disgraceful contradiction involved in the present attitude of the British Parliament towards Ireland. On the one hand, admitting the justice of the landlords' exactions and the utter inability of the tenants to meet them, the British House passes a law appointing a commission to regulate rents, which results in their being reduced, in many instances, to one-half or one-third of their former amounts. On the other hand the machinery of that tribunal is being so cumbersome and slow that fifty years would scarcely suffice for the hearing of all the cases. Landlords are availing themselves of this delay, and are pushing evictions by wholesale, and the British Parliament is stultifying itself, is prostituting the power of the law, which should be sacred, by granting the aid of the police and soldiery to assist the sheriffs and bailiffs in evicting thousands of unfortunate people, young and old, in the most inclement season of the year, amid the screams and cries of women and children, amid the curses of aged men, thus helping landlords to exact rents which the court appointed by the Government had, in parallel cases, pronounced flagrantly unjust. Does this accord with the true philosophy of just and legitimate government? When authority stultifies itself the people will not be persuaded to respect it. The rule of injustice is a hard and hopeless task. Let the landlords receive fair rent, not oppressive, and let them restore to the poor tenants the over-payment of past years. There are unmistakeable signs in England of a growing volcano which I trust English prudence will avert. Will the time ever come when insolvency will begin to have some regard for the honest public opinion of the world, civilized as well as uncivilized, which is to-day horrified at the news of whose only equivalents, according to England's greatest statesman, of past or modern times, are death warrants? The unfortunate victims, however, shivering from cold, wet and hunger, after that sad day of their hardest trials, were not debarred from warming themselves at the blaze of their own burning homes. Has English history proof with [illegible] equal [illegible] horrid deeds were perpetrated by a Catholic Government.

How the Pope would be called a monster of iniquity, a murderer of his people, and be dealt with as such, if during his temporal power he had permitted one fortieth to be depopulated! Such wholesale and inhuman evictions are only heard of under the British Crown. Her Most Gracious Majesty need need not be grateful to her responsible ministers for disgracing her otherwise glorious reign of fifty years by periodical oppression of the poor and starving of the Irish, and finishing it up by more than savage acts of cruelty and violation of all true laws and order. The Irish element in the United States is becoming more and more powerful. Your English papers sometimes remark when statesmen in this country speak disparagingly of England, that "he is trying to catch the Irish vote. By that they acknowledge that the Irish vote is a great factor in America and the same may be said of Australia, and other English-speaking countries where the Irish congregate and multiply and prosper. Hence you must conclude that numbers will tell, and the combined Irish are a powerful ingredient in the government of this country, and the power of their organizations is increasing every day. They in the Presidental and other elections. This is beyond dispute. You may judge of their temper from the tone which the Americans take in the present fishery dispute. It is said that we in Canada live under the British flag, by toleration of the United States. When there was a question of enlisting volunteers for our defence, one of our chief statesmen said : "What use is this expense?" The chief guard of five millions of people, in fact of fifty, will be good behavior, but good behavior means now, it appears, let Americans do as they like, as the English forces are distant. Better are good neighbors near than blood relations at a distance. Should a misunderstanding happen between England and the United States, Canada would, in a few days, be overrun by American troops. It would cost that Republic very little, as Irish-American military organizations would supply very largely both men and money. It is well known that there are many annexationists here in Canada of pocket loyalty, who think that annexation to the United States would bring them more trade and money. Let us finish, my dear Lord, this perhaps too long letter by imploring you again and again to help your country, England, out of the murky chaos in which she is, and induce her to do justice at length to Ireland. England's difficulty, ill-treatment and calumnies, will never reconcile her friends or foes. Union is strength, and the condition of the Irish at home and abroad does not add to the strength or honor of England. We must not forget how the great Roman Empire fell. England is not beyond reach of eternal justice.

Injured Spine and Partial Paralysis—Cured.

58 Paddington Grove, Battersea, Park Road, London, W., England.

I met with a serious accident, resulting in a severe shock to the system, injuring my spine and partially paralyzing one side of my body. I was admitted to St. George's Hospital, Newcastle Road, where I remained ten days. I was unable to stand or even sit up. The physicians decided that my chance of recovery was to undergo an operation, to which I objected and took my discharge. Being advised home, I was in a short time unable to turn myself in bed. Procuring a supply of St. Jacobs Oil, I caused it to be rubbed freely on back, legs and feet. I am now able to walk, am free from pain, and my bodily health is daily improving.

LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA.

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL WITHERS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Mackenzie, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $37,130.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety Fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance with six per cent. per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

LOCAL NEWS.

Hamilton Helpers.

The Hamilton Helpers are still vigorously conducting their temperance crusade. Monday afternoon the old Music Hall was well filled with children and adults to witness a display of dissolving views, etc. The views were shown by Mr. Stead, assisted by Messrs. Dunnett and Hebdon, and included temperance moral and general subjects, with suitable explanatory comments, and conveyed much instruction and entertainment. In the evening Mark street Methodist Church, Ashburnham, was so filled with hearers that standing room was at a premium. Rev. Mr. Wilson, pastor, occupied the chair. The singing of Messrs. Stead and Dunnett was well received and frequently encored. Mr. Hebdon delivered an address on temperance and Mr. Dunnett also gave a brief speech. To-night the Helpers hold forth in the Mission Building, Auburn Village.

Y. W. C. T. U.

The regular meeting of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union was held Monday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. hall. Miss Edwards, president, occupied the chair, and the meeting opened with singing and prayer. The "Lilly of the Valley," with its purity and fragrance, was chosen as the emblem of our "Y." society, and for the motto, Phillippians iv. 8—"Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, if there be any virtue, think on these things." The president urged the necessity of the "Y." members wearing the white ribbon.—Com.

The Midland League.

A meeting to reorganize the Port Hope baseball club for the coming season will be held in a few days. After the Port Hope club is placed in shape, the Times says "that a meeting of all the town clubs that will enter between Toronto and Belleville will be held to form a Midland League. There is little time to be lost, if the opening of the season is to find the league prepared." The scheme, though old and threadbare, is a good one, and it is to be hoped it will come to a focus, but that is extremely doubtful. The EXAMINER would like to see Peterborough represented in the league, if such is formed.

Competent judges say Turnbull's is the right house to buy Boys ready-made Clothing, he gives you new styles, low prices and good quality combined.

A Wife's Whims.

Mrs. Metcalfe this morning sought to have the legal thumb-screws of the police court applied to her husband, who she alleged was guilty of neglecting and not properly supporting his youthful spouse. Metcalfe is an hotel hostler, and it was proved that he gave every cent of his earnings, $10 per month, to his wife, who seems to have an intense hankering after feathers and fixings, judging from the display she made in court. The charge was dismissed.

The Gallery Gods.

Harry Lindley's comedy troupe, who are at present playing in Stratford, say that on their route the most orderly places heretofore visited have been Kingston and Peterborough, but they give Stratford the palm over both these places for orderly behaviour.

A Reminder.

Play-goers are reminded that the McDowell Comedy company will present the splendid new English play "Our Regiment" in the Bradburn's Opera House to-morrow night.—Admission 25, 35 and 50 cents. One of the best companies on the road.

THE RIVER-DRIVERS will find it to their advantage to call at R. J. Kidd's and get a pair of river boots. Satisfaction warranted.

BOYS made happy. Only 60c. for a pair of boots at Kidd's new store.

of business done by R. Stinson & Son since the commencement of their closing out sale has shown a largely increased majority in the number of the electors who have secured bargains since the 1st of February.

CHILDREN should not be allowed to go with wet feet, because a pair of solid kip boots from Kidd's new store costs only 70 cents.

If you have heard of anything new and have not seen it, look for it at Turnbull's, the great novelty house. His counters are now piled with New Spring goods which he is pleased to show.

Peterborough Presbytery.

Continuation of Report of Proceedings From Yesterday's Issue.

The following delegates to the General Assembly in Winnipeg on the second Thursday in July, 1887, were elected:—Rev. Messrs. Cooke, of Baltimore; Carmichael, Norwood; Hay, Campbellford; Thompson, Hastings; Craigie, Bobcaygeon; Jamieson, Garden Hill and Mitchell, Port Hope; Elder.—Messrs. McNaughton, of Cobourg; Carnegie, Peterborough; Morrison, Omemee; Roxburgh, Norwood; Johnston, Grafton; Clark, Port Hope; McIntosh, Cold Springs.

Rev. Dr. Burns, of Halifax, was nominated Moderator of the General Assembly.

Rev. David Beattie, of Campbellford, and Rev. James Cleland, of Port Hope, asked to be allowed to retire from active ministerial work. Their request was granted, and the matter referred to the General Assembly.

Reports on Religion, Sunday Schools and Temperance were read, showing in each of these departments of the church's work a marked progress during the past year. Reports were also read from the Home Mission Committee and the Augmentation of Stipend, the latter of which did not entire satisfaction.

Rev. Messrs. McEwan, Mitchell and Hay were appointed and drew up a resolution to be submitted to the General Assembly, on the subject of co-operation with other denominations in the Home Mission Field.

Mr. Duncan, of Colborne, moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Ewing, of Omemee, that the resolution be not forwarded to the General Assembly.—Carried by a vote of 12 to 10.

The union of Oakhill and Garden Hill churches was discussed, but the matter was left over till the next meeting of the Presbytery.

Messrs. Thomson and Speirs, students, were examined and recommended for the Mission Field during the summer.

The Session Records of Norwood and Lakefield were examined and reported as carefully and correctly kept.

The next meeting of the Presbytery was appointed to meet in the hall of the First Presbyterian Church, Port Hope, on the first Tuesday in July at 10 a.m.

Mr. Beaseth suggested that a conference be held in the evening on the subject of "Beneficent Giving."

Expenses for various matters were claimed and allowed, and ordered to be paid out of the Presbytery Fund.

The meeting was then brought to a close with the benediction.

The ladies of St. Paul's church kindly entertained the Presbytery to dinner and tea in the hall in the rear of the church, and a vote of thanks was tendered them for their kindness by the Presbytery before adjournment.

LAWN TENNIS.—Mr. James Morris.
SNOWSHOE AND TOBOGGAN.—Dr. Burnham.
BASEBALL.—Dr. Brennan and W. Sailsbury.
BICYCLE.—Messrs. F. E. Bell and G. A. Schofield.

The Treasurers' report, showing a balance on hand of $6, with some outstanding accounts, was read, and Mr. J. R. Cobb appointed Auditor.

Police Court.

WEDNESDAY, March 23rd.

Two cases were called this morning—Cooper vs. Halpin, and Cooper vs. Clancy—for breach of the Scott Act between 25th December and 1st February, ult. No counsel appearing for the prosecution, the Chief asked for an adjournment, but the magistrate said he would dismiss the case if they did not proceed. Counsel for defendants asked that the information be amended so as to include present dates. He would admit a second offence and save further trouble, which was done. Mr. John O'Meara appeared for the defendants.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO.

Sixth Parliament—First Session.

MONDAY, March 21st.

A number of bills received their first readings, and some others were passed in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WATSON, moving for a return showing the number of votes polled by widows and unmarried women in the municipalities of the Province at the late municipal election, said that he thought the return would show that the classes named in the return had taken a greater interest in the municipal elections than in the previous year.—Carried.

The House adjourned at 3.40.

AT THE REFORM CLUB.

The Young Liberals of Toronto Entertain Their Political Brothers of the Legislature.

The Young Liberal Club of Toronto invited the newly elected Young Liberal members of the Legislature to a reception last night at the Ontario Reform Club building, which was placed at their disposal for the occasion. There were nearly 100 young and old Reformers present, and among them were noticed:—Dr J T Gilmour, M PP, Wm Garson, M PP, J B Stratton, M PP, J A McAndrew, M PP, W M Dack, M PP, W B Wood, M PP, J A Sprague, M PP, A McKay, M PP, the guests of the evening; Dr. McMahon, M PP, Thos Gibson, M PP, James Commee, M.P.P., J. The drawing room was converted into a reception room, where the young and old Liberals became acquainted with the M. P.P.'s mainly through the exertions of President Gregory, who acted as Master of Ceremonies. An Italian band played delightful music in the dining room, where an abundant supply of refreshments was served.

Towards the close of the evening Mr. W. D. Gregory took the chair, and in a few happy remarks explained the object of the gathering and proceeded to call upon a number of speakers. In consequence of this, brief and pleasant speeches were delivered by Mr. J A Sprague, M P P, Mr W M Dack, M P P, Mr W B Wood, M P P, Mr W Garson, M P P, Dr McKay, M P P, Dr Gilmour, M P P, Mr J. R. Stratton, M P P, Mr Balfour, M P P, and Mr. O'Connor, M P P. The proceedings closed about midnight, after one of the most enjoyable evenings ever spent in the Reform Club.

THE DAKOTA FLOOD.

The Worst Thought to be Over as the Water is Receding.

BISMARCK, Dak., March 22.—The flood reached its highest point yesterday, thirteen inches above high-water mark of 1881. In the afternoon the water receded somewhat and last night showed a decrease of about six inches. The first authentic news from Mandan since Friday was received last evening, when the ferry succeeded in forcing a passage across from the western shore. The water at Mandan is flowing over the Main-street sidewalks, filling basements, but has not reached the ground floors of buildings on that level. The railroad shops are badly flooded. In the round-house there is forty-four inches of water. The people of Mandan think the worst is over and that the damage is not so great as feared.

A YOUTHFUL MURDERER.

Willie Sells Confesses That he Killed His Mother, Brother and Sister.

ERIE, Ks., March 22.—Willie Sells, the boy murderer who is under sentence of death for killing his father, mother, brother and sister, but who has always protested his innocence, has now confessed his guilt. He says that his brother Waty first killed his father with a hatchet during a quarrel. Willie being enraged at this seized the hatchet and killed Katy. When finding that he was observed by his mother and sister he killed them in the same way, being greatly excited and hardly knowing why he did it.

Charged With Rifling a Ballot Box.

QUEBEC, March 22.—E. Forgues of Murray Bay, upon his arrival in town last night was arrested on a warrant issued from the Police Court at the instance of S. X. Cimon, M.P., charging him with having abstracted from the ballot box at St. Irene in the late Dominion election in Charlevoix a number of ballots marked for Cimon. Application for the release of the prisoner on bail was made, but the action thereon was deferred until the sitting of the court to-day. It is reported that a number of arrests are on the tapis for alleged irregularities in connection with the same election.

The Story of Hundreds.

I a recent letter received from Mrs. Sarah A. Mills, of Wheatley, Ont., she says, "I was a sufferer for six years with dyspepsia and liver complaint. My food did not digest and I grew weaker every day. I lost appetite and had little hope of recovery. I tried many remedies, but all in vain, till I took Burdock Blood Bitters. The first bottle gave relief; after taking seven bottles, I am thankful that I now enjoy good health." 2w12d.

FESTIVAL AT BERLIN.

INCIDENTS OF THE CELEBRATION OF THE EMPEROR'S BIRTHDAY.

BERLIN, March 23.—Among the presents received by the Emperor is a general's sash which the Empress made for him. It is an exact pattern of the sashes worn by Frederick the Great. The Empress insisted upon being the first to offer congratulations to the Emperor. Punctually as the clock struck 10 she entered the Emperor's study and presented the sash and other gifts. When the Emperor appeared at the windows he wore the sash. The floral presents were numerous. The Crown Princess painted for the occasion a life-size portrait of Prince William, around which were placed bouquets presented by the members of the family.

Special pleasure seemed to be afforded the Emperor by the children of Prince William, who carried their bouquets to their grandfather, followed by the three children of Prince Albrecht and the children of the Crown Prince of Sweden. Many floral tributes came from distant parts of Germany and from England. The high officials of the court presented to the Emperor a picture representing a military scene.

One poor woman left at the door of the palace a small bunch of flowers with a petition praying for the pardon of her husband, who is now in prison. The flowers and petition were placed in a position where they would attract the Emperor's attention. The petition was granted.

The Royal Visitors at the Theatre.

BERLIN, March 23.—This evening the Empress, the Crown Prince and his family and the royal visitors attended a performance of the ballet "Sardanapalus" at the opera house. Between the acts tea was served in the foyer, which had been converted into a brilliant reception room.

Emperor William has conferred the first-class decoration of the Order of the Red Eagle upon Dr. Lauer, his physician.

The Prince of Wales visited Count Herbert Bismarck to-day. He will return to London on Sunday.

A Message to the Pope.

ROME, March 23.—Emperor William telegraphed yesterday to the Pope thanking him for his congratulations and expressing a wish for his prosperity and happiness.

The Emperor's Proclamation.

BERLIN, March 23.—The Emperor's proclamation to the German people, thanking them for their expressions of devotion and joy on the 90th anniversary of his birth, is couched in words showing the profoundest emotions. The decree contains a long review of the Emperor's life. The Kaiser dwells on the experiences of his youth and the wonderful help God has vouchsafed to him, and prays that he may be able to preserve during the short remainder of his life the blessings of peace.

Visits of Courtesy.

BERLIN, March 23.—The Emperor William to-day visited the Queens of Saxony and Roumania, the Princess of Wied, the Grand Duchesses of Mecklenburg and Saxony and the Grand Duchess Marie, wife of the Grand Duke Vladimir.

THE BULGARIAN QUESTION.

The Wisdom of the Turkish Agent Proves Useless.

VIENNA, March 23.—It is understood that it is the policy of Germany and Russia to restore the former relations of the three emperors. Russian diplomats state that until that is accomplished Russia will refrain from initiating any diplomatic action in Bulgaria. The attempted adjustment of the Bulgarian trouble initiated by Turkey has proved a failure.

Russia Calls Upon Turkey to Pay Up.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 23.—M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador, on Monday had an audience with the Sultan and then declared that the mission of Riza Bey, the special Turkish agent in Bulgaria, had been useless and expressed dissatisfaction with the Ottoman ministry respecting the Bulgarian trouble.

M. Nelidoff has sent a note to the Porte pressing Turkey for payment of arrears in the war indemnity due Russia and reproaching the Porte for spending money due Russia in the Turkish army and navy.

A MESSAGE FROM GLADSTONE.

He Thanks the American People for Their Sympathy With Ireland.

LONDON, March 23.—Mr. Gladstone has cabled the following message to C. A. Dana, New York, in acknowledgment of a cable despatch informing him of the endorsement of his Irish policy by a mass meeting of citizens in the Cooper Union, New York, last Monday:

"I am very sensitive of the value of the sympathy which from the first we have received from, as I believe, the great majority of the American people, in our attempt to secure just measures of good government for Ireland—a sympathy which I feel sure will continue to attend us until this just policy shall attain its coming consummation.

(Signed) "W. E. GLADSTONE."

Mr. Parnell sent a similar despatch.

The Queen at Wolverhampton.

HENTINGHAM, March 23.—The Queen visited Wolverhampton to-day and laid the foundation stone of the Victoria Asylum for Lunatics. Public buildings and private dwellings were handsomely decorated, and the streets through which Her Majesty passed were spanned by triumphal arches and thronged with people.

CHURCH IN GERMANY.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL BILL UNDER DISCUSSION.

BERLIN, March 23.—The Oberhaus to-day, in plenary session, began the discussion of the Ecclesiastical Bill.

Prince Bismarck made a long speech in defence of the measure. He said that as regarded the question of religious orders the chief point to be determined was whether Catholic citizens needed the orders. It was certain that Catholics believed in the value of the orders and their sentiments should be satisfied in harmony with the legislation of the country. The state naturally had an interest in the good training of priests and such training they could acquire as well at seminaries as at universities. The bitterest enemies of the Government came from the universities, not from the seminaries. Referring next to the law requiring ecclesiasts to give notice to the state of appointments, Prince Bismarck declared that he had not attached special importance to this provision, especially in view of his experience that ecclesiasts who for years had exercised their functions under the very eyes of the Government changed their disposition as soon as they became bishops. The Government had not made too large concessions to the Catholics, nor had it given up any of its sovereign rights. He had never desired a slashing struggle with the Curia. As early as 1875 he had called Cardinal Antonelli's attention to the danger presented by the formation of a special Catholic political party, and ever since the Curia had manifested a peaceful disposition. He had prepared a program of peace, to realize which he had now worked for ten years. Through the proposals before the House he hoped to obtain a lasting peace. If that expectation should not be fulfilled the measures now proposed could easily be rescinded. It was necessary that the Centre party, which entered into relations with all the elements that were hostile to the state and empire, be deprived of all pretext for opposition. It was out of regard for the unity of the nation and because of the danger threatening that unity, that he initiated the ecclesiastical bill, doing so with a full recognition of his responsibility. Whether or not the bill would lead to the establishment of a religious peace could not yet be known, as the leaders of the Centre had placed themselves in opposition to the people. No less dangerous than the Progressists were the subversive tendencies of the lower clergy in whose removal the Pope and the Emperor have an equal interest. If the Pontiff and the Emperor were at one the opposition of Windthorst and the Centre would have no further significance. In conclusion he urged the whole House to adopt the bill with the commissions amendments.

Minister Von Gerdor then spoke, after which the House adjourned.

AFFAIRS IN IRELAND.

A Warrant Issued for the Arrest of Another Priest.

DUBLIN, March 23.—The Freeman's Journal says Lieut.-Governor R. H. Sankey, chairman of the Board of Public Works, is to succeed General Buller as Under Secretary for Ireland.

The Prisoners Brought to Cork.

CORK, March 23.—Police Inspector Somerville and Constable Garrett, who were found guilty by the Coroners jury of the murder of Hanlan, who was shot and killed during the riot at Youghal, were to-day brought to this city as prisoners. The people of Youghal hooted and jeered at the extra policemen who had charge of the men, as the train conveying them moved away.

A Warrant for Another Priest.

DUBLIN, March 23.—Judge Boyd has granted a warrant for the arrest of Father Ryan, of the Herbertstown branch of the National League, for contempt in refusing to testify concerning his actions as trustee for tenants under the plan of campaign. Warrants have also been issued for a number of other persons in Herbertstown on the same charge.

Sometimes an Irish Jury Agrees.

CORK, March 23.—In the Hanlon inquest at Youghal yesterday the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against the police. The coroner, at the request of Mr. Harrington, issued warrants against Police Inspector Somerville and Constable Garrett.

McGLYNN REFUSES A CHECK.

He Donates the Money Given Him by Davitt to the Cause.

NEW YORK, March 23.—The following letter is published:

Mr. Patrick Ford:—DEAR SIR—I appreciate, and am very thankful for the kindly spirit which prompted Mr. Davitt to offer me, through you, the proceeds of the demonstration in Madison Square Garden, to the amount of $418, for which I have your check. I could accept it only as a testimonial of sympathy for the cause to which my present position is due—my assertion of, and refusal to retract the doctrine of the common right to land, for which doctrine Mr. Davitt has spoken such golden words, and you, in the columns of the Irish World, have fought so good a fight.

I caused to be published some time ago a statement that I would accept funds of this character rather as a trustee of the cause than as the absolute owner. In this spirit I have decided not to retain your check, but to return it to you, as I do herewith, with the request that you will forward the amount to Mr. Davitt. In the remembrance of landlord oppression, from which the people are suffering at this moment, and in the great battles that are yet to be fought, under the leadership of Mr. Davitt, he will need all the aid we can send him.

A Poker Game Leads to Murder.

SARATOGA, March 23.—Details of the murder in the Adirondacks were received on Thursday night. A poker game was in progress in a lumber shanty near Arietta, Fulton County, in the course of which a dispute arose between Jno. Christman and one Cunningham, said to belong in Sandy Hill or Fort Edward. Cunningham struck Christman and the latter threw his assailant to the floor, but on promising to behave Cunningham was allowed to rise. As soon as he was at liberty, he seized a chisel and inflicted two terrible wounds in Christman's head, felling him senseless to the floor, then picking up a hammer he dealt his victim several blows as he lay unconscious, fracturing his skull. Christman died Friday. The murderer escaped and officers are in pursuit.

Attempt to Kill a Labor Legislator.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 23.—George S. Bailey, Labor member of the House from East St. Louis, was shot at late last night on the street by some unknown person. A thirty-two-calibre pistol ball passed through his overcoat and lodged in a memorandum book in his coat pocket. Mr. Bailey's condemnation of other Labor members for attending Mrs. Newbie's funeral is supposed to have led to the attempt upon his life.

Chicago's Hog Trade.

CHICAGO, March 23.—The aggregate of hogs slaughtered here during the twelve months ending March 1, was 4,626,000, or a decrease of 504,000 as compared with a year ago. The decrease is attributed to the strike yards strike of last November.

The number of cattle slaughtered during the same period was 1,038,000 head, of which 1,000,000 head were required for the dressed beef trade. This shows an increase of 208,000 head over any previous years.

THE BUFFALO HOTEL FIRE.

Searching the Ruins for Whatever They May Cover.

BUFFALO, March 23.—The most dangerous portions of the old Richmond Hotel walls being down, the work of searching the ruins for bodies and valuables was resumed this morning. A detail of police were on the ground to see to it that watches, jewelry, diamonds and clothes that may be found among the rubbish are properly taken care of, and to keep pluderers away from the ruins. Among the articles recovered yesterday were several baskets of dishes which had been bought for the Richmond cafe and stored on the third floor near the western wall. They were intact. A bundle of clothing was also found which was subsequently identified as property of William P. Lamb, an insurance man from Rochester who is at the Tifft now. In the pockets were his gold watch, some railway tickets, money and papers, and his shirt still had the sleeve buttons and a diamond stud all in perfect state of preservation. A solitaire earring belonging to Mrs. Fletcher of New York was also found. Considerable jewelry and a good many watches that were left in the clothes or rooms of the fleeing guests were lost in the fire, but it is not likely that much of this kind of property will be recovered.

A smell of burnt flesh was detected by several visitors this morning who ventured into the Richmond Hotel ruins where Ulbrich & Kingsley's store was located. The odor came from beneath a pile of rubbish close to the south wall of the building and it is supposed that corpses are buried under the ruins there. A smell, peculiar to decomposing human remains, also came from the debris of the little frame building adjoining the hotel on Main-street. Owing to the dangerous condition of the corner wall, however, no search can be made until that has been torn down. This is where the work of demolition was resumed this noon. The wall will be leveled probably by this evening, and the immense pile of brick and mortar there will be cleared to-morrow. It will take several days to reach the bottom. A large gang of men were digging on the Eagle-street side of the hotel lot. The burnt remnants of several beds were dug up, but no bodies had been found up to noon. The safe of the Boston Clothing House is still in the ruins, and will probably be reached this afternoon.

Funeral of One of the Victims.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., March 23.—The funeral of Henry J. Rumsey, the hero of the Buffalo fire, occurred to-day, and was notable for the number of distinguished persons present. The services at the house were private, but the public obsequies at Trinity Church were attended by as many people as the edifice could hold. Many flags were displayed at half-mast.

Fiery Youths Appeal to the Code.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 23.—Some excitement prevails here over a contemplated duel between two State University students. They left Athens yesterday on different trains. Walter S. Chisolm, jr., and Hugh Mom, his second, were arrested here and put under bonds in $1000 to keep the peace. Thomas R. Call and W. W. Martin, his second, left the train at Grovetown, twenty miles from Augusta, to avoid the police. Reports are current that the duel will take place in South Carolina to-day. The difficulty is said to have grown out of an accusation of cheating in the examination.

The Chicago Boodlers.

CHICAGO, March 23.—The "boodlers" are in a panic. It is reported on the best authority that fifty-two indictments were returned against the big and small fry, and that twelve present and ex-commissioners will be arrested immediately. The grand jurors say they were absolutely paralyzed by the official rascality developed.

THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1887.

THE SOUTHERN SEAS.

We think it was Canning who said he called a new world into existence to redress the balance of the old. The new world of which he spoke was the continent of South America, and the revolted colonies of Spain were the new states in which he hoped to find an equipoise to the older powers of Europe. They have not fulfilled his expectations. Exclusive of commercial relations, Europe has been very little affected by the establishment of independent states in South America.

But a newer world has sprung up of far deeper importance in the affairs of Europe. We refer to the South Pacific Ocean. In the watery hemisphere lying south of us, and which embraces almost half the entire surface of the earth, there are innumerable groups of islands, some of them mere dots, others moderate in size, besides the vast islands of Australia, New Guinea and New Zealand. For a very long time this wide expanse was left to itself and no action was taken by European powers to possess themselves of its almost unknown boundaries. Here and there enterprising traders visited the islands, cities grew and flourished and colonies expanded into independent states. They lived alone and knew little of what was passing in the great world without. But this condition of things is rapidly changing. Within the last twenty years especially, the nations of Europe have been on the alert to secure some of the more important islands and their plans and jealousies and complications have been carried into these southern seas.

The first occupants of the region referred to—and in which we do not include Australia or New Zealand—were the Dutch and the Spanish. Their share of the territory is not now the largest by any means. The Spaniards retain the Phillipine, Ladrone and Caroline islands. The Dutch, besides their Malay possessions, have appropriated the western half of New Guinea to which they have no right whatever, except that their navigators first touched upon its shores. France and England have large interests in these waters and Germany is now considered a rival to both these powers.

The remainder of New Guinea has been shared after some sharp contention between Germany and England. Germany owns the islands of New Britain and New Ireland also. France has New Caledonia and the Loyalty islands in the Western Pacific, and the Society Islands, the Marquesas and the Low Archipelago in the Eastern. A treaty has been recently made and an irregular boundary line drawn, separating the spheres of German and British interests, which either nation binds itself not to over-step. Something of the kind is much needed to define the relations of Britain with France.

At present a dispute has arisen with respect to the Samoa islands. This group is claimed by British, German and American authorities and the matter is now being arranged by arbitration. Germany wants to take Upolo, the largest of the group, possessing three good harbors; to give the United States the second best, which has also a good harbor, and to leave Great Britain the smallest of three islands. As Samoa lies in the direct route between New Zealand and San Francisco, it is especially valuable to the British and ought not to be given up. The Tonga islands are valuable for a similar reason. They lie on theroute from Brisbane to Panama, and should the canal ever be completed, will furnish the only unappropriated harbor on a route of about 8,000 miles in length. Both these islands should be secured for Britain, as they would be dangerous to its interests in the Pacific, were they occupied by a hostile power. It is claimed that the Colonial Office has not kept a sufficiently sharp watch over the interests of Britain in these waters, and we in the Dominion, from our past experience, can thoroughly understand the assertion France begins her colonizing in these waters with soldiers; Germany, like England, commences with trade. France has no friends in the Pacific; England is considered the helper of the defenceless and the avenger of crime. German trade is spreading there faster than English. Hamburg merchants are to be found everywhere and are more enterprising and persevering than the English. If Britain, therefore, is to retain its former supremacy as a trader in the Pacific, private enterprise must keep pace with public protection, and British merchants must adapt themselves to the altered circumstances of the times. In these days the slower, as well as the weaker, goes to the wall.

THE Conservative Journals unpatriotically decry Ontario and disparage its credit, for the sake of a blow at the Mowat administration. One of these papers in its anxiety to score a point, and not being able to deny the fact of a substantial surplus, ingenuously asserts that if Mr. Treasurer Ross' financial statement, included several debts not yet incurred, there would be a deficit instead of a surplus. Ontario, under Reform rule, has accumulated a magnificent surplus of over six millions of dollars, while Quebec, under Conservative rule, has piled up—if the expression is allowable—a deficit of over eleven million dollars or a gross debt of about twenty millions. The people knew what they were about last December when they overwhelmingly approved of the excellent manner in which the Mowat administration have managed the public affairs of the province for the past fourteen years.

Amateur Athletic Association.

Annual Report of the President of the P. A. A. A.—Patrons and Patronesses.

In addition to the list of officers and directors heretofore published, the following were appointed at the annual meeting Tuesday night:—

HONORARY PRESIDENT.—Dr. Halliday.

PATRONS.—Hon. R. Hamilton, Dr. Beecher, Geo. A. Cox, J. Stevenson and R. A. Morrow.

LADY PATRONESSES.—Mrs. Hamilton, (Auburn,) Mrs. G. Burnham and Mrs. Weller.

Following is the report:—

To the members of the Peterborough Amateur Athletic association.

At the close of this the second year of the existence of the Association I have to congratulate you on the general result of the past season.

James Norley, our caretaker in 1885 having removed to Buffalo last year, was succeeded by Mr. Samuel Ray who has filled the position with satisfaction to all concerned, and whose interest and ability in cricket have contributed in no small degree to the success of that game.

We have suffered a great loss in the death of our late Secretary who was so indefatigable in his efforts to further the interests of the Association and whose familiar face will be greatly missed in all the sports.

Our constitution requiring sports to be held twice in the season, two days sports were accordingly held, one on the 24th May and the fall sports on the 28th September. The attendance was not as large as could be desired, but it is to be hoped that a still greater interest will be shown, and that the contest in sports will be greater by additional attractions being offered.

The present state of our finances is not satisfactory as we have been compelled to carry over some of last seasons bills unsettled. This is accounted for by work being contracted for, which is of a permanent character. The principal improvements made were the erection of an additional dressing room and a bath room, also a water tank now supplied by a power pump. These were greatly needed and have added much to the convenience of the members as well as a benefit to the grounds. The purchase of an iron roller, lawn mower and hose is an expenditure that will not have to again be made.

The approaching season promises to be an active one in sporting circles. The Knights of the Paddle are organizing strongly and a division of their camp is to locate on our waters this season. It behooves us therefore to make our branch of summer sports as attractive as possible.

In reviewing briefly the work of the different clubs, the cricketers are to be congratulated on their success having only once been ing defeated. This season promises well and the club intend to make a tour.

The Tennis club held a tourament for a handsome medal presented by Mr. H. A. Hammond which was won by Mr. Retallick.

Bicycle races were not as keenly contested as could be wished but an improvement is looked for this year. Base ball was about in the same condition. The foot ball season though short was well improved and great spirit was shown in the matches.

And last but not least Tobogganing was indulged in to a great extent. It is to be regretted that the slide being so far from the centre of town, it is feared some get the advantage of it without the club getting the advantage of the small fee charged. It is to be hoped this will be remedied this season.

The constitution and by-laws will be a subject for discussion for the new directorate, and some amendments are considered necessary.

G. BURNHAM,
President.

An Old Resident Heard From.

The Mr. Fitzpatrick referred to in the following paragraph from the Chillicothe, (Mo.) Constitution, is the senior member of the firm of Fitzpatrick & Son, marble dealers of that place. Mr. Fitzpatrick was at one time a resident of this county, and was well known throughout its borders, especially in Dummer township. His hundreds of friends will be glad to know that he is flourishing in the far west, as the paragraph below, from the paper mentioned, indicates:—

"The firm of Fitzpatrick & Son is one of the best and most reliable firms doing business in our city. The firm is composed of Mr. John Fitzpatrick and his son, Wm. A. Fitzpatrick, and has ample capital and does an extensive business in the manufacture of tombstones and monuments. Its work will compare favorably for artistic excellence with any in the state, as many handsome monuments in our beautiful cemetery will attest. The business has been under the same firm name for 20 years, Mr. Fitzpatrick removing here from Kidder, Caldwell county, where he was extensively engaged in business. He owns 500 acres of valuable farming lands in Daviess county. Their marble manufactory has a capacity of $60,000 per annum, and they sell a large amount of their work in all the neighboring counties. The senior member of the firm was born in Ireland in 1830, but has lived in this country ever since he was grown, and in Missouri 22 years. He has three sons who are telegraph operators, and although all of them are yet young, they occupy high positions in their chosen profession. One of them, Fred, is operator in the office of the vice-president of the Missouri Pacific at St. Louis. Mr. Fitzpatrick first removed to Canada, where he resided in Peterborough county for several years, engaged in agricultural purposes. In all of his enterprises Mr. Fitzpatrick has been eminently successful, the result of enterprise and tact, and strict integrity."

TO DEPOSITORS—Deposits are received by this Company both on current account and for periods of one year or longer. The rate of interest paid on amounts deposited on current account and which may be withdrawn by check in such sums as the depositor may from time to time require, is FOUR per cent., either paid or compounded half-yearly, and the rate on yearly deposits is FIVE per cent.

TO INVESTORS—The five and ten year FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES of this Company which are issued in denominations of $100, $200, $400 and $1000 each, transferable by endorsement, with half-yearly interest Coupons attached, payable at the Head Office of the Company in Peterborough, or at any Branch of the Bank of Toronto in Canada, afford a safe and convenient mode of investment.

The funds of the Company being invested in first mortgages on Real Estate, no better security can be offered to depositors or debenture-holders, they having a first claim or mortgage on the whole Assets of the Company, the shareholders having the second. The annual statement shows that the amount so invested was over $800,000, and on the security of real estate at least double that value.

By the laws of Ontario, Trustees, Executors and Administrators may deposit Trust Funds of the estates which they control in this Company, and are free from all further liability, a privilege of which many have largely availed themselves.

TO BORROWERS—Money is obtainable from this Company on approved Real Estate security at the Lowest Current Rates of Interest.

The Mortgage may be repaid by yearly instalments, or otherwise as may be agreed upon, the interest ceasing at once on all amounts paid on account of the sum borrowed.

Little orphant Allie's come to our house to stay
An' wash the cups an' saucers up, an' brush the crumbs away,
An' shoo the chickens off the porch, an' dust the hearth, an' sweep,
An' make the fire an' bake the bread, an' earn her board an' keep;
An' all us other children, when the supper things is done,
We set around the kitchen fire an' has the mostest fun
A list'nin' to the witch tales, as Allie tells about,
An' the gobble-uns as gets you
Ef you don't watch out!

Onc't they was a little boy wouldn't say his pray'rs—
An' when he went to bed at night, away up-stairs,
His mamma heard him holler, and his daddy heard him too,
An' when they turn't the kivvers down he wasn't there at all!
An' they seeked him in the rafter-room, an' cubby-hole an' press,
An' seeked him up the chimbly flue, an' ever-wherres, I guess.
But all they ever found was thist his pant an' roundabout!

An' they snatched her through the ceilin' fore she knew what she's about!

An' the lamp wick sputters, an' the wind goes woo-oo!
An' you hear the crickets quit, an' the moon is gray,

The Industry of Dreams.

A thing I like about dreams is their industry and economy. One able-bodied dream can get in more work and travel farther and consume more time to the minute than all the king's horses and all the king's men from Pharaoh's day to Carter Harrison's. I remember falling out of bed once, and as I did I thought I fell off the edge of the world. I went sailing around through space for two or three hundred years, knocking about among the stars and comets and things, never stopping to think whether I was hungry or whether it was just the proper thing to go visiting all over this universe and several neighboring universes in my night-clothes. Some way I didn't seem to care whether school kept or not, or whether they taught Latin or Greek in it if it did keep.

After I had sailed awhile I began to drop, not like Milton's disappointed god, "from morn till noon, and noon till dewy eve," but from New Year's till the 4th of July and from the 4th till Christmas, and, finally, after a few centuries of this depressing experience, I found myself impaled on one of the five points of a star of the forty-seventh magnitude, and gradually came to realize that I had fallen a matter of two feet and tangled my legs in the rounds of a chair. Now, there is industry for you, and great economy of time in the bu... gain.

One would naturally suppose that when a dream had worked ten or a dozen centuries in half a jiffy it would feel like laying off a day or two and resting up, but it doesn't. I hadn't been asleep two minutes after crawling back into bed when that dream came back and pounced on me again and went to work like a boy carrying water to a circus elephant.

That's the kind of stuff dreams are made of.—Ben Wikle in Pittsburg Dispatch.

Frank Mullin, a Philadelphia expressman, was taking a box containing two big striped hyenas to the Philadelphia Zoo recently, when he felt a particularly warm and vigorous breath on the back of his neck. He looked around and saw that there was a big hole in the box, large enough to permit either of the beasts to escape, but which was filled by the heads of both hyenas, whose white teeth gleamed unpleasantly near his back. With a yell Frank whipped up his horses and dashed through the streets like a madman, never stopping until he reached the Zoo. There the hyenas were beaten back and the hole was boarded over, but Mullin didn't entirely recover for a day or two.

Never Quarrel With An Editor

My grandfather, writes Labouchere, was on intimate terms with Talleyrand. One day Talleyrand said to him: "I always had thought that you were possessed with a certain amount of sense, but I see that I was in error." "Why?" asked my grandfather. "Because," he replied, "I observed in a newspaper this morning that you had contradicted a statement about yourself." As a rule, anyone who replies to a newspaper on a personal matter is an ass—especially to that, accompanied by comment. The editor does not like being placed in the wrong, and he generally manages to have the last word. If I saw in a newspaper a statement that I had committed a murder, I doubt whether I should deny it. But if the newspaper were to ask me whether I could prove an alibi, I most certainly should not look to do so.

SUN

LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA.

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,130.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Beamer were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit a professed abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurances with six per cent. per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

LOCAL NEWS.

Bright and Funny.

Relative to the merits of the McDowell Comedy Company, which appears in the Opera House to-night, the Detroit Free Press says:—"The McDowell Comedy Company was a happy surprise to the numerous audience at White's Opera House last night. It had not been noisily heralded, and as an organization it was practically unknown, yet it is one of the best chosen, best balanced and best disciplined companies seen here this season. The initial play is entitled "Our Regiment," an adaptation from the German of Von Moser, who is better known in this country as the author of the "Private Secretary." It goes without saying that "Our Regiment" is bright and funny, coming from such a source. One would as soon doubt the wit of Sidney Smith or the simplicity of Charles Lamb, as question the mirthful charm of Von Moser, and it may interest a large division of the public to learn that "Our Regiment" is a brighter, prettier, neater and in all respects more satisfying diversion—comedy, farce or what not—than the much be-laughed "Private Secretary." It is also a reassuring discovery that the McDowell Company can play "Our Regiment" as it ought to be played. Artists—by which is meant players who comprehend their responsibility; who do conscientious work; whose performances indicate studious investigation of character and trained powers of expressing dramatic thought—compose this company." "Our Regiment" will be produced to-night, Mr. McDowell and Fanny Reeves in the title roles. Admission, 25, 35 and 50c.

A Military Demonstration.

In the cities of Canada the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee, on the day authorized by the Dominion Government is being properly boomed. The Whig says that Colonel Villiers, D.A.G., has written to the Militia Department asking that the volunteer camp for 1887 be held at Kingston in June, and that, besides allowing the Third regiment of cavalry, the Kingston and Durham field batteries, the 40th, 46th and 47th regiments to participate in a military spectacle, the transport expenses of the 14th P. W. O. Rifles, 15th Light Argyles, Belleville, and 57th battalion, Peterborough, be paid in order that they may join in the demonstration. All these corps will be receiving pay for drilling, and at a small cost could be transported to the city. The city would be asked to entertain the visiting regiments. With this large brigade of 199 officers and 2,038 men a grand assault could be made on Fort Henry by land and water, or an attack by land on Barriefield, while Major-General Middleton and other high military men could hold a review and inspection. The details could be considered later by a council of military men. A grand civil celebration could also be held, to continue, if the citizens desired, for two days.

A choice assortment of Scotch and Canadian Tweeds, Worsteds, and West of England Pantings to select from at Turnbull's. Remember, there is a first-class tailor always on the premises to execute work promptly.

Aid for the Home.

By reference to the report of the Ontario Legislature proceedings in another column, it will be seen that the Local Government has decided to give the Peterborough Protestant Home some substantial aid. As the grant will likely be utilized in part for refurnishing the Home, it will be a matter of mature consideration where the new furniture shall be purchased. Of course, it sounds preposterous for a public journal to give advice and suggestions in a case of this kind, yet Mr. D. Belleghem is authority for the statement that he can fill the order better and cheaper than any other furniture factor in town. His stock he claims to be superior to any, in quality and price, and Belleghem won't take a back seat from anyone. His handsome warerooms on Hunter street are open for inspection. Visit him and prove his statements for yourselves.

GLADSTONE has written criticism on Tennyson's new poem, but forget to say anything about Kidd's cordovan boots, handsewed, for $3.90 per pair.

River Trent Navigation Improvements.

The Mail's Ottawa correspondent on Wednesday wrote as follows:—"Mayor Stevenson, M. P., Dr. Boucher, Messrs. Carnegie, R. A. Morrow and James Kendry, of Peterborough, waited upon the Minister of Railways and Canals this afternoon to urge the continuation of the work of improving the navigation of the River Trent. Last session Parliament voted the sum of $263,000 for the construction of locks and improving navigation between Lakefield and Balsam Lake. The whole of this appropriation has not been spent, and the deputation asked that this summer the section between Lakefield and Peterborough should receive attention. Mr. Pope promised to bring the question before the Government."

Turnbull's dress goods counter and shelves are now filled with new goods in every conceivable shade, with trimmings to match. His prices are the lowest and styles the best. Look through and be convinced.

Boys made happy. Only 60c. for a pair of boots at Kidd's new store.

A Minister's Narrow Escape.

Mr. "Pete" Moffat did a brave thing last night, and paid for his bravery with a smashed sleigh and badly bruised foot. Pete, it is well known, drives one of the smartest cabs in town, and was, as usual, in attendance at the station upon the arrival of the 7.35 C. P. R. express last night. Among the passengers were Rev. Mr. Tovell, wife and child, whom Pete escorted to his sleigh. He seized his horses and took his seat, when he suddenly became aware that a team of horses belonging to a fellow-hackman, Mr. Gibbs, were dashing towards his sleigh at break-neck speed. Before he could say "Jack Robinson" the runaways were upon him, and Pete's right hand shot out and fortunately secured a grip on the bridle. In another moment the beasts would have pounced upon Mr. and Mrs. Tovell, but Pete's brave action turned the nigh horse's head aside and threw both back on their haunches. Borne on, however, by the impetus of their speed, the animals toppled over into the sleigh, one falling directly on Mr. Tovell, who was imprisoned and unable to move. Pete dragged Mrs. Tovell and the child from the sleigh in safety, and then Mr. Tovell was soon released. The horse was very quiet and tractable; had it been otherwise, had it begun to struggle and kick, Mr. Tovell would have been seriously hurt if not killed outright. It was a thrilling escape, and all parties should be thankful over its mild consequences. How Gibbs' horses became loose, if they were tied at all, is not known. Neither they nor the sleigh they drew were hurt. One of Mr. Moffat's horses received a bad cut.

A $900 Contribution.

A big batch of Scott Act cases were disposed of to-day. There were ten cases in all, one of which was dismissed, three were fined $100 and costs for second offences, four $50 and costs each, and the remaining two were adjourned. There were three cases from Norwood and seven from town.

SURELY the place to get kid boots is from the Kidd, next door to Messrs. Mills' hat store.

A Masonic Conference.

A conference of the members of the two Masonic lodges in town has been called for this evening at the Masonic Hall, to take into consideration the amendment to the constitution, proposed to be made at the coming annual meeting of the Grand Lodge to be held next June.

CHILDREN should not be allowed to go with wet feet, because a pair of solid kip boots from Kidd's new store costs only 70 cents.

The Funny Editor's Contribution.

The city of Chillicotte, Missouri, cannot be expected to thrive and improve very rapidly, because it has a Weekly Constitution, but an extract, of local interest, to be found in another column, gives indications to the contrary.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO.

Ninth Parliament—First Session.

TUESDAY MARCH 22.

Several petitions were presented, some bills introduced, and some given a third reading and passed.

HON. MR. HARDY moved that this House doth ratify an order-in-Council approved by the Lieutenant-Governor on the 22nd day of June, 1886, which order is to the following effect:—Upon consideration of the report of Mr. Inspector Christie, dated 3rd June, 1886, and the recommendation of the Provincial Secretary, the Committee of Council advise that, subject to the ratification of this order by the Legislative Assembly at the next session thereof, the Protestant Home, Peterborough, be hereafter taken as named in schedule "B" of the Charity Aid Act, and receive aid accordingly from the first day of October, 1885.

The motion passed as well as a similar one granting aid to Belleville Hospital.

HON. MR. FRASER moved that a special committee be appointed to consider and enquire into the operation of "The Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, 1886."—Carried.

HON. MR. MOWAT gave notice that he would move the House into Committee to-day (Wednesday) to consider the "Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park" scheme.

The House went into Committee of Supply at 3:20 and passed all the estimates except three items.

WEDNESDAY, March 23rd.

Among the petitions presented were a number from various parts of the Province in favor of instruction being given in the Public Schools as to the effect of alcohol upon the human system, also a number from Labor organizations, praying for the abolition of property qualification for municipal offices, manhood suffrage, and other amendments of existing laws; also many, bearing in all 2,941 names, presented by Mr. Waters, in favor of enfranchising married women who are property owners in municipal elections, and also enfranchising unmarried women and widows who are property owners in elections for members of the Local Legislature.

HON. MR. HARDY presented a bill respecting the guardianship of minors which was read the first time.

Hon. Mr. HARDY also presented a bill respecting distress for rent and taxes, which was read the first time.

Hon. G. W. ROSS presented a bill to amend the Act relating to the Education Department, which was read the first time.

Hon. G. W. Ross presented a bill to amend the Act relating to the Public Schools, which was read the first time.

Mr. NAIRN presented a bill to amend the Municipal Act, which was read the first time.

THE BIBLE IN THE SCHOOLS.

Mr. CLARKE, of Wellington, asked whether the regulations requiring the Scripture Readings in the schools, to be taken from the authorized book of selections, remained in force or whether such readings could be selected by the teachers under the authority of the trustees.

Hon. Mr. ROSS replied that the Readings were not intended, and never had been, to supersede the Bible, but the use of them was made compulsory only where the Bible was not used. If there was the least doubt or ambiguity about the subject, he said, he would introduce interpreting regulations declaring what the law has been and is.

In reply to Mr. Monk, Hon. Mr. Mowat made satisfactory explanations respecting the appointment of registrars for Carleton and Lennox, and county attorney for York. Their commissions dated from Dec. 28th. He showed that while these offices were vacant, the services of officiant deputies prevented any public inconvenience.

Mr. CREIGHTON introduced a motion against the exemption of Dominion officials from municipal taxation and declaring that steps should be taken to get a decision from the Privy Council as to the power of the Legislature to deal with the matter.

Hon. Mr. MOWAT moved an amendment, affirming the justice of Mr. Creighton's contention, and regretting that the Dominion Parliament has not followed the example of Ontario and enacted legislation, giving power to tax Government officials for municipal purposes. The Premier's position was strengthened by a strong speech from Mr. Hardy, and by brief, pithy comments from Mr. Drury and Mr. Strattou.

The amendment of Hon. Mr. Mowat was carried:—Yeas, 52; nays, 32.

MR. WATERS' bill to extend the municipal franchise to women came up for the second reading, and received the six months' hoist by a vote of 55 to 19.

The bill to define the boundary between Smith and Peterborough received its second reading.

Mr. Ingram's bill to amend the Assessment Act, so as to exempt the amount of $300 on income from assessment, was read a second time.

A BEAUTIFUL photograph given away with every pair of child's boots at Kidd's.

Temperance Evangelistic Meeting.

The "Hamilton Helpers" held a successful meeting in the Mission church Auburn last evening. The church was crowed. Messrs Stead and Dunnet sang a number of sacred and temperance songs, some being re-demanded. Mr. T. Hobdon delivered an address on organization in temperance work. At the close of the public meeting a Council of Royal Templars was held and a number initiated into the Order. To-night a meeting in St. Andrew's Church will be conducted by the "Helpers."

Personal.

Messrs. Alex. Elliott and James Dolan left last night on their tour to the Pacific Coast—visiting San Francisco, and Los Angelos. They expect to be absent about two months. Los Angelos is Spanish "for the angels," and some of "the boys" are wicked enough to say that these two confirmed celibates are more solicitous about "the angels" of the far west than about the renovation of their health.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Edwy G. Stratton has successfully passed his examinations (second year) in medicine at Detroit Medical College, taking a highly creditable standing in all the subjects. To make himself more fully acquainted with hospital practice, he will spend his vacation in "walking the wards" of the different hospitals in the city.

Cure for Croup.

Prompt relief to prevent suffocation from the osculamation of tough mucous—the formation of false membranes—and the constriction of the air passage, is necessary in case of a sudden attack of croup. Hagyard's Yellow Oil should be used at once, afterwards Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. 2w12d

This is to certify that I have used McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and do honestly say that if it cost me one hundred dollars ($100.00) a bottle I would not be without it, as it has done me more good than all the medicines I ever used, and I feel like a new man.—Yours truly, Jas. Grant, Carleton Place, Ont. This medicine is for sale at 50c. and $1. per bottle at John McKee's drug store. eodw12

NO USE FOR COERCION

THERE IS NO NECESSITY FOR IT NOW IN IRELAND.

LONDON, March 24.—In the House of Commons this evening the debate on the motion for urgency for the Coercion Bill was resumed by Mr. Gladstone. He referred to the "unprecedented" position of the House, which had already sat two months, during which, he said, its independent initiative had been surpressed. Even now the Conservatives exulted over the prospect of passing a motion forcing the House to an absolute surrender of its whole time until a bill of an extremely severe character had been carried. The House was threatened with a frequent application of the cloture if debates were protracted. No greater calamity could befall the House than this sort of pressure. It would sap the authority of the chair and bring the procedure rules into disrepute. He had seen more parliamentary life than any other man in the House, but he never knew of so grave a state of affairs. It was due to an extreme abuse of power by the majority, which if persisted in, would leave behind a sense of intolerable wrong. The yoke thus put on the neck of the House would not be borne patiently. The position of affairs now was very different from that when the Coercion Bill of 1881 was passed. There were no papers before the House now, nor was there any indication of the nature of the proposed Government measure. Heretofore, in asking special legislation for dealing with crime in Ireland, ministers had tried to show that the terrible prevalence of crime threatened social order. Was that the case now? No. The House had been told that the number of agrarian offences prior to the passage of Mr. Forster's Coercion Act exceeded the highest number since. Crime then, however, was of a different character from that which the Government now sought to check. Present crime consisted in combining to obtain a reduction of rent. [Irish cheers.] Even the evidence which the Government put before the House showed that this crime was restricted to demands for just abatements of rent. Never had any former Coercion Act been resisted by a majority of members from Ireland. [Cheers.] Now there was a protest against coercion from an overwhelming majority of Irish members. [Cheers.] Had the Government any just claim for demanding coercion or urgency for a new repressive measure? After appointing a commission to examine on the spot the rent question and the evils arising from land laws, the Government now put aside the recommendations of the commission and asked Parliament for increased power to make the laws still more offensive to the general sense of the people. [Irish cheers.] Gen. Buller's evidence proved that tenants not paying rent were anxious to pay; that there were no general movements against payment, but only a combined effort to obtain fair rents. The Irish people were apt to follow the example constantly set by others, and see what they could make of it. [Cheers.] The Government said that contracts should not be broken. Yet Mr. Balfour, while preaching the doctrine of sanctity of contracts, was going to introduce a bill breaking leasehold contracts adjusted under the Land Act of 1881, just as the judicial rents were. It was not to vindicate the sanctity of contracts nor to repress a widespread outbreak of crime that the Government now demanded coercion for Ireland. Of whatever nature the Government measure should turn out to be, it was the duty of the Liberals now, whether in the minority or in the majority, to refuse urgency. He trusted that the people of England would see the Liberals united in opposing this ill-omened measure to the last stage and that the Liberal members would ring out the voices of justice and reason against a Government which, after eighty-six years of experience, were preparing, under the name of a statute of Parliament, to strike a fresh blow at the life and happiness of Ireland, and at the prosperity, contentment and unity of the Empire. [Cheers.]

Mr. Gladstone's denunciation of the use of the cloture to curtail the debates on the urgency motion and the Coercion Bill forced the Government to reconsider the subject. The Ministry decided to permit a prolongation of the discussion, but will insist that the House forego its Easter vacation unless the Coercion Bill be passed before the holidays.

A section of the Gladstonian party is discontented with Mr. Gladstone's half-veiled approval of the Plan of Campaign. The Parnellite Home Rulers and Parnellites are delighted with the speech.

Mr. Balfour, in introducing the Coercion Bill, will respond to Mr. Gladstone's challenge to the Government to state what crime exists that justifies the adoption of the measure. The Dublin Executive has prepared a statement which is designed to assist Mr. Balfour in proving that the Plan of Campaign is now being directed against tradesmen who are creditors of farmers belonging to the National League. The Parnellites will maintain that the plan is strictly confined to arrangements respecting rent.

In response to a circular asking their views on the subject, the Irish Wesleyan ministers, with six exceptions, have replied that they are opposed to Home Rule.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach has gone to Cologne.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL BILL.

The Oberhaus Adopts It in the Form Recommended.

BERLIN, March 24.—The Oberhaus to-day adopted the Ecclesiastical Bill in the form recommended by the committee with the additions of Bishop Kopp's amendments that the right of the state to veto appointments shall only be operative in cases of persistent nominations to causes also that officeholders to orders shall not depend upon the resolution of the Government.

THE MURDER OF TILLIE SMITH.

The Court of Pardons Commutes Justice Titus' Sentence.

NEW YORK, March 24.—A Trenton dispatch says there is doubt as to the authenticity of the confession just published as that of Titus, the murderer of Tillie Smith. The Clerk of the Board of Pardons says he knows nothing of it, and Titus' counsel and friends repudiate it.

In the alleged confession Titus states substantially that at a considerable period before the night of the murder, and at divers times he made advances to Tillie Smith which were received with favor. On the night of the murder he consented to wait for her and let her in. On her return the two went to the janitor's room, where they spent some time. She afterward communicated to him her fears that she was in trouble, and told him that if such should be the case she should expose him as the author of her ruin. He protested against that course, and she insisted on it till, as he says, he grasped her by the throat and held her for a moment. He heard a gurgling sound, and thinking something serious had happened went for a light and when he returned found she was dead. The Court of Pardons commuted the sentence because the murder was not premeditated. It is asserted that Titus was not the original author of the girl's downfall.

INTERESTING TO TOOL MAKERS.

A New Process of Treating Steel Said to Have Been Discovered.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Two Kentuckians, one of them a blacksmith, recently called at the Navy Department and announced that they had discovered a process of treating steel which, if their claims are borne out by facts, will practically revolutionize the art of steel tool making. They did not divulge the motive of invention further than to intimate that it related to a chemical bath in which the tool is immersed in the tempering process. They asserted that by their method of treatment the commonest grades of metal, such as shear or cast steel, could be so tempered in the matter of hardness and toughness as to fully equal the best grades of tool steel. Moreover, the results of treatment are asserted to be so under control that it is possible to temper steel to any degree of hardness or toughness that may be required by the use for which it is intended. Commodore Sicard of the navy yard ordered a specimen bar of steel to be prepared and experiments have already been begun.

THE EDITOR AND THE LAWYER.

A Report that Pulitzer of New York Has Challenged Col. Shafer.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., March 24. — Col. Shafer, who the Graphic says has been challenged by Joseph Pulitzer, stated to-night that the Graphic report of his rejoinder to the challenge is correct.

Pulitzer Denies It.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The Graphic this afternoon published a fac simile of a letter purporting to have been sent by Editor Joseph Pulitzer of the World to Lawyer Ira Shafer, in which the former challenges the latter to mortal combat in no complimentary terms. Mr. Pulitzer pronounced the letter a vile and outright forgery and said he had never addressed a line to Mr. Shafer.

Pool Selling No Offence.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Two dozen overjoyed betting men and horse touts shook little "Abe" Hummel's right arm nearly off.

The scene was in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday, and the diminutive counsellor had just secured the discharge of his client, a gayly dressed young man named Albert Heuser, who was charged with selling a pool ticket on the race horse Favor to Detective McCord at No. 110 Third-avenue on March 10.

Mr. Hummel made this plea: "The Penal Code, while making it a crime to record or register bets or wagers or to sell pools on the result of any trial or contest of speed or power of endurance, does not make it an offence to sell or vend a ticket. There is nothing in the Penal Code to prohibit any one from doing just what my client is called to task for."

The three judges consulted a moment and decided "not guilty."

Then the handshaking was lively.

This is the first time the law relating to pool selling has been construed and acted upon according to the interpretation made by Mr. Hummel.

The Emigrants Escaped.

NORTH EAST, Md., March 24.—A passenger train on the Baltimore and Philadelphia Railway collided with a through freight at Leslie, at 2 o'clock this morning. Both trains were badly wrecked and the locomotives entirely telescoped. On the passenger train were two car loads of emigrants, but no one outside of the crews of the locomotives were injured. Geo. Craghan, fireman of eastbound train, was fatally injured and Engineer Geo. Robinett and Fireman Geo. Armstrong were severely injured. The express matter was strewn and scattered in every direction. The accident is attributed to the engineer of the eastbound train being late and trying to reach the usual place of passing.

Fifteen Years After.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 24.—Gov. Thayer has signed the death warrant of Jack Marion, who has been sentenced to be hanged at Beatrice. The crime for which Marion will hang is the murder of John Cameron in 1 73. It was one year after the murder before the body was found and Marion suspected of the crime, and ten years more elapsed before the criminal was arrested. The case has been in the courts for five years, and three times the prisoner has been sentenced to death.

A Railway to be Sold.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., March 24.—In the case of the Central National Bank of Boston, against the New York, Rutland and Montreal Railway Co., Judge Wallace, in the U.S. circuit court, decided to-day that the receiver's certificates issued by Receiver Van Valkenburg to the amount of $350,000 are a first lien upon the property of the railroad company in the hands of purchasers. A decree was ordered for the sale of the railroad to pay the certificates.

Unnecessary Strikes.

DETROIT, March 24.—District Assembly K. of L. of this city will soon issue a circular to the assemblies in its jurisdiction warning them if they precipitate any strikes without directions from the District Board they will not receive its official aid. The board discussed this question at the last meeting and concluded the rules must be enforced if it broke up the order, as the other course will certainly have that effect.

A Murderess Reappears.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—Laura Fair, who shot and killed A. P. Crittenden in 1870 because he deserted her and rejoined his wife, has just brought suit against Dr. R. F. Tyford for $1000, which she claims she gave him to pay some of her expenses during her trial for that crime, and which he retained. The case was the most famous ever known in California. Mrs. Fair was acquitted on her second trial. Her present suit recalls her to public remembrance. She is now keeping a lodging-house in this city and retains but little of her former beauty.

A BEAUTIFUL photograph given away with every pair of child's boots at Kidd's.

THE BUFFALO FIRE.

Another Victim Added to the List—Searching the Ruins.

BUFFALO, March 24.—The Richmond Hotel ruins are swarming with laborers to-day, engaged in digging for bodies and lost treasures. The high toppling walls have been taken down, and the work may now be pursued with safety to the men. Following the odors of burnt human flesh that were so noticeable yesterday, it is probable that some remains will be brought up from under the rubbish. The spots most likely to contribute to the list of deaths already published are beneath the windows along the south wall of the hotel, beneath the space of the hotel office and the staircase and also where the skylight was located, through which, it has been ascertained beyond a doubt, several people fell while fleeing through the burning halls. At the foot of the narrow staircase leading out on Eagle-street from the upper floors of the hotel some ladies will probably be found. It was down these stairs that a large number of frightened and excited people sought to escape and some of them are remembered by the rescued, as falling and remaining there.

The gents' furnishing department of the Boston Clothing House was the first thing struck by the laborers in the Richmond Hotel ruins this morning. Flannel underwear of every color and style, silk and linen handkerchiefs of different varieties, suspenders without number, and cuffs, collars and neckties in big piles were cast up by the spades and dumped into a pile on Eagle-street. Nearly everything is scorched and ruined for any marketable purpose. The entire lot of stuff will either be sold as public auction or donated to the different city charity organizations, where the things can be made over to suit some one.

About 12 solid feet of debris remains to be removed before the bottom can be reached, and though the work is pushed with all the speed possible it will be a week before the rubbish can be cleared between the walls.

The list of deaths has been increased by another since yesterday. This is Mary Nolan, whose life has been hanging by a thread since Sunday. She was terribly burnt and bruised by a fall, and died in a raving delirium about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The funeral will take place from the family residence, 826 Exchange-street, at 8.30 o'clock to-morrow morning, and from St. Patrick's Church at 9 o'clock.

Mrs. W. J. Mann, whose condition was reported quite favorable to a recovery yesterday morning, began to decline last evening and kept sinking lower and lower until midnight, when she was supposed to be dying. She was conscious and summoned her parents and other relatives in the house to her bedside and bade them good-by. She was calm and, though enduring the most excruciating pains from her burns, she bore her sufferings without complaint. She desired to see her husband, who was confined in another room with his injuries, but it was not thought advisable to do so. Mrs. Mann's face is so badly burned that she is unable to recognize anyone, and the sight of her injuries, it is believed, would have a depressing effect upon her husband. Her condition this noon is unchanged, and the hopes for her recovery are very slight.

ANOTHER CRY EXPLODED.

The question of Mr. Clarke of Wellington in the Local Legislature respecting the status of the Bible in its entirety in the school, as affected by the regulations of the Educational Department, evoked an answer that should in unprejudiced minds, set at rest, the question of the exclusion of the Bible from them. Mr. Clarke asked whether the regulation regarding the reading of the Bible in the High and Public schools of the Province, which provides that the portion of Scripture used shall be taken from the selections authorized for that purpose by the Department of Education, is still in force; or whether such readings may be selected by the teacher, under the direction of the trustees, from the authorized version of the Bible. Hon. Mr. Ross' reply is so important a subject is worthy of being given as full as reported. Mr. Ross stated that "the object of the action of the Government was to have the Bible read in the schools more generally and more systematically. It was to secure this object that the books of selections was adopted at the instance and upon the recommendation of the Protestant clergy of all denominations, without objection from any quarter until, for political purposes, the book so recommended and adopted, or any book of Scripture selections, began to be denounced. The Government agree with the Protestant clergymen who revised and recommended the book (some of whom have since been using it at family worship in their own homes) that it would be an advantage that the Scripture readings in the schools should be from the book of selections, but political agitation has created in some quarters a prejudice against this course, thus, for a time depriving the book of its usefulness where this prejudice exists. Where, for this or any reason, the trustees of a school prefer that the reading shall be from the Bible itself instead of from the book of selections, or where trustees prefer to have passages read which are not in the book of selections, the Government have no desire to interfere, and do not propose to interfere, so long as the Bible or its contents are read daily and systematically. If the text of the regulation requires any modification in order to admit of this course, the modification will be made."

This explanation should be satisfactory to all those genuinely anxious for the promotion of the spread of Bible knowledge among the pupils of the public schools, but it is doubtful if it will satisfy those political zealots, who, under guise of an interest in the Bible, have made the assumed exclusion of them from the public schools, the ground of partizan attacks upon the Educational Department and upon the Mowat Government. Although the Government may not show the zeal of the Toronto school board, as shown by the determination of one of the members to have "the whole d—— Bible or none at all" in the public schools, Mr. Ross' explanation shows that it has been anxious to promote the extension of a knowledge of the Bible in the public schools. It does not follow that the plan proposed to bring about this result was deliberately hostile to the demands of the Protestant clergy of the Province, because interested parties, led away, some by bigotry, some by imbibed prejudice, some by purely partizan feeling, chose to distort the position and wrest the facts to the arrival at wrong conclusions in respect of the matter.

THE Montreal Witness thus points out the effects of reciprocity:—"A New York company with a capital of $10,000,000 has been formed to develop the iron mines of Ontario and certainly there is plenty of room for the energy not only of such a corporation as the one proposed, but of half a dozen others like it, as far as a plentiful supply of iron goes. There is more iron lying around the rocky districts of Ontario than anything else, there are hills, islands and valleys of it, but in many mines the proportion of sulphur to iron in the ore, is so large, that it is difficult to use the iron, and there is absolutely no market, owing to the American duty, for the product of those mines in which the iron is comparatively free from sulphur. Iron mining in Ontario is, under existing circumstances, rather unprofitable. Reciprocity would, however, make the nearly valueless iron mines of Ontario, that is, those that are freest from sulphur, extremely valuable,

A PAPER entitled "Mobilization and Concentration of the Canadian Militia for Defence of the Frontier," printed in the current issue of the Journal of the Military Service Institution, of the United States, has caused no little comment in both military and civilian circles. The writer, from a Canadian point of view, in fixing the number of men at the smallest possible limit, for the defence of a line extending from Quebec to Detroit, bases his calculation on a force of 150,000 men. This force is divided as follows:—50,000 at Montreal, 10,000 at Quebec, 10,000 at Kingston, and 50,000 at Toronto and in the western peninsula. The remaining 30,000 to be used as a movable column along the north bank of the St. Lawrence. The article also contains a military map showing the militia districts, the defence works and the disposition of the available force to the greatest advantage. The paper will be continued in the next issue of the Military Journal.

THE election in the Vancouver district on Thursday resulted in the re-election of Mr. D. W. Gordon, Conservative majority, 170.

Our Experience Column.

What Kind of a Husband Have You?—Tell Us All About Him, Reader.

The Winnipeg Sun has afforded its readers a deal of interesting reading by publishing the correspondence which is invited upon matrimonial questions. The idea is worthy of adoption, and to that end we shall publish the replies which our lady readers choose to send to the following questions—provided they are polite and reasonable.

1. What kind of a husband have you?
2. Is he cross, sulky, stingy and mean? or is he liberal, open-hearted, generous and kind to yourself and children?
3. Does he spend his evenings at home, and if not why not? Does he belong to the lodge, and how often does it meet each week?
4. Has married life been all that you expected it to be?
5. If there has been any disappointment what has been the cause of it?
6. Does the case admit of remedy, and what do you think the remedy should be?
7. Have you any suggestions to offer to such of your sex as contemplate marriage? What is your advice to them ere they have taken a decisive step?

The answers must be short and should be sharp, and as pithy as it is possible to make them. Give your experience. Your husband will read what you have to say about him, and if he is not an altered man afterwards he is past redemption. The correspondence must be anonymous of course.

Highly Spoken of.

Mr. James M. Lawson, of Woodville, Ont., speaks in high terms of Yellow Oil for rheumatism, lame back, sprains and painful complaints. Yellow Oil is used internally and externally in case of pain; also coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., and has made many remarkable cures of deafness. 2w12d

Presents for Hindoos.

A Lyons firm has received an order for 20,000 gross of white silk handkerchiefs, stamped with the Queen's head, to be sent to India as jubilee presents.

Have you Toothache? Use Fluid Lightning. Have you Rheumatism? Use fluid Lightning. Have you a stiff Joint? Use Fluid Lightning. Have you Neuralgia? Use Fluid Lightning. Have you Lumbago? Use Fluid Lightning. Are you troubled with Headache? Use Fluid Lightning. Have you any Pain? Use Fluid Lightning. It will cure you the instant it is applied. Cure for Croup.

Prompt relief to prevent suffocation from the accumulation of tough mucous—the formation of false membrance—and the constriction of the air passage, is necessary in case of a sudden attack of croup. Hagyard's Yellow Oil should be used at once, afterwards Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. 2w12d

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Lawrie, of Otonabee, while chopping in the bush last Tuesday cut his foot severely on the instep.

In our last report we unintentionally omitted to mention that Miss Annie McFarlane, as Highland Lassie, got a silk handkerchief as a prize, and that Miss Bella McFarlane got first prize for a comic costume, "The Old Woman with a Stick."

The curling match that took place last week between Campbellford and Keene resulted in a victory for Keene.

In consequence of the train accident that day, which detained the Campbellford curlers till late in the day, the match was not quite completed.

A Good Motive.

Harry Ricardo, of Toronto, agent for Fine Art Publications, states that he was so troubled with deafness for eight years that he could scarcely attend to business, until he tried Yellow Oil. He desires to make this cure known, for the benefit of others afflicted. 2w12

A Sure Sign.

Chambermaid—"Wait, Mary, it isn't time to lock up the house yet. Miss Ethel's young man is in the parlour." Kitchen Girl—"He's gone, Sarah." "Did you hear the front door shut?" "No, but the parlour gas is turned up again."

MONTAIGNE speaks of "reposing upon the pillow of a doubt." Better repose upon the certainty that Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will cure all chronic female diseases with their attendant pains and weaknesses.

Dear Sir.—Your "Favorite Prescription" has worked wonders in my case. It gave immediate relief. Mrs. M. Gleason, Nunica, Ottawa, Co., Mich. 6dw12

CURRENT EVENTS.

Six-year-old Mary M. informed the family a few days ago that she wished to go to church Sunday, as she was interested in what would be said. After much persuasion she was induced to say that she "spected after the men and women had sung the minister would get up and say: The Progressive Whist Club will meet with Mrs. M. next Wednesday night.'"—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Henner, the Alsatian, is one of the few artists in Paris who sell all their pictures for good prices in hard times as well as good. To a friend who admiringly remarked to him that he must be making $40,000 a year, "Very likely," he said; "I keep no account of it. But I might earn still more if I were not bothered and hindered. These bourgeois are such cattle."

A huge California hawk swooped down on a sleeping cat at Santa Rosa the other day and bore it squalling and scratching high in the air. When about 500 feet high the hawk lost its grip and the cat came down with fearful velocity, but the hawk caught it again just before it struck the earth and was carrying it off when suddenly both fell like lead to the ground. The cat had bitten through the hawk's head, killing it instantly, and the fall killed the cat.

Pliny Martindale of Kirtland, O., is a well-to-do, but apparently very lazy, not to say heartless farmer. He had 300 sheep when winter set in and plenty of grain and fodder; but the other day an agent for the humane society found seventy-one of the sheep dead, forty being piled in the basement of one barn and twenty-three in another, and others scattered about the place. They had all starved to death.

Alabama is in luck in her effort to catch up to Pennsylvania as a producer of iron. Her good fortune as to ore and lime deposits had just begun to attract attention when Pennsylvania's development of natural-gas wells again renewed our former advantages. But the Alabamians then began to hunt for gas, and it is now reported that a supply has been found near Birmingham, and that pipes are to be laid to the mills without loss of time.—Phila. Ledger.

The thirteen States of Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, Oregon, Rhode Island, Vermont, and West Virginia, with an aggregate population which does not exceed that of New York alone, have twenty-six United States senators to New York's two. From the five States of New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts, and Ohio the government derives one-half of all its postal revenues.

Steamboat Frank, a Modoc Indian who was captured at the time of the Modoc war, and who is still a prisoner of the United States, is attending, by permit of the government, the Oak Grove Seminary in Maine. He now calls himself Frank Modoc, and is studying for the ministry. He is making good progress in his studies, and is apparently a devout Christian. He is proud of his descent from a long line of Modoc chieftains, and conducts himself with true Indian dignity.

Alexander G. Drake, a colored carpenter of Louisville, is coming into prominence as a temperance revivalist. He is fifty-nine years old, an ex-slave, and is said to be doing good. His plan of work is to secure signers to a pledge which binds them for three months, a year, or for life, as they may elect. The pledge is unique, and reads: "I do sincerely hope that if I drink beer or whisky (date named here), without being considered sick, that bad luck may be mine the remainder of my life, so help me God."

Gen. Billot, the new French embassador to St. Petersburg, has never before served in a diplomatic capacity. He is taciturn, cold, and circumspect; he knows how to select those only who can serve him, and he neglects those who only seem of no use to him or who can not be dangerous to his purposes. He speaks fluently on subjects which he understands and maintains an imperturbable silence when subjects are discussed with which he is not familiar. He is every inch a soldier, and his bearing in a drawing-room is all that can be desired.

In the course of a lecture on Kew Gardens, recently delivered at the Westminster Friends' Meeting House, London, J. G. Baker said the total number of characteristically tropical plants known to science might be roughly estimated at from 40,000 to 50,000. The plants of the north temperate zone comprise about 20,000 species. "The total flora of the arctic zone does not reach 1,000 species, and the plants which are confined to the higher levels of the mountains of the north temperate zone may possibly be twice as numerous, in all 3,000 species of what gardeners call alpines, that is, plants specially adapted to a cold, damp climate with a short summer." The same speaker estimates the total number of plants represented in the British possessions at 46,000 species.

The Story of Hundreds.

I a recent letter received from Mrs. Sarah A. Mills, of Wheatley, Ont., she says, "I was a sufferer for six years with dyspepsia and liver complaint. My food did not digest and I grew weaker every day. I lost appetite and had little hope of recovery. I tried many remedies, but all in vain, till I took Burdock Blood Bitters. The first bottle gave relief; after taking seven bottles, I am thankful that I now enjoy good health." 2w12d.

The Irish Delegate in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—At to-day's session of the Philadelphia conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. John Kennedy, of Ireland, delegate to the conference of Ireland, was introduced. He said the outlook for better things in Ireland was very much better than it had been when he and they used to live. There are 3000 national schools in full away and two Methodist colleges doing the work of God. The Land Bill has done a great thing, the Irish landlordism and the day for being rack-rented has passed away forever.

President Cleveland's Health.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Dr. Z. T. Somers, one of the most eminent physicians of Washington, in a conversation with a reporter to-day declares that there is danger that President Cleveland will not live through his term unless there is a change in his mode of living. Dr. Somers, six months before Mr. Manning's illness, made the same prediction with regard to the secretary, and advised a friend to warn him of his danger.

LOCAL NEWS.

Our Regiment.

From overture to curtain the play of "Our Regiment" presented in Bradbuan's Opera House on Thursday evening was a delightful experience of perpetual fun. The house was crowded in every part, and the delight and enjoyment of the audience was manifested by continuous laughter and frequent applause. It can hardly be said that there is any plot to the play. It brings together several persons whose conflicting sentiments and the complications which arise, result in humorous climaxes, provocative of roars of laughter. Two officers of the Lancers are brought in contact with two elderly gentleman, one whose appreciation of the merits of the military amounts to a mania, and the other whose antipathy is marked, to the verge of considering the standing army a "standing disgrace." To these add two sprightly girls, the daughter and ward of the aforesaid gentlemen, with a decided touch of "scarlet fever," and one with a peachant for callow curates, one of whom is a prominent and well sustained character. The amusing contretemps and complication of cross purposes in love are emphasized by the brightness and sparkle of the dialogue, and the dramatic emphasis which every member of the cast very cleverly supplies. Each actor seemed to have a thorough comprehension of his or her part and seemed to make the most of it, and these blended in a well mounted, smoothly conducted play with splendid costumes, made the presentation of "Our Regiment" a charming entertainment throughout. Mr. McDowell, as an eye-glassed exquisite of the martial mode, was indeed exquisite throughout, and Miss Reeves, the Jamaica heiress, full of vivacious ginger, sustained her part with great spirit and excellence. The other characters were all first-class, in fact it may be truthfully said—a remark seldom applicable to a dramatic company—that among the excellent timber composing the McDowell's there is not a single "stick." Every member made herself or himself appreciated by Thursday night's performance, and the audience received with high favor the announcement that the company would return to town on April 5th, when will be presented Victorien Sardou's fine play, "Pearl."

Curlians.

Messrs. S. Clegg and E. B. Edwards played off Wednesday afternoon for the Presidents' and Vice-Presidents' medal, the former winning. The medal is a silver one, representing a curlers' stone, and was made by Mr. J. McClelland.

Thursday evening an exciting (championship) curling contest was played between rinks skipped by Messrs. J. T. Connal and J. Levasseur. The former was mulcted in the oysters. The match was watched closely by the veterans, who, judging from the rare shots made, are of opinion that these two rinks should go to Ottawa next year. So says W. G.

The curling season may be considered to be over. Thursday night one of the rinks was flooded.

The rink game has been allowed to drop.

An unusual occurrence took place at the rink the other night. A granite shied by Mr. J. H. Barnham struck another stone belonging to Mr. Cluxton "between the eyes," so to speak, and shivered it to pieces. This has not occurred in Peterborough for a number of years.

Turnbull's dress goods counter and shelves are now filled with new goods in every conceivable shade, with trimmings to match. His prices are the lowest and styles the best. Look through and be convinced.

Independent Oddfellows.

The semi-annual returns of subordinate lodges of the I.O.O.F. for 1886 shows that 1,518 members were initiated, 136 admitted by card and 126 reinstated, making 1,780 in all while 1,416 were expelled, suspended or withdrawn or died, making a net increase of 874, the whole membership at the last day of 1886 being 14,875. Paid for sick benefits, $23,590; surgeons' fees and nursing, $1,239; widows' annuities, $12,748; relief of orphans, $946; burying deceased brothers, $2,753; burying deceased wives of brothers, $1,102; special relief and charity, $1,580. The receipts from lodges amounted to $135,951, of which $79,472 was for dues and reinstatements; $25,408 for initiations, degrees and cards, and $31,070 for interests, rents, donations, etc., The total assets of lodges is $531,475.

Methodism in the United States.

Figures printed in the Methodist Year Book show that on Jan. 1, 1887, Methodism throughout the world numbered 35,000 travelling preachers and 6,320,000 members. In the United States there are 27,000 travelling preachers and 4,000,000 members and a population of over 15,000,000, or more than one fourth of the population of the entire country —56,000,000. The Methodist Episcopal Church alone numbers in the United States 12,880 travelling preachers and 2,000,000 members, having 20,000 churches, worth $77,000,000; 7,500 parsonages, worth $11,000,000; 144 college and other school properties, worth including endowments, $15,000,000; making a total of $103,000,000.

Boys made happy. Only 90c. for a pair of boots at Kidd's new store

After the Merchants.

Chief of Police Cooper wishes the EXAMINER to draw attention to a clause in a town by-law which says that:

"No person shall place any goods, wares or other merchandize, or other articles of any kind upon any street or sidewalk, but the provisions of this section shall not be construed to interfere with the use of the portion of such street or sidewalk for a reasonable time during the taking in or delivery of merchandize or other goods."

Merchants need to watch themselves as the Chief says he is going to attend to this matter more strictly than has been done in the past.

The Citizens Fire the Town.

The Hastings Star, in its preamble to an elaborate "puff" of Gough, the great clothier, thus remarks:—"The citizens of Peterborough are proud of their town—and justly so—as for its size nowhere in the Dominion can be found so many handsome residences, such clean streets, such a large number of electric lights and telephones, and an almost countless array of plate glass fronts, the display of which has induced visitors to dub the place the "plate glass city," a title which tickles the enterprising burghers immensely."

CHILDREN should not be allowed to go with wet feet, because a pair of solid kip boots from Kidd's new store costs only 70 cents.

Hamilton Helpers' Finale.

The last of the series of Gospel Temperance Meetings conducted by the Hamilton Helper's will be held in St. Paul's church tonight. The programme will consist of temperance addresses, varied by the singing by Messrs. Stead and Dunnett of the following songs:—Duet.—The Door of God's Mercy. Duet.—Welcome, Wanderer, Welcome. Song.—Rock'd in the Cradle of the Deep. Song.—Father, Bring Home Your Money To-night. Song.—The Village Blacksmith. Duet.—Larboard Watch. Duet.—Keep in the Middle of the Road. Duet.—A Shelter in the Time of Storm. Closing Song.—God be With You Till We Meet Again.

What the Trenton "Courier" Thinks.

A deputation from Peterborough have been interviewing the minister of railways urging the continuance of improvements between Peterborough and Lakefield on the Trent River. Every link added to the chain helps to complete the work, but we very much fear Peterborough is playing the chestnut game with Trenton that the completion of the whole scheme has not their unanimous support.

Saturday Night.

The meeting in the Opera House to-morrow evening, to be addressed by the Rev. J. Judd White and Mr. W. W. Buchanan, Dominion Councillor Royal Templars of Temperance, will be open to all, ladies and gentlemen. The Rev. Mr. Tovell will be chairman, and a large choir will furnish music, in addition to Mr. White's singing.

Peterborough Boys Abroad.

J. P. McLaughlin, Joseph Le Brun and Joyel, of Peterborough, who helped to win the United States championship for the Boston Independents, and Thomas Trickey, of the Bostons, formerly of the Shamrocks, are now settled in Montreal.

A choice assortment of Scotch and Canadian Tweeds, Worsteds, and West of England Pantings to select from at Turnbull's. Remember, there is a first-class tailor always on the premises to execute work promptly.

A Matter for Workingmen.

The workingmen of Peterborough are invited to attend a meeting of the Knights of Labor in their lodge room on Water street, opposite Mr. Poussette's office, on the evening of Thursday, 31st inst., at 7.30 o'clock, when subjects of interest concerning their welfare will be discussed.

The Calm After the Storm.

At the police court this morning the docket was empty. So far this month there have been $750 in fines imposed for violations of the Scott Act. Another big batch of cases will likely be disposed of next week.

Grass Linens, Table Linens, Table Napkins, Linen Handkerchiefs, etc., fresh from the loom in Belfast, Ireland, now opened out at Turnbull's. Grand value. See them.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO.

Sixth Parliament—First Session.

THURSDAY, March 24.

Hon. A. S. HARDY presented a report on Orillia, amalgamated and debtless.

A number of private bills were read a first time, and a third reading given to others.

Hon. A. S. HARDY moved the second reading of the bill for the protection of women in certain cases. The bill provides for the punishment of persons having criminal intercourse with a woman in an asylum or other place to which the Inspection Act applies. A case of this kind had arisen, and the prisoner had been acquitted because the woman was not at the time of the commission of the offence a lunatic. The bill made the offence punishable whether the woman was a lunatic or not.

The bill was read a second time.

The House concurred in a number of the items reported from Committee of Supply.

Mr. WILMOT moved the second reading of a bill to amend the Assessment Act. The bill was read the second time and referred to the Municipal Committee.

Mr. FERGUSON moved the second reading of a bill to amend the Ditches and Watercourses Act. Read a second time and referred to the Municipal Committee.

Mr. GARDIER moved the second reading of a bill to abolish property qualification for municipal offices. He thought that electors should have the greatest possible freedom of choice of candidates. It was not always the best business men in a municipality who owned the greater amount of property. The bill was read a second time and referred to the Municipal Committee.

Bills to amend the Municipal Act with reference to assessments: to allow municipalities to make improvements on the local improvement system; to reduce the qualifications of rural councillors; to divert the responsibility of municipal councils, were read a second time and referred to the Municipal Committee.

Several private bills were passed in committee including one introduced by Mr. Stratton to declare and define the correct boundary between the Township of Smith and the Town of Peterborough.

Satisfied Confidence.

J. B. H. Girard, of St. Edwidge, Clifton, P. Q., says, "I am well satisfied with the use of Burdock Blood Bitters; it has cured me of dyspepsia that I had for three years. I used five bottles, and shall tell every person I knew that may be attacked with similar sickness, and should not be afraid to guarantee every bottle used." 2w12d

This is to certify that I have used McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and do honestly say that if it cost me one hundred dollars ($100.00) a bottle I would not be without it, as it has done me more good than all the medicines I ever used, and I feel like a new man.—Yours truly, ALEX. CARDINAL GIBBONS.

HE TAKES POSSESSION OF HIS TITULAR CHURCH.

ROME, March 26.—It was just 10.30 this morning, the day being the sacred feast day of the Annunciation, when Cardinal James Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore, arrived at the iron gates of the portico of the Basilica of Santa Maria in Trastevere, for the purpose of formally taking possession of it as his titular church. He was arrayed in the robes of a cardinal, wearing a white fur cape, crimson silk mantle and a long train. When he reached the door of the church he knelt upon a cushion placed there on a strip of carpet. The canons belonging to the church and the students of the American College in Rome, wearing surplices, were waiting for the Archbishop. Bishops Keane of Richmond, Va., and Watterson of Columbus, Ohio, were with the canons waiting.

Cardinal Gibbons, when he approached the church, was accompanied by Bishop Ireland of St. Paul, Minn., and by Master of Ceremonies Marucci and others. The Cardinal, after kneeling, kissed the crucifix. The Cardinal then put on his beretta and placed incense in the thurible. He then again bared his head, took the aspersorium from the canon who had presented the crucifix, and signed himself with the sign of the cross. Then replacing the beretta he asperged the people present with holy water, after which he again removed his beretta, and was thrice incensed by the Canon, the choir meanwhile singing the antiphon, "Ecce Sacerdos Magnus."

The procession then moved to the altar, followed by the Cardinal, who blessed the people as he went. At the altar the blessed sacrament was administered, and all knelt for a short time in prayer. At the high altar the Cardinal knelt and the Canon recited the Pater Noster and other prayers. In the apse a throne with a white back and crimson canopy had been placed. The Cardinal seated himself on the throne, the bishops and priests in attendance being seated about him. The protohonotary then read in Latin the papal bill assigning the Church Santa Maria in Trastevere to Cardinal Gibbons as his titular church. After the reading of the bill the canons went forward to the throne and all but the chief canon knelt and kissed the Cardinal's hand. The Cardinal rising to receive the chief canon for the kiss of peace. An address from the canons to the Cardinal was then read in Latin. It was of great length. To this Cardinal Gibbons, remaining seated and wearing his beretta, replied in English as follows: "The assignment to me by the Holy Father of this beautiful basilica as my titular church fills me with with feelings of joy and gratitude which any words of mine are wholly inadequate to express. For, as here in Rome I stand within the first temple raised in honor of the ever blessed Virgin Mary, so in my far off home, my own cathedral church, the oldest in the United States, is also dedicated to the Mother of God. This venerable edifice in which we are gathered leads us back in contemplation to the days of the catacombs. Its foundation was laid by Pope Calixtus in the year of Our Lord 224. It was restored by Pope Julius in the fourth century and renovated by another supreme pontiff in the twelfth. That never-ceasing solicitude which the sovereign pontiffs have exhibited in erecting these national temples, which are the glory of this city, they have also manifested in a larger scale in rearing spiritual walls to Zion throughout Christendom in every age." The Cardinal concluded by eulogizing the United States and sincerely thanking the Pope for the dignity conferred upon him. The choir sang the Te Deum, after which the cardinal went forward to the altar and a papal indulgence of 100 days was read in Latin. The Cardinal then blessed the people assembled. The church was occupied largely by Americans and distinguished visitors to Rome during the investitive ceremonies, and a reception followed.

NOVA SCOTIA'S COAL AND IRON.

Deputations Wait on Sir Charles Tupper Regarding Them.

HALIFAX, March 26.—Sir Charles Tupper reached Halifax this afternoon to await the arrival from England of Lady Tupper, who is a passenger on the steamer Parisian, due to-morrow.

During the afternoon he was waited on by deputations of gentlemen representing the coal and iron interests of the Maritime Provinces, who presented to him certain disadvantages under which their industries are laboring and from which they seek to be relieved. The coal delegates represented their dissatisfaction with the terms under which they lease their mines from the Provincial Government and gave thereon a scheme that has been mooted for some time, that the Dominion Government buy out the entire interest of the local authorities in the mineral resources of the province. The coal representatives appeared to be favorably inclined towards such a scheme, and urged that the conditions on which they now hold the mining properties were very unsatisfactory. The matter was talked over for some time with Sir Charles, but as no substantial suggestions were made looking to an immediate release from present dissatisfaction, no special course of action was indicated. The Finance Minister promised that any definite propositions submitted would receive the Government's careful consideration.

Manager Sutcliffe of the Londonderry iron mines urged that the Government should adjust the tariff on iron by placing a duty on scrap as well as on pig iron, as the former now entered Canada free and the absence of a duty was very detrimental to the Londonderry enterprise. The Londonderry mines were not in a flourishing condition at present and could not expect to prosper for some time, but if a sufficient duty were placed on scrap iron it would assist the company very materially.

Mr. Fraser, of the New Glasgow Steel Works, and Mr. Harris of St. John, were opposed to a duty on scrap iron and presented counter arguments. They declared that the fact of their being able to import scrap iron was a source of much assistance to them, and if a duty were put upon it the New Glasgow and St. John iron industries would be seriously affected. Sir Charles advised the deputation to present their cases in writing to the Government, by which they would receive due consideration.

A STEAMSHIP LOST.

She Had Nearly One Thousand Passengers on Board, but All are Saved.

NEW YORK, March 26.—The French steamship Scotia, which passed Gibraltar on Feb. 27 for New York, and is ten days overdue, went ashore at Blue Point, Fire Island, today. At Naples she took on board 834 passengers of the steamship Burgundia, making her total number of passengers about 1000. Her cargo consisted of Italian produce.

A despatch just received says the passengers are all safe, and would be taken to New York to-morrow. It is conjectured that the vessel became damaged as the result of a struggle with terrific weather, and that the captain had beached her to save the passengers.

The Scotia was built at Leith, Scotland, in November, 1881, and is, therefore, comparatively new. She is brig-rigged and registers 2493 gross tons. There is but very little hope of saving the vessel. Her agents in this city, James W. Elwell & Co., have sent assistance to the vessel. The Scotia, with her cargo, is valued at from $500,000 to $750,000.

The Captain Beached Her.

PATCHOGUE, L.I., March 26.—The steamer Scotia had 1200 passengers. She experienced terrific storms for over a week and many passengers had limbs broken and received other injuries by being thrown about the steerage. Yesterday the machinery gave out and wind and sea were running so high that the captain decided to run ashore after cutting a mast away. There are about 800 women among the passengers. The steamer is in no immediate danger.

THE INTER-STATE COMMERCE BILL.

Dun, Wiman's Weekly Report Refers To the Subject.

NEW YORK, March 26.—Dun, Wiman's report of the condition of trade says:

"The Interstate Bill causes great activity in shipments of dry goods and other merchandize, to anticipate the change of rates on April 5. But this means dullness after that date, and complaints of industrial and commercial inactivity respecting business that depends on future rates grow more numerous. Coal men are awaiting the proposed new rates for transportation. Dry goods merchants protest earnestly against the new classification, and especially against the charge of higher rates for goods in box than in bale. The selection of commissioners is thought to foreshadow a strong effort to adjust rates according to distance. Gen. Fink thinks the law will tend to the crushing of small by larger dealers, and Mr. Adams thinks it hastens the swallowing of the weaker by the stronger roads. Months of uncertainty must elapse before the effects of the act can be understood."

A DEFECTIVE AIR BRAKE.

It Leads to the Telescoping of a Train and the Loss of One Life.

PITTSBURG, March 26.—A railway accident occurred about 1 o'clock this morning near Leetonia, Ohio, on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railway, by which one person was killed and a number of passengers injured. An express train which left Chicago in the morning had reached Leetonia. There is a heavy grade at this point and the engineer discovered that the air brake was leaking. He stopped the train, and while examining it a freight train came along and crashed into the rear end, completely telescoping the sleeper and passenger car next to it. Engineer Wm. Beall of Allegheny, who was underneath the engine fixing the air brake, was horribly crushed and killed almost instantly. J. C. Hazlett, a passenger in the sleeping car, was fatally hurt and was left at Leetonia. Six persons were injured.

FOURTEEN DEATHS SO FAR.

Continuation of the Search in the Ruins of the Buffalo Hotel.

BUFFALO, March 26.—About 2 o'clock this afternoon workmen at the ruins of the Richmond found the ledger or "room book" of the hotel, which contained the name of each guest, arranged alphabetically, with number of room occupied, statement of account, etc.

The book was copied from the day register, and was fully entered up by Night Clerk Alport on the morning of the fire. It shows the name of every guest in the building on the fatal morning.

Though badly charred around the sides, the book, which is much more valuable than the day register, was in a fair state of preservation, and the entries fortunately were all legible, down to the last made. It was taken to police headquarters, where it was carefully examined by Messrs. Robert Stafford and H. P. Whitaker, of the firm, with special reference to the names of those reported missing among the guests. Those who escaped in safety and those who were injured, or otherwise accounted for, were passed.

The result was that the only name found in the book among those given as missing was that of Robert S. Boyd of Boston, who occupied room 175, on the side adjoining the Museum. This discovery removes the last doubt as to Mr. Boyd's fate.

It will be remembered that the missing lists heretofore published, included the names of J. C. Pratt of Albany, Capt. W. H. Shepard (or W. H. Cabot) of Cleveland, and Henry Perry of Welland, Ont. None of these names were on the book, which establishes the fact that the parties were not guests in the house.

A day or two since Messrs. Stafford & Co. received a letter from J. K. Stevens of the Palace Hotel, Cincinnati, asking information of Amos Goddard and O. H. Smiley of Bath, Maine, who were on their way home from California. The writer was very positive that they were at the Richmond on the fatal night.

The book shows no such names, and therefore the parties were not in the house.

Another Victim.

Jacob Kahn of New York city, who jumped from the fourth floor of the Richmond on the night of the fire, died at the Fitch Accident Hospital at noon to-day. He had his back and leg broken in his jump for life.

This death, in addition to that of Mrs. Mann, which occurred last night, brings the number of deaths up to fourteen. Mrs. Mann, who was the wife of one of the proprietors of the hotel, was the only daughter of Dr. P. H. Strong of 120 Niagara-street, Buffalo, and was married in 1871.

DIED OF FRIGHT.

A Street Car Conductor in Philadelphia Under Arrest.

PHILADELPHIA, March 26.—Mrs. Theresa Weist died early yesterday morning at her home, No. 1536 North Twenty-fourth-street, under peculiar circumstances, and William Adair, a street car conductor aged 26 years, has been arrested on suspicion of having caused her death, which is supposed to have resulted from fright. Adair about midnight visited the saloon kept by Mrs. Weist's husband and asked permission to go up stairs to see two old ladies who lived on the third floor. A few moments later Mrs. Weist's cries in her room on the second floor were responded to by her husband, and she informed him that Adair had been in her room. She became hysterical and died in half an hour. Adair was arrested at 10 o'clock and held to await investigation.

The shooting occurred the same evening that Fair shot at ex-Congressman Page of California, because the latter refused to drink with him.

CO-OPERATIVE STORES.

During the past few years, at fitful periods, we have noticed a great deal has been said of the merits and benefits likely to result, to labouring classes especially, from co-operation. Some imagine ones indeed see in the foundation of co-operative stores, the solution of all the hard problems which now complicate the relation of labour and capital and the remedy for all the ills which affect the working classes. These theories are certainly very interesting, but we do not desire to discuss them here. Our purpose is to give a short account of the organizations which have been found by experience and observation, to aid in the formation of habits of economy and thrift.

Co-operative savings and loan societies, such as have been established in this country, have been most successful and have benefitted the community, not only here but elsewhere. In Germany, similar institutions have greatly helped the working classes and men with small capital, and their influence, socially, morally and commercially has been most advantageous to society.

In England, co-operative stores have been conspicuous for success. Their history extends over a period of nearly 80 years. At the beginning of this century the condition of the artizan class in England was deplorable and the feeling among them against capital was bitter in the extreme. The history of the parliamentary reform movement lights up dark pictures of society on which the pessimists of the present day would do well to look intently. There were plenty of theorists and schemers then devising glorious states of society when want and destitution and poverty should be unknown and all men should have abundance. Many experiments were tried and many failures followed. Among others co-operative stores were established and they were so organized that the profits were divided among those who contributed the capital and in proportion to the quota so contributed. They were by no means successful and the failures, owing to a variety of causes, were most disheartening and damped the energies of their enthusiastic supporters.

In 1844, a new departure was made and a little store was established at Rochdale by 28 weavers. Their theory was to distribute the profits among the purchasers and to give interest only for the capital invested. The dividends were declared quarterly, but were retained until they amounted to £1 or $5, when each purchaser became a shareholder. The goods were sold at ordinary prices and for cash only.

These Rochdale weavers were the first to make co-operative stores a success, and although they were unfortunate at first, their modest venture finally grew, until the establishment was obliged to start numerous branches. They have had hundreds of imitators; retail and wholesale stores, bankers, mills, bakeries, building societies, etc., are now established on this very principle in all parts of England. There are now 1,200 co-operative associations in Great Britain and Ireland. The members number 650,000, and the annual business foots up the enormous total of one hundred millions of dollars. Some of the associations have established reading rooms, libraries, lecture courses and other means of education. It has been found that their establishment often changes the character of the entire community and has replaced want, ignorance, idleness and crime, with comfort, industry, thrift, intelligence and good citizenship. These modest Rochdale pioneers did more to revolutionize society than the theorists, valuable as all their plans and schemes and discussions may have been. When organized by incompetent or dishonest men, of course, such associations have proved unfortunate, and loss and disappointment have frequently occurred in this way. To secure success, honesty and intelligence are necessary conditions in this, as in any other plan for the improvement of mankind, or as a source of money-making.

THERE are bills before the Local Legislature to exempt incomes from taxation—one up to $800 and one up to $1,000. The Hamilton Times advocates the entire abolition of income assessment as a means of getting over the matter. There is no doubt that the income tax is very unjust and unequal in its incidence. Men of large incomes, derived from investments or other occult sources, have it in their power to conceal the facts from the average assessor. Not only this, but in nine cases out of ten they are perfectly willing to make the concealment, and thus they escape paying their share of income tax. On the other hand, men who have a stated income—generally not of an extravagant character—in the way of salary, cannot, if they would, conceal the facts from the assessor, for he has sources of information, through the associate or employer, easily accessible. Thus it comes that men with thousands of income, enabling them to live in luxury, are allowed to go scott free, while the comparatively poor man, working for a salary, has to pay the shot—has his candle lighted at both ends, for he is not only taxed on his house or the tenement he occupies, but has also to pay a tax on his slender income. There seems to be only one certain way of radically curing the injustice, and that is abolishing income tax altogether.

INDUSTRY AND ECONOMY.

SERMON BY LAYMAN.

(Written for The Examiner.)

The time once was when people knew and realized the benefits of industry and economy. They knew that time was money and that labour was healthful and profitable. In this country, fifty years ago, it was not considered disgraceful to work, and then people were contented and happy. Pride and folly had not crept into the household, and the era of skating rinks and excursions was unknown. Every body felt that labour was necessary and every body felt that labour was honourable. And the consequence was that people were industrious and honest. In those days men did not live above their means, and children were not brought up to look down upon and to be ashamed of their parents. Robbing employers and robbing public treasuries was unheard of. People lived a simple and happy life and their social habits were founded upon good conduct and equality. In those days neighbours met together and talked together and enjoyed themselves. But things are different now. The present generation of boys and girls, I beg pardon, for I should say ladies and gentlemen, are being taught to believe that labour is not honorable, and that they must not be disgraced by having to say of them that they should earn their living by the sweat of their brows. In times past people used to be called men and women, but now they are ladies and gentlemen. In the old school days the young men and boys had to take week about in sweeping the school house and in making the fires, whereas now servants must be employed to perform this work and the young ladies and gentlemen attending school must be waited on and not asked to soil their dainty hands. In old times our forefathers were content to be taught in a school house of moderate pretensions whereas now these must be provided more like palaces than school houses. In former times children were quiet and respectful in their bearing towards their seniors, whereas now they appear to think their seniors should look to them for guidance. There is no such thing as children in these times; they are simply young ladies and gentlemen, and all the rights which they are willing to accord to their seniors is the privilege of furnishing them with the means necessary for their enjoyment. The young lady wants her piano and fan and ice cream and the young gentleman his cigar and his glass of champagne or whiskey, and the means of taking the ladies to the opera and the skating or roller rink. Ask them to do some manual labour or to help their fathers and mothers in their daily toil and they will tell you that work is degrading to ladies and gentlemen and that their time is otherwise employed. In former times the men and women worked hard and saved and accumulated property, in many instances sufficient for keeping them in comfort in their old age, but the rising generation does not take kindly to this sort of thing and prefer spending in fine dress and amusements what has thus been accumulated. They don't believe in laying up for a rainy day. With them there is no such thing as to-morrow. To-morrow must take care of itself. What is the cause of this state of things? How is it that in the course of one or two generations such great changes have taken place in the minds and habits of the people? Some think they have arisen through the effects of our school system. But whatever the cause the evil manifestly exists, and if they go on increasing as they have been doing in the past, it may well be asked what will be the state and prospects of the country in two generations more. Society now is largely artificial, but it will be more than artificial twenty five or fifty years hence if things are allowed to go on in their present course. One thing is certain, the country cannot progress and prosper as it might to do without the most rigid practice of both industry and economy. The people must be trained up to work, and to know the value and utility of money. The wealth of Canada can only be developed by hard labour, and if the people do not work and save they must certainly be poor. They cannot afford to pass their time in idleness or, extravagance or amusement, and if they would prosper and be independant they have got to work and save. Let them follow the example set them by their forefathers, who, by their industry and thrift and economy made the country what it is to-day, and who went into the wilderness and carved out for themselves homes of comfort and plenty. These early settlers had not been trained up in idleness and luxury, and they were not given the little learning which they possessed in colleges and high toned school houses. Yet they were men of intelligence and sturdy independence and honesty, and men who made their mark and raised the country to a state of prosperity and comfort. No country can grow and prosper where the people are idle and wasteful, and it is not only by this aid of industry and economy that the people themselves can become independent and happy. Idleness begets vice and vice begets poverty and misery. Self-denial is easily acquired and self-denial and industry are the safeguards of any nation. People may laugh and sneer at these propositions but their laughs and their sneers will surely turn to mourning. No man can subsist without meat and drink, and to obtain these he must work and procure them. And how noble and honorable is the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow. An example or two will illustrate my meaning. One is the case of a young man, without means, who went out into the world to seek his fortune. He went into a comparatively unsettled part of the country and there he planted his post and began work. He had been comfortably brought up by well-to-do parents far away, and he was young and inexperienced. His knowledge of men and things was exceedingly limited, but he had good health and great energy and perseverance. He worked hard, he worked early and late, and after several years of hard labor, had very little to show for it. But his rule was, having once taken hold of the plough, never to look back. By and by he began to feel encouraged, and he said, if his health continued, there was a possibility of succeeding. During all those long and weary years he never once thought of taking a holiday or looking for amusements or pleasures. He knew that his future was in his own keeping, he knew that old age would some time overtake him, and that the night would come when no man could work, and he was determined to be prepared for that time. His prospects continued to brighten, and he still worked and saved, and at length he felt that he had conquered. He could now look around him and count the fruits of his labors, so when the dark night began to settle down upon him he was of good cheer. His days might now be passed in peace and comfort. He had secured them by the sweat of his brow. He could now look back upon the past with satisfaction. He saw others with the same opportunities as he had, who had failed, and failed because they said a man should not kill himself with work, but should combine work with pleasure. The consequence was they were dependent and he was independent. Again, another young man, with more means and education, but with less energy, began his life's work at the same time. He had more to encourage him and his future prospects were decidedly brighter. But he thought he could do the world over. He could not see why a person, just beginning life, should not take his comforts and his pleasures as he went along. The result was he spent with one hand what he made with the other. He could not make himself see why he did not succeed. He would not see his own faults, and he attributed his ill luck to every thing but the right cause. He married whilst he was young and poor and so handicapped himself with a young family. His wife was after his own fashion and of course she brought her family up in the same way of thinking. Whilst the other man prospered they remained poor. They became discontented and unhappy. The husband finally became discouraged. He fell into bad company and contracted bad habits, and he was frequently away from home, neglecting both his family and his business. Things gradually went from bad to worse. Finally the wife died and the children were left without a mother. Often times they were left alone, and left to shift for themselves. They often went to bed supperless, spending their weary days and nights in crying and thinking of their mother. All hope left them and they were alone in their misery. This last case is a faithful picture of many of the people of the present day. They are brought up in dissipation and idleness, they spend as they go on, they lay up nothing for a rainy day. The result is that the family is broken up and scattered and the parents in their old age are left to battle with hardships and misery as best they can.

APPLE TREES.

Mr. Wm. McFarlane, our popular nurseryman has received orders to close sales for spring delivery in a few days. Those desiring to set out trees this spring should call and order at once before he does. "Mack" has charge of the whole delivery amounting to over $3,000 worth, and it will be more satisfactory to customers to have the same man deliver that took orders, a thing which has not been done before by other agents.

ACCIDENT.

Mr. Joseph Kettles had a narrow escape from death on Tuesday, by a load of telegraph poles that he was hauling up-setting on him opposite Mr. Wm. Educating the Girls.

Proper training is the great crux of female education; for, unless this most material matter be attended to, there can be no doubt that the acquisition of learning will only superinduce conceit, affectation, blue-stockingism, and utter uselessness in home duties. Hence it is that in these days of "higher education," as the phrase goes, so many girls are found exhibiting the unpleasant features of flippancy of manner and self-sufficiency. Their training has been neglected by their teachers, who have never taught them what the real object of education is. On the other hand, we find, too, girls of extensive and accurate information, well instructed in accomplishments, with a modest deportment, and who can readily turn their hands to household work if necessary, and such we perceive to have been properly trained. Such girls, however, form a minority, we are sorry to say, and we conclude, therefore, that the good trainers are also a minority. The fact is, judging from what one sees around us, the "higher education" of girls, as generally understood nowadays, has for its aim the mere ability to show off in society and to exhibit a superiority over other people. No doubt the ambition to excel is a laudable and very proper sentiment, but it is too plainly perceptible that nine girls out of ten who can sing or play well will do so not so much for the amusement of a company as for the display of their supposed ability. We believe that in most schools the daily routine of duties is carried on in machine fashion. The pupils fall to their books, their music exercises, etc., at certain hours, and so go on day after day without any words from their teachers as to what is the great end of all their exertions for the acquisition of knowledge. Thus heart becomes sacrificed to intellect, and true education is confounded with the attainment of mere book learning and showy accomplishments. We are not advocating the two-pence-a-week-for-manners style of training girls, but we do think that a little more should be done for their tone of mind than is done in so many schools. Without such tone "higher education" will simply be worse than nothing, at best "splendid ignorance," fitting its possessor to be neither a useful wife nor a really agreeable member of society. It is to this attempt to "educate" the intellect without training the mind—or, rather, perhaps, the neglect to unite the two courses—that we must attribute some portion of that outcry raised at intervals about the lack of girls in the upper and middle classes likely to make good wives. We are told that they can do anything but manage a household, and this—which is, unhappily, a too patent fact—is, forsooth, laid to the door of higher "education!" We, however, do not hesitate to assign a different cause—that already indicated; and we venture respectfully also to think that those who have the instruction and bringing up of girls intrusted to them will do well to frequently bestow some portion of their attention on the minds as well as the intellects of those girls.—The Queen.

Teachers in Georgia.

In a middle Georgia county, not a hundred years ago, several applicants for positions as teachers of public schools were undergoing an examination before the Board of Education. One young man appeared to be unusually well informed. He answered all sorts of questions in geography and arithmetic, and the members of the board began to think they had discovered a treasure. The Chairman of the board examined the young man in English grammar. Nouns, articles, adjectives were safely passed, and then the Chairman asked: "What is a pronoun?" "Never heard of it," replied the young man. "Never heard of a pronoun?" "No, I never did." "That's strange." "Can't help it; I never heard of a pronoun, and I don't believe you ever did either." "Do you mean to tell me that you didn't find anything about pronouns in your grammar?" "No, I didn't find anything about pronouns in my grammar." The Chairman took the book and examined it. The pages relating to pronouns had been torn out. "Humph!" he ejaculated, gazing at the young man in a dazed sort of way, "such a monumental fool as you can never teach a public school in this county." And yet there were fools just as monumental then teaching in that very county. Here are some incidents of a different nature that will serve to illustrate the qualifications of the average teacher: One day the pupils of a mixed school in a Southwest Georgia county were asked the question. "Who is Alexander H. Stephens and where does he live?" Out of 150 that heard the question but one attempted to answer. One young man said he thought Alexander H. Stephens was the Governor of Washington City. Yet that school had for more than ten years been presided over by teachers regarded as among the best in the State. In the preparatory department of a leading Georgia college the question was once asked, "What is meant by the Alabama claims?" Not one of the students could answer, although several of them were grown men, and at least five of them were studying for the ministry. Some time ago a young man bearing the highest testimonials from his teachers applied for admission into the junior class of a Georgia college. In the course of his preliminary examination he was asked, "Where is Africa?" Imagine the collapsed condition of the learned Professor who asked the question when he heard the young man answer, "Africa is in Virginia!"—Atlanta Constitution.

SUN

LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA.

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,130.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavits produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in hereby tendering to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been two-thirds of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. LOCAL NEWS.

A Worthy Society.

Mr. J. O'Meara, President of St. Peter's Branch No. 30, Peterborough, of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association, has received a communication from His Lordship Bishop Dowling, stating that he approves of the objects of the Association and authorizing the use of his name to promote its advancement. The C. M. B. A. has now received the approval of the Archbishops and all the Bishops of Canada, as well as those of the United States, and doubtless its increase in Canada will be commensurate with its spread in the United States, where it numbers upwards of 15,000 members. The present membership in Canada is 2,500. The Society is thoroughly Catholic, submissive to the decree and regulations and under the guidance and control of the church. Widows and orphans of deceased members are paid $2000.00 out of the Society's funds within three months after the death of the husband or father. Full particulars regarding the instalment of new branches or applications for membership can be obtained from Mr. O'Meara or Dr. Brennan, Peterborough.

Their Last Meeting.

The Hamilton Helpers, Messrs. Hebdon, Stead and Dunnett, closed their weeks' series of meetings in St. Paul's church last night. It was at first thought best to hold the meeting in the school room, but that filled up so quickly while large numbers were unable to find entrance, that an adjournment was made to the church proper, which also was soon crowded to the doors. The proceedings were interesting throughout to the audience, especially the singing of Messrs. Stead and Dunnett, which was greatly admired. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Messrs. Torrance and Tovell, and Messrs. Hebdon and Dunnett. The Hamilton Helpers go from here to Newtonville to continue their good work.

GLADSTONE has written criticism on Tennyson's new poem, but forget to say anything about Kidd's cordovan boots, handsewed, for $3.90 per pair.

The Bard of St. Andrew's.

Mr. Wm. Telford, of Smith, bard of St. Andrew's Society, Peterborough, has placed all his manuscripts in poetry, numbering over two hundred, at the command of the Society, and a book of the best selections therefrom will soon be published, making an interesting and beautiful volume, which it is hoped will be appreciated by men of all races, and by Scots in particular. The work will be put in the printer's hands as soon as sufficient subscribers, at $1 each, payable on delivery, are obtained to cover the cost of publication. The canvass for subscribers is to be begun at once. The contract for printing this book of poems has been awarded to the EXAMINER office.

From the North-west.

A sermon on missionary work among the Indians of the North-west Territories will be delivered in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, on Sunday morning next, March 27th, at 11 o'clock, by the Rev. J. Gough Brick, of Dunvegan, diocese of Athabaska. Mr. Brick will also deliver an address on the same subject on Monday evening in St. Luke's school room at 7.30. Mr. Brick is a fluent speaker, and having had many years' experience in the North-west, an interesting series of addresses may be expected. The public cordially invited.

Received A Medal.

Yesterday the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company received through the Canadian Department of Agriculture a handsome bronze medal awarded the company at the Indian and Colonial Exhibition, London, Eng., for a display of saw-dressing machinery. On one side of the medal is a profile of the Prince of Wales, encircled by the words "Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, Executive President," in raised letters; on the other side enclosed in a wreath, are the words "Colonial and Indian Exhibition, London, 1886."

A Matter for Workingmen.

The workingmen of Peterborough are invited to attend a meeting of the Knights of Labor in their lodge room on Water street, opposite Mr. Poussette's office, on the evening of Thursday, 31st inst., at 7.30 o'clock, when subjects of interest concerning their welfare will be discussed.

Turnbull's dress goods counter and shelves are now filled with new goods in every conceivable shade, with trimmings to match. His prices are the lowest and styles the best. Look through and be convinced.

An Important Purchase.

Mr. W. M. Fair has purchased the far famed cutting bull trotting stallion, "Kentucky." He and his colts have taken more prizes than any horse in his class in Ontario

Darkness Overspread the Scene.

Between nine and ten o'clock last night the electric lights all over town "flicker'd for a moment, then died away" with suddenness that was quite startling, causing considerable annoyance and trouble. In St. Paul's church the large audience very reasonably sat quiet still instead of following the fashion and going off into an hysterical panic, and after a couple of gas jets had hastily lighted the services were concluded. At the station rink, too, it was a source of much merriment to the young people. The "break" was caused by the water wheel at headquarters getting disjointed with another ice that the machinery was stopped.

Success to You, Joe.

Mr. J. J. Daly, formerly of the "Hub" Restaurant, has purchased the Jewett House, Lindsay, of which he took possession last Thursday. The Hub had an extensive patronage under Joe's able management, while his genial, sociable and liberal disposition, at all times the same, won for him the esteem and regard of all his acquaintances and friends, by whom Joe will be greatly missed. Mr. Daly leaves to-night for his new home, where it is to be hoped he will meet with the success a man of his sterling qualities deserves.

Armbrechts "Coca" Wine.

Messrs. Meagher Bros. & Co., of Montreal sole agents for Canada for the sale of Armbrechts "Coca" Wine, are now introducing this powerful nerve stimulant throughout the provinces and will in a few days place it for sale in town. In cases of sleeplessness from exhaustion and fatigue it is said to be invaluable, and is recommended by the English medical press and profession for restoring the functions of the digestive organs, strengthening the mental and physical powers, assuaging thirst and relieving the intense headache of nervous debility.

A Thorough Treat.

Next Friday evening the people of Peterborough will have the privilege of hearing one of the most eminent of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States. Bishop H. W. Warren is secured to lecture in George street church on "Forces in a Sunbeam." Any persons at all acquainted with the splendid abilities of Bishop Warren, with such a theme to handle, will anticipate a brilliant effort and will not be disappointed. The admission fee will be 25c. d

CHILDREN should not be allowed to go with wet feet, because a pair of solid kip boots from Kidd's new store costs only 70 cents.

Market Items.

The market this morning was rather small, beef and pork predominating, with few potatoes or other vegetables offering. Prices remain stationary. In the butter market there was considerable bustle, plenty of butter offering at 23c. per pound; eggs scarce at 12c. per dozen.

Too Sharp a Turn.

A cutter which was turned too sharply at the corner of George and Macdonell streets this morning upset, spilling the occupants, a man, woman and child, over the hard road of ice. Fortunately no serious injury resulted. The horse ran away, but the driver "struck to I'm," and stopped the animal before it had gone quite a block.

A choice assortment of Scotch and Canadian Tweeds, Worsteds, and West of England Peatings to select from at Turnbull's. Remember, there is a first-class tailor always on the premises to execute work promptly.

A Disturber of the Peace.

This evening in the Opera House a mass meeting will be held, open to everbody, the first of a series to be conducted by Rev. J. Judd White and Mr. W. Buchanan, Dominion Councillor R. T. of T., both of whom have won a reputation for speaking. Rev. I. Tovell will preside; a choir will furnish music. Following is a list of meetings for next week, to the last paragraph of which special attention is directed:—

Extension of the Franchise.

Women's Claim to the Ballot.

The bill of Mr. Waters introduced into the Ontario Legislature for giving the municipal franchise to women, on Wednesday evening last was rejected, by a decisive majority of thirty-six.

The gallant reporter of the EXAMINER, who was desirous of understanding more of the matter, this morning sought an interview with the representative of West Peterborough, who returned to town last night, to ascertain on what grounds he founded his opposition to the measure.

REPORTER.—I noticed that the bill of Mr. Waters to give the municipal franchise to married women was rather slaughtered. Would you mind stating what reasons led you to take what might be construed as an ungallant position against the sex?

Mr. SPEAKER.—The action of the majority of the legislature had, it seems to me, nothing ungallant in it. In my personal opinion there was nothing really hurtful nor disparaging to woman in rejecting the bill which was apparently drawn up in her favour. You must remember that the spheres of the sexes are quite distinct. Man's proper sphere is public life; woman's domain is the home. In every instance that can be cited, it will be found that the true woman, who possesses the ornament of her sex, a gentle refined nature, will shrink from all public and political excitement, other than a moral interest.

REP.—Then you do not consider that the adoption of this bill would be beneficial?

Mr. S.—Now, as a matter of fact, supposing such a measure became law, we should not have the influence of true women in politics, any more than we now have. It may be asked, Is it good for the human race that woman should be trained and admitted to compete in the ways of life from which heretofore they have been excluded, partly, indeed, by feeling and usage, and partly by actual legislation? Will it be well that we should have female lawyers, professors, and ministers of state? Remember, the aim of those who now desire female suffrage is not to stop there. Suppose this granted, then why not grant women entrance to Parliament and public office? The first concession involves the second.

REP.—The results you indicate do not indeed tally with the generally accepted ideal of woman.

Mr. S.—No; the old chivalrous idea was far different. It was that the sweat of the brow and the sweat of the brain should be masculine—that man should go forth to adventure and achievement—that masculine government is the best for women as well as men—and that woman should be the man's ministering angel, always being ready to reward him with her sympathy and appreciation.

REP.—But why have not women as a class the same rights to the franchise as men?

Mr. S.—It is incorrect to say women are unenfranchised as a class. They are not a class, but a sex, and their true interests are guarded by affection and closely bound up with those of their male relations. Woman should be sheltered and shielded from the rude battle of life and her interests should be guarded by man.

REP.—You think the enfranchisement of women would produce a different state of affairs.

Mr. S.—Yes; if we are to drag women into politics and disturb the relations of the sexes. Those who enter the political arena must expect to be cuffed and to cuff back again and then the age of chivalry and chivalrous courtesy shall have passed. Upon this point. I noticed a few days ago that the president of the British Medical Association in effect says that it is not good for the human race that woman should be freed from the restraints which law and custom have imposed upon them. Such legislation would have the effect of incapacitating them for their own proper function—for performing the part nature has assigned to them in the maintainance and progressive improvement of the human race.

REP.—You do not seem to think women are adapted for politicians?

Mr. S.—No: My opinion is that women are made and meant to be, not men but mothers of men. A noble mother and a noble wife, are the titles in which we find the highest ideals of noble womanhood. Woman was formed to be man's helpmate, not his rival, one who should sustain and comfort, not lead or guide him. Even we whoare ruled by Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, who has filled her place nobly, find our admiration tinged with compassion and speak of her position as one of "lonely splendor."

REP.—Your sentiments seem to have been shared largely by the House?

Mr. S.—Yes; in a House of 74 members only 19 voted for the measure. These are my personal opinions upon the subject, and I have yet to find that they are in any general way opposed to those of my constituents. If I am assured that there is a general feeling that an extension of the franchise to women is a desirable thing, I shall feel bound to give expression to that feeling as representative of West Peterborough.

REP.—Haven't there been several petitions presented?

Mr. S.—There have been, but the strange thing about them is that they have been principally signed by males, though their can be no doubt that a large number of ladies have applied for the privilege.

REP.—That doesn't look as though the ladies were pining for the ballot?

Mr. S.—It does not certainly. The experience of most men, I believe, is, that if a woman wants anything she can generally manage to ask for it. They have not demanded the franchise, and it seems to me to be time enough to give it to them when they make a positive demand for it. For this reason, and on the grounds I have mentioned, I opposed the bill, acting according to my personal convictions of what I thought was right and proper, but if I find that the people of West Peterborough are in favor of extending the franchise to the ladies, I shall have the greatest pleasure in giving effect, as far as my vote will avail, to their wishes. In the absence of a knowledge of their wishes on any given subject, I shall act according to my best judgment and with a desire to do what is just and right.

REP.—Then there were only 19 out of the House that voted for Mr. Waters' bill?

Mr. S.—Only 19, and petitions in favor of the measure came principally from those constituencies. Mr. Waters' bill was before the House since the opening of the session, and if the ladies of Peterborough had wanted the ballot they had an opportunity of acquainting me with their wishes and desires in the matter. My impression is that the ladies do not desire the ballot, but if they do, the whole question will have to be considered, so as to allow them to vote not only for trustees and councillors, but upon all other questions. If property qualification is to constitute the basis of a right to vote, their can be no reason, why a woman should not have a vote, other than that founded upon the broad question whether it is in the best interests of the sex to place them in the turmoil of political agitation and strife. However, my views on this subject are not cast iron and I am ready to listen and give consideration to the views of others.

SEEKING THE DEAD.

AN UNSUCCESSFUL HUNT IN THE RICHMOND HOTEL RUINS.

BUFFALO, March 26.—The report of the finding of something supposed to be the remains of Robert S. Boyd attracted a big crowd of spectators to the Richmond Hotel ruins this morning. The discovery of a few pieces of bone and burnt flesh was made by Contractor Berrick's men about dusk last evening. They were found among the debris in the area between the hotel and St. James' Hall, directly below the skylight through which, it is claimed, a number of unfortunates fell in the attempt to escape from the flames. The supposed portions of human remains broke into small pieces the moment they were touched. It was finally decided to postpone further search until this morning, and a watch was set to guard the spot through the night.

At daylight this morning the work of clearing away the rubbish covering the "find" was resumed in the presence of two policeman, A. A. Berrick and Coroner Durney. Small pieces of flesh and bone were found at short intervals and reverentially deposited in a pile. Finally the laborers in the pit struck what appeared to be the trunk of a human body and after careful digging it was brought up and an examination made. It weighed about twenty pounds and broke apart where a large bone ran through the flesh, when the fact was disclosed that it was a chunk of beef which had been baked through. The other scraps found bore the same coarse grain noticed in the big lump and the savants who conducted the examination pronounced the entire "find" as meat stock from the kitchen. A hash machine, a cleaver, some knives, forks and spoons, and other kitchen utensils were found with the meat among the debris.

The spot was dug up to the bottom without disclosing anything that could be identified as being a part of a human body. It was confidently believed that remains would be found here, if anywhere, and in accordance with this supposition, the digging was begun in that particular place yesterday. Instead of raking over special localities in the ruins, the work of clearing away the debris will be pursued in a general way hereafter.

The metal frame of the satchel and a chain and lock found among the kitchen tools this morning were identified by Mr. Culbertson of the Bell Telephone Company as belonging to R. S. Boyd.

In the ruins beneath the bar and billiard room the fire was still burning this morning.

RUSSIA INTRIGUING AT CABUL.

The Situation in Afghanistan Growing Critical.

LONDON, March 26.—London is again worked up over the rumor that the Ghazais, acting, as reported, by the advice of the native officers in the Russian army, are raising a rebellion in Ghazni. Gen. Roberts has gone to Musjid, the advanced British position on the northwest frontier, to organize British forces and defenses. It is also reported that the Ameer of Cabul has suddenly been stricken down with illness, supposed to be fever, the result of incessant exertion, exposure and worry. The situation in Afghanistan is said to be growing critical. Partisans have for some time been quarreling over the successorship. At the British headquarters it is considered all important that the question of successorship should be soon decided in favor of a prince pledged to the English alliance and hostile to Russia. The triumph of the Russian party at Cabul would probably lead to almost immediate hostilities between England and Afghanistan, the latter supported by Russia with men and arms.

Unofficial advices received at the India office state that the Government have undoubted evidence of the native chiefs that the Russian Governor of Turkestan is bribing the head men of the tribes throughout the north of Afghanistan. The work is done through native officers of Turkestan who have entered the Russian service. The chiefs report that the governor has secured a number of notables and that these are organizing an extensive plot for simultaneous rising in Afghanistan and the Punjaub.

Trouble at Herat.

BOMBAY, March 26.—In consequence of news from the Governor of Herat that the Governor of Turkestan has ordered Iskander Kan with 12,000 men to surprise Herat, the Ameer of Afghanistan has ordered 10,000 men to be in readiness to reinforce the troops at Herat.

An Execution in Afghanistan.

BOMBAY, March 2.—The Ameer of Afghanistan has caused the beheading of Sayad, the father-in-law of the late Chief of Kodistan, for treason, having discovered that Sayad was in communication with Ayoob Khan.

Fire at Binghamton, N.Y.

BINGHAMTON, N.Y., March 26.—M. W. Weed & Co.'s planing mill, together with a large quantity of lumber in the adjacent yards, was burned last night. A high wind prevailed at the time the fire broke out. Two general alarms were sounded, but though the entire forces of the fire department was soon fighting the flames it seemed impossible to prevent them from spreading to other manufactories and residences in the vicinity. Kingman & Sturtevant's cutter factory caught fire several times, and the firemen divided their efforts between keeping this structure from being destroyed and preventing the flames from communicating with the hotel and twenty cottages in the direct line of the wind. The loss on Weed & Co.'s property is about $50,000.

FISHERIES DISPUTE.

HON. WILLIAM McDOUGALL'S OPINION ON THE SUBJECT.

OTTAWA, March 27.—In an interview on the fisheries question Hon. Wm. McDougall said yesterday: "My opinion is that the first article of the treaty of 1818 (the only part of the treaty involved in the present dispute) is limited exclusively to the subject of fishing; that its sole object was to prohibit American fishermen from taking, drying or curing fish on or within three marine miles off the coasts, bays and harbors mentioned in the article, and that the subject of trade or commerce in other commodities is not included or contemplated."

"Is it your opinion that fishing vessels may, under the terms of the treaty, engage in trade except in fish?"

"Yes, if licensed or commissioned by their own Government to do so," replied Mr. McDougall. "There is nothing in the treaty prohibiting trade in fish or other commodities. One thing and only one was 'renounced' by the United States, viz.: 'the liberty heretofore enjoyed or claimed by the inhabitants of the United States to take, dry or cure fish within three miles of certain specified coasts,' etc. The Americans simply renounced a right they had enjoyed for the consideration mentioned in the treaty. The proviso about admitting fishermen for shelter, etc., was inserted from 'abundant caution,' as lawyers say, lest the general words of the renunciation should be construed to mean non-intercourse."

"What do you think will be the effect of the Retaliation Bill?"

"Non-intercourse by ships between Canada and the United States unless the negotiations said to be going on in London should result in a new treaty. No sane man believes that a nation of sixty millions, the most intelligent, the most wealthy, the most commercial, the most free among the nations of the world, will submit to be told by a subordinate colony of less than five millions, 'you may continue to trade with us, but only on condition that you transport your goods in such vessels and conduct your business by such of your citizens as we approve; you may license vessels engaged in the deep sea fish ries to touch and trade in foreign ports, but if they come into ours and buy or sell anything but "wood" we will seize, confiscate and sell their ships and pocket the proceeds.' I am told that there are some Cabinet ministers who believe that the United States can be bullied into the abandonment of retaliation and into acquiescence in this kind of reciprocity, but Sir John Macdonald, I feel sure, is not one of them."

A number of leading lumbermen of this district will leave for Toronto on Monday or Tuesday to lay their views before the select committee which has been appointed to report on Mr. Murray's bill respecting the driving of logs on streams. Some of the lumbermen object to the bill.

THE FISHERIES QUESTION.

A Despatch From Lord Salisbury on the Way to Washington.

LONDON, March 26.—The long-delayed despatch from the British Government to the American Government covering the Canadian modus vivendi proposal has at last left the Foreign Office and goes to Washington by this mail. Canadian efforts have not much modified the original purpose of the English Ministry. They still desire to deal with the subject broadly rather than technically. This despatch will probably be thought still on certain points, but Lord Salisbury and his colleagues will be disappointed if it does not open the way for an amicable adjustment of the dispute on lines honorable to both parties.

A SMASHUP AT FRANKTOWN.

Two Negligent Train Hands Responsible for a C.P.R. Accident.

OTTAWA, March 27.—The smash up of two freight trains on the C.P.R. near Franktown station, about 2 o'clock on Saturday morning, is said to be due to negligence on the part of Muldoon, engineer, and O'Connell, conductor, of the westbound train. When O'Connell applied for orders at Carleton Place he asked for a clearance to Smith's Falls, regardless of Franktown. The operator handed him an order, which O'Connell signed for without reading, and did not show his engineer. He ran through Franktown and shortly afterwards crashed into a freight coming from Toronto. Both trains were completely wrecked, one locomotive being telescoped into the other as far as the cab, and the cars and their contents being piled up on the track for a distance of two hundred yards. All the train hands escaped with little or no injury. When the conductors subsequently met and exchanged orders it was found that O'Connell was to blame, his order being for a clear run only as far as Franktown, where he was to cross the eastbound main. "I'm done for," he cried, "and I'll get over the line as soon as possible." Then he disappeared, and though two constables are after him he has so far evaded capture. O'Connell belonged to the Ontario Division and lived at Havelock with his wife and four children. The loss by this accident to rolling stock and freight is estimated at $100,000.

A DESPERATE STRUGGLE.

A Nova Scotia Bank Official's Encounter with a Thief.

HALIFAX, March 26.—At Antigonish, near the Strait of Canso, the Merchants' Bank of Halifax has an agency in charge of Mr. Currie. Yesterday a stranger, apparently an American, arrived at the town and called at the bank and made enquiries about drawing a draft. This afternoon when Currie was alone in the building the stranger called and said he would like to see him in his private office. Both retired to an inside room when the stranger drew a revolver and shot Currie in the forehead. This was immediately followed by a second shot, which wounded Currie in the side. Currie is a tall, wiry young fellow and he instantly grappled with his would-be murderer. A desperate struggle ensued in which Currie, although greatly exhausted from loss of blood, held on to his assailant with a death-like grip. The reports of the revolver and the shouts of the wounded man attracted the attention of the people in a grocery store near by, who rushed into the bank and secured the would-be assassin and robber. Two revolvers and twenty-seven cartridges were found upon him. He was put in jail and will probably be lynched. No one knows where he is from and he refuses to give his name or any information.

Tragic End to a Pleasure Trip.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—J. G. Huggett, the owner of mining property in Arizona, and who was paying a visit to his family in Alameda, yesterday took four of his children, three boys and one girl, out in a row-boat fishing. Just as he was about to return Huggett stood up in the boat to put in his overcoat. The boat began to rock and capsized, throwing all the occupants into the water. Other boats which were near, quickly pulled to the aid of the party, but of the five persons who had been in the boats only two of the boys were drawn from the water and one of them died shortly after being rescued.

Another Cardinal Hatted.

MADRID, March 27.—Mgr. Rampolla del Tindaro, the Papal Nuncio here, was to-day invested with the Cardinal's hat.

THE CORONET WINS.

She Arrives Off Queenstown at 11.30 Yesterday—Re Signs of the Dauntless.

LONDON, March 27.—The Coronet arrived off Queenstown at 11.30 o'clock this morning. Nothing had then been seen of the Dauntless. The Coronet passed the winning point at 12.30 o'clock, under a full press of canvas, the wind at that time being W.N.W. and fresh. In passing the given line, Roche's Point, the victorious yacht fired five guns and the time was at once taken by the secretary and members of the Royal Cork Yacht Club, who had been on the lookout for her arrival. The club then hoisted a signal announcing the Coronet's arrival, the various stations answering the pennant. The wind was blowing hard and the Coronet entered Cork Harbor in spanking style, with all sail set and hugging the western shore.

From the start to the finish the Coronet experienced strong gales with tremulous seas. On Tuesday and Wednesday last she hove to for several hours each day, and made only 90 miles in the forty-eight hours. Her average run during the passage varied from 230 to 250 miles a day. The biggest run was made by the Coronet yesterday when, with a splendid fair S.W. wind, she covered 291 miles.

The voyage may be said to have been made without incident.

The yacht arrived in as complete condition as when she left New York, with the exception of some damage to the steward's crockery.

The actual time was 14 dys. 19 hrs. 3 min. 14 sec. The apparent time is 14 dys. 23 hrs, 34 min. 46 sec. The whole number of nautical miles sailed is 2949. The longest day's run is 291.5 miles made on Saturday, March 26, and the shortest 38.8 miles, made on Tuesday, March 22.

The weather was uncommonly tempestuous even for this season of the year. No less than seven heavy gales continued to keep the sea in a ferment for eleven days of the trip. For two days the weather was so severe as to make the question of the yachts living through them somewhat doubtful. It is thought that a much quicker passage might have been made had Captain Crosby carried more sail. On several occasions, when the wind was light but the sky threatening, he was cautious and his judgment was controlled largely by the barometer, which was much of the time below 29 and seldom above 30, the normal height in the latitude traversed.

The course made was a little more northerly than was thought safe, but fortunately no icebergs or field ice were encountered. The number of persons on board the Coronet was twenty-nine, including sixteen sailors, five officers, the steward, cook, mess-boy and five guests.

The history of the voyage contains nothing remarkable beyond the frequent references to heavy weather, which tested fully the sailing qualities of the Coronet.

The Coronet people believe the Dauntless will be twenty-four to thirty hours later in arriving. Capt. Henderson says the weather was the worst he ever experienced in all his 174 Atlantic passages.

THE TALK OF WAR REVIVED.

Bismarck's Assurances of Peace Were Made For Effect.

LONDON, March 26.—The continental war feeling has arisen again with renewed strength in Berlin, Vienna and Paris. The recent semi-official declarations in behalf of peace, including Prince Bismarck's assertion that the year 1887 would prove to be a year of peace, are felt everywhere to be insecure, and made only for effect, while the real purpose of the interested powers remains the same, namely, to be completely ready for war, and to fight without hesitation on the first sufficient pretext. On the day following the great fete in celebration of the 90th anniversary of Emperor William's birthday, active preparations for war were everywhere continued with as much vigor as before this international exhibition of amity, and official announcements were made in accordance with this situation.

In a circular which the Hungarian Minister of Public Works, Baron Kameny, issued yesterday, it is ordered that telegraph officers throughout the country shall enlist employes to replace the men at present under their direction, who will be needed for Imperial service under the expected mobilization of all grades and kinds of war service. The Berlin War Office has orders to begin the movement of reinforcements into Alsace-Lorraine next week.

On the Berlin Bourse the feeling of distrust as to the maintenance of peace continues. Business to-day was in a state of absolute stagnation.

It transpires that the Grand Duke Vladimir, who was credited with a mission looking to a renewal of the alliance of the three empires, has denied that he had an object in going to Berlin other than to be present at the anniversary of the Emperor's birth. The term of the three emperors expired last week. Though the official relations between the governments at Berlin and St. Petersburg are good, the most recent overtures made to the Czar for a renewal of the alliance met with an absolute refusal.

Orders to the Baltic Fleet.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 26.—Eighty-seven torpedo vessels belonging to the Baltic fleet of the Russian navy have been ordered placed in a state of constant readiness for service, and crews have been ordered forthwith for forty-five of these vessels.

Death of a Murderer.

GRAND RAPIDS, March 26.—Louis Ecklesdaffer, who murdered Lena Obstin of Belmont because she wouldn't marry him, died in Kent County Jail this morning after lingering at death's door for the past forty-eight hours. He was surrounded by all the family and a few friends. Previous to passing away he was baptized by a Congregational minister. The immediate cause of his death was pneumonia, the wound made by his attempt to end his own life not proving detrimental. The statement that he had made a confession is denied by his aged mother. A coroner's inquest will be held and it is possible that a post-mortem examination will be held.

Praying That No Flood Come.

MONTREAL, March 26.—Archbishop Fabre has issued a circular to his clergy instructing them, from now till May 1, to add to the mass the orison pro quacunque tribulatione and to exhort the faithful to unite their prayers in imploring the clemency of God to spare the city from the usual spring flood. After vespers to-morrow a procession will be formed in the Roman Catholic cathedral and in the other churches of the diocese, when the faithful are instructed to offer up prayers for the same object.

The Abolition of Railway Passes.

NEW YORK, March 26.—The World will devote three columns to interviews with railroad executives of this city, Chicago, Boston and elsewhere on the free pass system, which, so far as inter-State travel is concerned, will come to an end April 5 under the provisions of the new inter-State law. The unanimous expression of the officers interviewed is that the system has grown to be a crying abuse and all hailed its abolishment as a deliverance. The president of one of the leading trunk lines said it would increase the receipts of his line $1,000,000 annually.

Fighting Resumed in Burmah.

BOMBAY, March 26.—The Burmese Royalists have collected a large force in the upper country and resumed the aggressive against the British. The recent reports stated that resistance in Upper Burmah had been crushed, but they prove to have been premature.

A PETITION against the return of W. B. Scarth, as member for Winnipeg, is filed.

MR. DAWSON was officially declared elected for Algoma by eleven majority. A recount is to be made.

THERE are two flies for the Tories in the Gaspe pot of ointment. One is that the successful candidate repudiated the Government, and the other that he is disqualified.

THE Manitoba Legislature has been prorogued from March 24th to a time not yet fixed for "divers causes and considerations," which Hon. John Norquay has not found it convenient to explain.

ACCORDING to the Dominion Deputy Minister of Finance, the Canadian twenty-five cent bills, yclept the shinplaster, have not been withdrawn from circulation, but can still be obtained at the Receiver-General's office. The use of them is declining steadily, however, and no new ones have lately been issued.

THE Pall Mall Gazette publishes the following list of Chief Secretaries for Ireland who have held office since the general election of 1880:

	Entered Office.	Duration of Office.
Mr. W. E. Foster	April, 1880	2 yrs. 1 month.
Sir George Trevelyan	May, 1882	2 " 8 "
Mr. Campbell-Bannerman	Oct., 1884	6 "
Sir W. Hart-Dyke	June, 1885	7 "
Mr. John Morley	Feb., 1886	6 "
Mr. W. H. Smith	July, 1886	3 days.
Mr M. Hicks-Beach	July, 1886	8 months
Mr. Balfour	March 1st

The health of three of these—Mr. Foster, Sir George Trevelyan and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach—was practically broken down by the cares of office.

THE Quebec Government has appointed stenographers to shorthand the debates in the two Houses. Quebec is slow to learn lessons of economy. Though she has a gross debt of some twenty-one millions, and a deficit of assets under liabilities of some eleven millions, she still not only retains the expensive and useless appendage of a legislative council, which Ontario manages to struggle along without, but she is inclined to indulge in all the luxuries of the age, shorthand reports of unimportant speeches, etc. Quebec's cue is cheese-paring instead of lavish expenditure.

KINGSTON is making what is called a "dead set" to have the proposed new school of practical science established in the Limestone city. Ottawa and London are also making a similar demand. So far as centrality of location is concerned, which seems to be of paramount importance to any claim advanced by the above places, Peterborough has the best claim for giving the proposed new school a local habitation and a name. Kingston's claims are based on sectarianism, London's and Ottawa's on sectionalism, while those of Peterborough are centripetal. But after all this town is not grasping, and could, with not very much persuasion, give assent to the assertion that Toronto is, all things considered, the best place for such an educational institution.

THE canardists still continue to revive and re-revive the rumour that Sir John is to be made a peer of the realm, and Governor-General of Canada. Making the premier a peer or a prince does not affect the people of Canada. It would be a mere cumbersome title, more troublesome to support than profitable to possess. But the proposal to make him Governor-General is one that does concern us. The Queen's Vice-Gerent in Canada should be above all, non-political and at least non-partizan. Sir John could, from his long intimate and interested connection, with Canadian politics be neither, and he would not fill the bill. Still he would be less dangerous in such a position than in the one he now occupies. While he is not a desirable person for Governor-General for Canada, there is reason to believe that if he had been placed in that position years ago it would have been better for the country—the country would have been saved, no doubt, from the debauchery of the public moral sense which his career and methods have so largely conduced to bringing about.

A FEW days ago we referred to the relative financial positions of the provinces of Ontario and Quebec as the outcome of Liberal and Conservative rule respectively. It may be pointed out also that the Province of Quebec has incurred obligations to the amount of $21,848,148.65. Of this total $3,693,235.32 consists of liabilities which have to be provided for; and it is especially here that the pressure is felt. Against the total indebtedness there are assets which M. Mercier counts at $10,574,280.54, leaving an excess of liabilities over assets of $11,273,868.11. Commenting on this point the Monetary Times says:—"While Quebec is in this position the Ontario Government counts a surplus of several millions. Whence comes this difference in the financial condition of the two provinces? Simply from this: the financial management of Ontario has been careful, calculating, and prudent, that of Quebec loose and reckless, taking no note of the adaption of means to ends. Instead of self-reliance, there has all along been the fatal idea of looking to Ottawa for aid."

GLADSTONE has written criticism on Tennyson's new poem, but forget to say anything about Kidd's cordovan boots, hand-sewed, for $3.00 per pair.

A Service of Song.

The Gospel Temperance Meetings in Connection with Largely of Singing—Rev. Mr. White's Meetings.

A fair sized audience assembled in the Opera House Saturday night on the occasion of the initial meeting of the week's series by Messrs. Buchanan and White. A number of ladies and gentlemen were ranged in a choir around the piano, presided over by Miss Ellsworth, and led the singing.

Rev. Mr. White before opening the meeting with singing announced that his line of work was preaching the Gospel, and he would begin right there. There was an immense power in singing, and he intended during his labors here to use singing as God designed it should be used.

After an old Methodist hymn had been sung and prayer offered up, Rev. Mr. Tovell, who acted as chairman, addressed a few remarks to the audience and explained the absence of Mr. Buchanan. Mr. Buchanan was at Norwood Friday night and there received a telegram stating that his wife was seriously ill in Hamilton. He of course went to her at once, and had arranged for a substitute, of whom as yet nothing had been heard. He then introduced Mr. White.

Mr. WHITE on coming forward asked for volunteers for the choir, and quite a number went forward to assist. After another song Mr. White reiterated his remarks regarding the good effect of singing—singing that comes from the heart and soul, that had life and vigor in it, that was sung with one's whole heart. This idea of consecrating the voice to the praise of God was not as generally adopted as it should be. His own voice had been dedicated to God's service, and it was the duty of all to consecrate their voices, whether good or indifferent, to the Lord. The speaker said there was no doubt a good deal of prejudice in Peterborough against him because he was not one of the two White brothers who were meeting with such success at Montreal, and he was sorry because he was not, but he could not help it. There was a large family of them—five boys and some girls—all good singers and though not one of the White brothers, he was their brother. He said he had visited the United States and the people there had taken a liking to him, telling him that the only mistake he had made was in not having been born there. Perhaps it was another mistake of his that he was not one of the two twins, but he could not help it, so he had to make the best of it he could.

Another song was sung, and Mr. White said that before he came here he was not aware that the Hamilton Helpers had been in this gospel temperance work, and not expecting a meeting to-night he was not in very good trim, but would do the best he could.

After tuning his guitar, Mr. White sang "Go Tell the World of His Love," with chorus by the choir. Some people, he said, might be disappointed with his mode of proceedings at these meetings, but there would be some who would be glad to have the religion of Jesus Christ preached by a service of song.

At the conclusion of the song Rev. Mr. Tovell being called upon for an address, announced that he was great on collection—that was his text. He went on to say that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union deserved the thanks and gratitude of the people of Peterborough for introducing this plan of gospel temperance meetings. These meetings cost something, and he wanted a good big collection—say, $30. If any person had left his purse at home in his other clothes, let him borrow some from a friend. Mr. Tovell closed his address on "collection" by remarking that this was his second speech and he thought it was worth at least $50.

While the collection was being taken up, Rev. Mr. White said he didn't believe in the devil having all the fine music, and thought the churches needed waking up in the matter of using instruments in the worship of God. He himself was crazy over music, and the instrument he held in his hand (a saxaphone) he called his Gospel Trumpet. It was a decidedly novel looking instrument, of silver, shaped like a mammoth inverted mark of interrogation, or large pipe with drooping stem, and blown like a cornet. The sound evolved was something between the music of a cornet and a clarionette. "Jesus is Coming Again" was sung by the choir, accompanied by Rev. Mr. White on his Gospel Trumpet.

Mr. White said he would sing a sentiment for them. He wished the people would think of the sentiment and not the singer. He was not here in the concert business. His work was evangelistic. He wanted to stir up a "racket" among them—a racket on temperance. It was greatly needed, and the hope of the country was in the temperance youth. He then sang a very pretty temperance solo in fine voice, "Twas Rum That Spoiled My Boy." Mr. White is an excellent singer, and he was loudly applauded.

Before commencing his next solo, with guitar accompaniment, "The World is Moving On," he said there was an idea abroad that the world was going backward in religion and righteousness. The newspapers, too, had a wonderful faculty for publishing all the evil things that were done, and we had a wonderful faculty for reading them. There were as many bad men in the world as ever before, men were just as bad, if not worse, than ever, but in spite of all that, he believed there were more Christian people in the world to-day and the Bible was more extensively read than ever before in the history of the world. His song illustrated the theme, and was well sung.

He stated wherever they went the success they met with was not due to anything in themselves, but in the stirring up the people to show what was in them. This service of song was very attractive, and he hoped it would be appreciated by the people of Peterborough. "I'm Happy all the Day" was sung, Mr. White playing the saxaphone, after which the meeting dispersed.

CHILDREN'S MEETING.

The children's meeting in the Opera House Sunday afternoon was an immense one. The hall was packed to the doors, and many were turned away. The audience was composed largely of ladies and children. Rev. Mr. White sang his songs and made his humorous and impressive remarks upon the cause of temperance, telling comic stories and extracting morals therefrom, to the great pleasure of the audience. He asked numerous questions of the children, who answered promptly. He illustrated the habit of drinking or tobacco using by means of a bundle of sticks. Bad habits when first begun were easily broken—as easily as a little boy snapped one of the sticks placed in his hands. As time passes it secures a hold on one, and to break off requires some effort—illustrated by half a dozen sticks being given the boy, which he broke with some trouble. Pretty soon the habit becomes master and to break it is impossible—as the boy thought when handed a bundle of sticks, for he refused to try, considering the task hopeless. Mr. White then began to bind the fagots with cotton thread, the evils representing theft, falsehood, and the other sins, which help to strengthen the terrible habit of intemperance as the thread did the sticks.

He asked all the children present whose fathers drank liquor or used tobacco to hold up their hands, and tiny fists flew up by the score in all directions, revealing a sad state of affairs existing among the fathers of Peterborough.

"Boys," said Rev. Mr. White, "when is best time to break off the bad habits of [illegible] and using tobacco?"

The large audience was dismissed with the benediction shortly after five o'clock.

CHURCH SERVICES.

Rev. Mr. White occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church Sunday morning, and preached the forgiveness of God. In the evening he conducted the services in the George street Methodist church, setting forth the boundless mercy of God's love. The services were interspersed by solos with guitar accompaniment by Rev. Mr. White, which were well sung indeed. He also played on the saxaphone once or twice. The congregation on the whole were delighted with Mr. White's apt comparisons, pithy remarks and heart-whole earnestness. He is sure to be greeted by crowded houses during the week.

To-night he speaks in the George street church.

Indignant Chinamen.

The feeling in China in regard to the outrages on the Chinese in America is deep and widespread, writes a Canton correspondent of the New York Tribune. Chinese and resident foreigners, Americans and Europeans, agree that the refusal to make a just indemnity was a stain on the national honor of America. When a few years ago the European settlement at Canton was partly looted the claims were promptly paid—in many cases overpaid; the Chinese government did all in its power to make more than good the losses. The Chinese method would be the speedy conviction and execution of all those implicated in the outrages, and that their claims are left to the slow and benevolent consideration of congress is not calculated to impress them with the spirit of American fairness. "Why, sir," said an American to me, a man in the Chinese department of customs, "my house is here and my interests, but should I be given twenty-four hours to leave the country, dating from midnight to-night, I could not say a word in protest. I should only be securing fair treatment as an American." That the present attitude of our government is doing harm to our interests in China is certain. The English and German (the latter are a power in China) see a chance to obtain a control of foreign trade that they are not slow to improve. The action of the United States will largely determine what will be our share in the improvements that are to be made in China in coming years. Railways are to be built, mines to be opened up, and American manufacturers are to be left out in the cold in all these improvements unless some change is made in our treatment of the Chinese. The American merchants in Hong Kong and Canton feel this, and are not slow in speaking their minds. Unless these American merchants are all wrong the refusal of a comparatively small sum now will be a loss to our national wealth of many times the sum in the years to come. Should there be a downright refusal to pay this claim, American influence will bid a long farefell to China. It will be in the policy of the Chinese government working against American products that we shall suffer.

A Sure Proof.

I heard a story the other day about the twinsteepled St. Anne's church. An officer of the —th regiment, many a year ago, was in Detroit, and he went out to one of the jovial Detroit parties where the cup that cheered and afterward inebriated got in its work. It was a fine moonlight night when he turned his wavering steps to the old American, where the Biddle now stands, and in passing St. Anne's church he was appalled to notice that it had two steeples exactly alike. He could not believe that he was as drunk as all that, but there were the two steeples before him. When he got to his rooms he said to his comrade:

"Jack, me boy (hic), I'm afraid I'm (hic) drunk. Coming 'long the other street I passed a (hic) church, and do you know, I almost thought it had two (hic) steeples."

"Well," said the other, it has two steeples. That's St. Anne's church." The officer pondered a few moments on this information, and remembering how it had been impossible for him to tell whether the church had or had not the two steeples as he stood by it, he replied mournfully: "By George, Jack (hic), I am drunk, sure enough."—Detroit Free Press.

Armstrong, when he wrote these lines, gave good scientific advice. Half of our people suffer from dyspepsia in some of its many forms. Life becomes a burden, and business worries and annoys. When we say McGregor's Speedy cure is the only perfect cure for Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion and Impure Blood we are telling plain facts, of which hundreds upon hundreds can testify who have been restored to perfect health by its use. Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let his fellowmen know of the wonderful cures it is effecting. Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Pneumonia, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hoarseness, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Hay Fever, Sore Throat, Lung Disease, and Hemorrhages, are speedily cured by it when all other remedies fail. Thousands of cases of Consumption, in its first stages, where the patient was supposed to be in the last, have been cured by it after all other remedies had failed. Its wonderful success in curing Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Hay Fever, Sore Throat, Lung Disease, and Hemorrhages, is astonishing to the oldest druggists. J. H. Roper, Esq., Treasurer Peterborough Council No. 756, Royal Arcanum, Peterborough.

DEAR SIR,—Yours of recent date enclosing draft for $3,000, amount of insurance in The Royal Arcanum upon the life of the late J. E. Hammond, duly received. Permit us on behalf of Mrs. Hammond the beneficiary under such insurance to convey to your Council and through your Council to the Supreme Council, her sincere thanks for the above amount, as well as for the promptness with which the same has been paid to her. Hoping that your institution may continue to prosper in the future as in the past, we are,

Yours very truly,
HATTON & WOOD.
Solicitors for Mrs. Hammond.

Peterborough, 18th March, 1887.

The above letter and its acknowledgment of prompt payment should attract favorable attention to the Royal Arcanum. The Peterborough Council of the order has been established about two years, and the death alluded to above is the first which has taken place. The insurance available by virtue of membership is $3,000, and the payments are regulated according to the age of the member. The institution is a deserving one and has a large and influential membership in this town.

Bishop Warren.

Who is he? A graduate of the Wesleyan University, Conn. U. S., a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States since 1855, in 1864 appointed by the Massachusetts State Senate to preach the election sermon, for two terms of three years each pastor of the largest Methodist church in Philadelphia, in 1880 elected to the Bishopric of the great church to which he belongs; an extensive traveller in Europe and Asia, a popular contributor of crisply written articles to several influential journals, author of a captivating work on astronomy, a splendid looking man, and an eloquent speaker. Bishop Warren comes to Peterborough on Friday night, then fills engagements in the Metropolitan and Elm street churches, Toronto, next week. His subject on Friday night in George street church will be "Forces in a Sunbeam." Such a theme will call into exercise the very best powers of this distinguished speaker

Wrecking a Restaurant.

Sunday evening a gang of young men attacked Mr. Curtin's restaurant, near the G.T.R. station, firing large boulders through the doors and windows, and doing a good deal of damage. Then they invaded the premises and demanded that a certain man they were after be given up to them. When too late the young roughs found their vengeance had miscarried, for the person they were seeking was not there. This affair was the outcome of a fight at an hotel on Friday night, in which a young man named Burnet or Burney, from Port Hope or Cobourg, was brutally beaten until half dead. The crowd which attacked Curtin's restaurant were friend sof Barnett, searching for the man who had committed the assault, and had he been caught, he would have fared badly.

A Family Affair.

Saturday afternoon an Ennismore farmer informed the police that $98 of his funds had disappeared from his pockets. A suspicion was had of a certain party, and while a plan of action was being arranged, the farmer's brother entered and handed over the boodle. It seems that the first farmer's nephew extracted the money from his pocket while drinking at the bar, and the young man's father, brother to farmer No. 1, becoming aware of it, in turn took it from him while he was sleeping off the effects of the liquor he had drunk. As it was all in the family, nothing was done with the light-fingered youth.

CHILDREN should not be allowed to go with wet feet, because a pair of solid kip boots from Kidd's new store costs only 70 cents.

Presents for a Friend.

Mr. Wing, who has for some time had charge of the painting department of Messrs. Fitzgerald and Stanger's carriage factory, has severed his connection with the firm, and on Saturday was presented by the woodworkers of the factory with an large easel and arm rest; and by his fellow-workmen of the paint shop with a set of paint tubes and brushes. The whole staff regretted having to part with him. Mr. Wing has entered the employment of Messrs. Porter Bros., who are fortunate in having secured his services.

A Peterborough Girl Gone Wrong.

The Hamilton Times of yesterday states that a young woman named Bertha Kent, who came there from Peterborough, and was employed in an hotel till she was induced to enter a house of ill-repute, was arrested as a frequenter on Thursday. She pleaded guilty and was remanded for a week, that her people might be communicated with.

Shipped To-day.

Mr. Geo. Bolton shipped to-day one of his celebrated hot water boilers and nine of his improved coil radiators to Messrs. H. & F. Whitlaw, plumbers, Toronto, for Mr. F. B. Hamilton's new residence in that city; also a double boiler and coil radiator to Mr. E. Woods, Lindsay. The following letter has been received from Mr. E. B. Stocking, Patent Solicitor, 615 Seventh street, opposite Patent Office, Washington, D.C.:—

March 12th, 1887.

Geo. Bolton, Esq., Peterborough:

SIR,—I have the pleasure of informing you that I have this day received the official notice of the allowance of your application for a patent for boiler, very good claims having been secured.

No Bells on His Sleigh.

Saturday night a man drove up to J. Mervin's butcher shop, Hunter street, and leaving his horse untied entered the shop. Taking advantage of its freedom, the horse started off of its own accord, and turning around dashed up Hunter street. There were no bells on the sleigh to warn Mr. Richard Cox, an old gentleman who was crossing the street on crutches, and he was knocked down by the runaway, which was caught near St. Peter's church. Fortunately the accident had no serious result, but had there been bells on the sleigh it would probably not have occurred at all.

Victoria Park.

At the next meeting of the Town Council (Monday evening of next week) a deputation of the Sons of England lodge of Peterborough will wait upon that august body and ask it to make preparations for a proper celebration of the Queen's Jubilee on 21st June. The deputation will offer several suggestions as to the form of the celebration, one of which will be the purchase of the property known as "Inverlea," in the North Ward, which is now offered for sale, as a public park, to be opened on that day and named Victoria Park.

A Sabbath-breaker.

Sunday night Thos. Gainey, of Ashburnham, came over to town, and after a too-frequent application of the flowing bowl, began loudly to vent his exuberance of spirits on the public streets in language more forcible than the by-laws of this highly moral town permit. P. C. Pidgeon gathered him in, and this morning a fine of $5 was imposed for having used profane language.

SURELY the place to get kid boots is from the Kidd, next door to Messrs. Mills' hat store.

Turbulent Dennis.

Dennis McCarthy, of Douro, filled up with "O-be-joyful" Saturday afternoon and created a disturbance on Hunter street. A large crowd quickly gathered around, and Dennis became wild for a fight. Chief Cooper came along and arrested the frisky Dennis, who, after a little trouble, was lodged in the cells. He contributed $2 to the town treasury and paid the costs of the trial at the police court this morning for his little bit of fun.

A Savage Fight.

Patrick Barry, the Douro man who on Christmas Eve it will be remembered tried to drive the Salvation Army off the streets, and was nearly mobbed in consequence, has got himself into another scrape. Saturday night about eight o'clock, at the corner of George and Simcoe streets, he knocked down a young blacksmith named Robertson, and kicked him in the forehead, inflicting an ugly wound. Barry escaped through the crowd that assembled. Robertson was badly hurt.

Turnbull's dress goods counter and shelves are now filled with new goods in every conceivable shade, with trimmings to match. His prices are the lowest and styles the best. Look through and be convinced.

Another Five Hundred.

At the police court this morning six Peterborough men pleaded guilty to a charge of having committed a first offence against the Scott Act, and were each fined $50 and costs; two others pleaded guilty to a second offence and were mulcted in $100 and costs each. Three county cases were adjourned till 3 p.m.

The Staff of Life.

The rinks skipped by Messrs. A. McNeil and A. Hall, Friday night competed the match for a barrel of flour begun last week between them. Skip Hall came out second best, score 18-17, and the Protestant Home accordingly got the barrel of flour at his expense.

Faith, Hope and Charity.

The Greatest of These is Charity—Rev. Mr. Brick Appeals for Aid for a Worthy Cause.

In St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, Sunday morning, Rev. J. Gough Brick preached from the text, I Corinthians, xiii, 13:

"And now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

In dealing with the text Mr. Brick took up the graces separately, explaining and comparing each with the other. Faith was necessary not only to securing the blessing of salvation, but also to retaining it. It was necessary not only to form correct ideas of faith, but also in regard to the object of faith—an instrument for our salvation. Faith alone could not save—it is only when it directs us to a right object, and that object Jesus Christ, that it can be truly said to lead to salvation.

Hope was constituted of expectation and desire, and the object of the Christian's hope was immortality. The minister said that during his stay among the Indians he had made especial efforts to ascertain their exact ideas regarding the future, and as near as he could get at it, they believed that somewhere beyond the deep blue sea there were happy hunting grounds, where nothing would be wanting, waiting for them after death. Rev. Mr. Brick touched upon the various theories regarding the hope in future life—the theory of instant departure of the soul upon the death of the body; the belief in purgatory by Roman Catholics; the transmigration theory, and the atheistic doctrine of the soul's mortality.

Charity, the greatest of the three Christian graces, was defined in the revised version as "love"—not only benevolence and a spirit of giving, but love. "Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity coveteth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up; does not behave unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." Faith was love, and God was also described by John as "Love." What, then, could more aptly prove that charity was the greatest of the three Christian graces than that passage, which constitutes it the very essence of Deity. God is willing to rest the whole weight of his character upon this declaration.

Which then of the three graces should be assigned the central position? Faith, or hope? No. Faith without connection with love would be powerless, hence the Apostle says, "faith which works by love." Then again, charity should be acknowledged the greatest on account of its prominence in the future state. Faith and hope doubtless exist in Heaven, but not as they did on earth. In heaven we shall not want to look at God with the eye of faith, because we shall be face to face with Him; nor will we want to hope for an inheritance of which we are already in possession. Faith and hope will be circumscribed; not so charity. Heaven is the dwelling-place of love.

At the close of the sermon, Rev. Mr. Brick said he had been laboring among the Indians of the Northwest for a number of years back. His mission was situated just 650 miles north of Calgary, and 1,000 miles north-west of Winnipeg. They had a beautiful country, and though he had been been preaching to the Indians, he was satisfied the only way to do them permanent good was to civilize them, and to teach them agriculture. Being so far away from civilization everything cost an enormous price—for instance, he paid when he went there 3 years ago $21 for a hundred pounds of flour, and to-day it was sold for $16 a barrel. For the past few years he has raised excellent crops, but they were 450 miles from a gristmill or post office, and so they could not grind their wheat. Of course it would not do to depend upon hunting, as there are periodical times—about every 3 or 4 years—when game becomes scarce and it is impossible to live upon what little can be got that way—it practically means starvation. So Mr. Brick had determined to come East to try to raise sufficient funds to erect a small grist mill, in order to enable them to produce their own food. He had also another object in view—the establishment of an industrial school and farm, to teach the young Indians the arts of civilization. On this behalf he wanted the modest sum of $2,000. If any persons could see their way clear to making any special donations, he would be glad to receive them.

He announced that on Monday evening he would preach the missionary sermons in St. Luke's church, taking for his subject his work among the Indians in the North West. He hoped the congregation could see their way clear to give him some pecuniary assistance in carrying out the laudable objects he had in view.

Peterborough Cheese Association.

The largest meeting ever held by this Association convened in the old Music Hall Saturday afternoon. Almost every member was present besides many others who took an interest in dairy business. Mr. W. Claxton read two letters from Liverpool, Eng., containing an account of Peterborough cheese which had been shipped to that port last season. The Liverpool men complained a little of the color and the quality of the boxes, which prevented the ready sale of the cheese. This was afterwards taken into consideration, and remedies were provided against such results for the coming season. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Claxton for the trouble and interest he had taken in the cheese business.

Mr. James Whitton, of Belleville, then spoke on behalf of Brett's annatto, manufactured in Ingersoll. After other brands were brought before the meeting and the subject fully considered, Mr. Whitton guaranteed the colouring, and in case any objection to the cheese should be raised from using the Brett's annatto, he bound himself to bring men from Ingersoll at his own expense to prove the colour to be genuine.

No improvement could be found upon the rennet of last year, therefore it was decided to use Hansen's extract again, which could be obtained through the agency of Mr. H. Best.

The next question was the boxes for which Mr. Bickel of Port Hope has been fighting hard for the last three years to get the Peterborough trade. Patience and perseverance were at last rewarded. After a lengthy speech from the gentleman before mentioned and a great deal of discussion, a contract was signed by the cheesemakers and Mr. Bickel, the latter agreeing to manufacture the boxes in Peterborough and deliver them at a fixed price within a circuit of twenty-five miles, and the cheesemakers agreeing to take all the boxes they use this season from the Peterborough cheese-box-maker.

The meeting then adjourned, leaving other important business unfinished.

Mr. Bickel will start a factory in Ashburnham.

THE IRISH LEAGUE.

THE GOVERNMENT TO DRAW A TIGHT REIN IN IRELAND.

LONDON, March 28.—W. H. Smith, the Government leader, intimated that the Government had decided to ask the House to pass the second reading of the Irish Criminal Law Amendment Bill before proposing the usual Easter holiday. [Cheers and counter cheers.] The Government, said Mr. Smith, disavowed any intention to menace the House, but he wished the members to understand that the measure was vital to order in Ireland, that it was one upon which the Government staked their existence and was more important than holidays.

Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, then moved the first reading of the Irish Criminal Law Amendment Bill. In doing so he referred to the terms of Mr. Parnell's proposed amendment to the bill, in which the Irish leader claims that the House should obtain further information about the condition of Ireland. Mr. Balfour thought the Parnellites were sufficiently informed of the state of their country, and should recognize Irish anarchy as an artificer recognizes his own work. The Government did not rest the case on statistics of agrarian crime. They took the view that the amount of crime must be considered in conjunction with its causes and character. The amount was shown in the fact that at the present moment there were 498 persons in Munster, 175 in Connaught and 251 in Leinster, under police protection. The law had been set aside and the vacuum had not been filled by the ordinary law. Here Mr. Balfour read a number of charges made by Judges to grand juries showing that the number of persons actually charged bore no relation to the amount of crime. Boycotting and intimidation, he said, were rampant in that part of the country most disturbed. The men who gave this testimony were not partisans. [Parnellite cries of dissent.] The paralysis of the courts of law was an evil necessary to be specially checked. It arose from the difficulty of inducing intimidated witnesses to speak out. In 755 cases 452 injured parties were so terrified that they refused to appear. When evidence was obtained the juries declined, even in the clearest cases, to convict. Here he adduced a long list of cases in which the juries had disregarded the evidence presented and asked if it was to be wondered at when the national press pointed out the jurymen giving a verdict and held them up to public reprobation and secret vengeance. Those persons desiring the separation of Ireland were ready to attain their object by the exercise of avowed terrorism. The jury system thus became impracticable. [Parnellite laughter.] The place which the law ought to fill was occupied by the National League. The members of the League relied upon the secret societies, dynamite and the dagger, the object of which was the bringing about of a state of anarchy by means of assassination. It was an absurd travesty of the facts, he declared, to say that the league had any resemblance to a trades union. The initial policy of the league was a combination for the plunder of individuals with the destruction of the constitution. The speaker then proceeded to give instances of boycotting, but was repeatedly interrupted by demands from the Parnellites for the names of the persons boycotted. He declined, however, to give the names unless the persons were beyond the reach of members of the league.

Mr. Balfour next read extracts from the United Ireland, disclosing the extent of the system of terrorism. He said the latest official returns showed that 1876 persons were boycotted under orders from the league. In many districts tenant-right had become valueless, because no selling of the right was possible unless sanctioned by the league. No tyranny, however cruel, could compare with the anarchy resulting from the existence of the league tribunals. Coming to the proposals of the bill, he stated that the Government had borrowed a provision from the Scotch system giving magistrates power to examine witnesses on oath, even when no persons are charged with crime. To meet the difficulty of getting verdicts they proposed to abolish the jury system altogether [cheers and counter cheers] for certain classes of crime, giving the magistrate jurisdiction, with power to impose a maximum penalty of six months' imprisonment in cases of criminal conspiracy, boycotting, rioting, offences under the Whiteboy acts, assault on officers of the law, forcible and unlawful possessions and, in cases of incitements of the foregoing offences. [Cheers.] The Government did not propose to interfere with the liberty of the press, but they hoped that by giving magistrates the power of summary conviction for inciting offences they would be able to prevent the press abetting in crime. The bill also gave the Government power to change the venue of trial for graver offences. The Government felt the difficulty connected with the abolition of trial by jury in Ireland and, therefore, proposed that the Attorney-General of England and Ireland, in cases of grave crimes, should certify when a fairer trial could be had in England, [cheers] when, under the same conditions as in case of change of venue in Ireland, the trial should be held in England. [Cries from the Parnellites: "This part of England!"] Irish counsel for the defence were to be allowed to appear in English courts [Parnellite laughter], and the bill would provide the necessary funds for the appearance of both prisoners and lawyers. Purely political offences, such as treason, treasonable felony and seditious libel, are excluded from the operation of the bill. The crimes [illegible] Members [illegible] are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

TEMPERANCE TEACHING IN SCHOOLS.

We learn, with pleasure, that a measure will shortly be introduced in the Ontario Legislature providing for explicit temperance and scientific instruction in the public schools of the Province.

This is a move in the right direction and the Reform party, from whom it emanates, deserve great credit for thus creating and fostering, by a very sensible and practical plan, the growth of a healthy public sentiment on one of the most vital questions of the day. Should the real nature and effects of alcohol be brought clearly and plainly before the half million of pupils now in our schools, it is simply impossible to estimate the good results of such instruction in the near future.

Before prohibition, pure and simple, can be enforced in this Dominion, (if the day should ever come,) say, even before the enactment of the Scott Act can be effected as rigidly and fully as earnest temperance workers now desire, it is essential that there should be, behind either measure, the strong voice of the public conscience and the loud demand of the public will. In other words, the temperance cause can only hope to be triumphant, when people are thoroughly educated as to the evils of drinking, and ready, not only to demand but to enforce restrictive legislation.

It must be admitted on all sides, that the time to begin the education of the people on this vital and deeply interesting subject is, not when they are not only prepared to tolerate temperance, but are themselves enthralled by the hideous monster. The time to begin is the palmy days of youth, and the proper place is the public school.

The very purpose of all educational institutions is to make good citizens; to fit men for the stern duties of life and to cultivate in them those qualities of industry, honesty, intelligence, and obedience to constituted authority, which will serve to make their lives prosperous and help them to fulfil the duties of their several vocations. These very qualities to which we have alluded, intemperance saps and undermines: yes, in many instances, totally destroys. Let a man be intemperate, and in the majority of cases he turns out to be the very opposite of industrious, honest, intelligent and submissive to law and order. This being the case, what better plan could be taken for the well-being of the future citizens of the state, and for the prosperity of the nation, than to show the rising generation the dread evils of intemperance, to guide them into ways of righteousness, to elevate their characters and to avoid alcohol, in every form, as they would the plague? Let it be shown by experiment and scientific deduction that alcoholic liquor as a beverage, is productive of a large amount of physical disease, that it entails diseased appetites upon offspring, and that it is the cause of a large percentage of the crime and pauperism of the country, and you put a weapon into the hands of the youth that will enable him to put to flight a monster which carries off hundreds of victims, at present, from all grades and classes of society.

The conclusion reached by one of England's most celebrated scientists is thus stated:—

"Alcohol deranges the constitution of the blood, unduly excites the heart and respiratory organs, paralyses the minute blood vessels, disturbs the regularity of the nerve action, lowers the animal temperature and lessens the muscular power."

Experience has fully shown that without alcohol, soldiers on long and toilsome marches, sailors subject to the rigours of the Arctic clime, and miners in the bowels of the earth, can better fulfil their appointed tasks and can excel the labors or the endurance of those addicted to drink. Statistics prove also, in the most indubitable manner, that the life of the total abstainer is considerably longer on the average than that of the moderate drinker.

The infamous results of intemperance are seen everywhere. We witness them in empty churches and school houses, in full hospitals, asylums, and crowded prisons, in impoverished homes and shattered nerves and palsied limbs, in brutal violence and raving delirium and sudden death. It blasts our prosperity at home, it mocks our efforts abroad, and simply neutralises our endeavors to elevate the heathen by the degrading and demoralizing example of the vices and bad conduct of the white man. Intemperance injures the social standing of our people in the present day, and it actually imperils our very existence as a nation in the coming future. This dread enemy of our race is not, as John Bright says, "thundering at our gates like a besieging army, but it is undermining the very ground on which we stand."

All this being so, it behoves us, therefore, to take some immediate steps to counteract its infamous, to neutralise, if possible, its dread effects, and to inculcate among the rising generation true and clear ideas of what they must expect should they be captured by this insidious foe. Already the Province has determined that the school teachers should be instructed as to the evil effects of alcohol on the human system, and in their text books on hygiene, this subject is fully and satisfactorily treated.

And now another step in the onward march is proposed, and the Liberal camp, as usual, is in the forefront of the battle. They have wisely determined that the good work thus well begun, in the Model schools, shall be continued and carried on, and during the present session a text book for use in the public schools, and descriptive of alcohol in its nature and effects on the human system, will be adopted and authorized.

A similar law exists in several States of the Union, and the Scientific Temperance Instruction bill, as it is called, has quite recently been adopted in many of the Western States and territories.

We have no doubt that the bill providing for instruction of a similar nature in our schools will pass during the present session, and we have every hope that its enactment will accomplish a vast amount of good, and tend to strengthen the growth of a healthy temperance sentiment throughout the entire Province. We need not add that, for ourselves, the EXAMINER will give the measure a hearty and earnest support.

LO! THE POOR INDIAN.

An Instructive Address by Rev. J. Gough Brick of Dunvegan Diocese of Athabasca, N. W. T.—An Appeal for the Indian.

The school room of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, was well filled Monday night on the occasion of the annual missionary services in connection with the church.

REV. MR. BRADSHAW opened with a few introductory remarks, which were followed by a song.

MR. JOHN BURNHAM, ex-M. P., being called upon for a speech, indulged in a little praise of the efforts made by the present government towards the development of the Northwest. The people of the Northwest were not receiving proper ministerial support at the hands of the people of their sister provinces in the east. He hoped the people would see their way clear to giving every possible aid to the cause represented by Mr. Brick.

REV. MR. BRADSHAW said that certainly the missionary cause did not receive proper support, and he hoped his parishioners would wake up to a realization of its worthiness.

REV. MR. BRICK was then introduced and during his discourse he pointed out the different places mentioned on a large map of the Northwest territories. He began by expressing pleasure at having the privilege of addressing the people assembled. It was customary to do so in beginning a speech; but he would say he would rather preach five sermons than make one speech. That reminded him of a story. A woman found her husband in a brown study, and asked him what were his thoughts. "I was thinking," said he, "of the time when you must fall sick and die—and I was wishing it was all over." That was just the speaker's case in regard to his forthcoming lecture. But he was really pleased at finding the among them. The missionary cause should receive every support of the church, and in proportion as the missionary spirit pervaded a church, so would that church prosper. Then he was glad to see the interest taken in the missionary cause by the laymen. A leaf could be taken from the Methodists in this respect, the success of which denomination was largely due to the earnestness and spirit with which the church leaders entered upon all classes of church work. It was also pleasing to him to see so many boys present. To them he related an amusing story relative to missionary work.

With regard to the mission on which he had come to speak, he would say that he felt glad at having the privilege of laboring among the Indians of the Northwest. He said he would speak to his audience about the country, the climate, the Indians, their customs and speech, their ways and means.

It was the first day of June when he left Toronto, four years ago; it was the 27th of September before his journey closed, so a pretty good idea could be gained of the extent of the country. The Americans boasted that their country was much larger than Canada, but he could say that in this there was a greater expanse of territory than all the United States with Alaska thrown in. It was almost impossible to give a definite idea of the extent of the immense territory of the North West. It had been estimated that there were 300,000,000 acres of land in the North West territories—a country about ten times the size of England, put into our possession as an heritage from God.

With regard to the climate he said he was often asked if they were not cold out there. Well, they were; he had seen the thermometer at 58° below zero, and he had just got a letter from his son saying that last winter was the coldest for some time, the thermometer reaching 63° below zero. But he could safely say that he felt the cold more here in Ontario this winter at 12 or 14° degrees below than in that distant country at 30 or 40° below zero, the atmosphere there being so very bad. The days in winter are of course very short, but the account is balanced in the summer. So, in order to take every advantage of the fleeting winter day light, they usually rise at 3 or 4 from their bivouac in some bushes or a snowbank, eat breakfast and travel three or four hours before any signs of day could be seen. Of course all travelling is done in winter by snowshoes, so the lot of a missionary, it would be seen, was not a luxurious one. But in the summer day broke about 1 o'clock in the morning, while at 9 o'clock at night a newspaper could be read and work could be continued till 11. Winter usually breaks up early, and cattle are always turned loose to pasture about the 20th of March, so that their winter was not in reality much longer than that in Ontario, cold weather being general from the middle of December to the last of January.

There are at present about 97,000 Indians spread over that immense district. There was practically no begun until 1842, and the beginning was very small indeed. At present there are six dioceses, which he marked off on the map, and of which he gave figures and comparisons showing the immensity of the North West territory.

To the boys present he would try to tell some peculiarities of the Indians, though that was about as difficult as telling the Indians about the Canadian people. He had been away from home, from his wife and family, for four and a half years—a pretty long time, and the Indians were constantly asking him about his people and how they existed. One day a number of Indians asked him about his wife and what kind of a place she lived in. To tell the Indian of a large city of thousands of inhabitants would be like telling an Indian about the Bible. He would ask him how many days it took to go from Peterboro to Toronto; and when told, would ask how many miles between two points—about six miles; and the length of the table the distance between two other places, about 8 miles apart. Mr. Brick said he didn't know whether he was exaggerating or not, but Toronto was growing, so he gave it lots of room. Then the table, representing a space six by eight miles, he filled up with imaginary houses; thus he gave them an idea of the city, though they could scarcely believe it.

If the Indians had been treated with a little courtesy and been given an idea of the country there would have been rise in rebellion. An Indian who had visited Canada proper, on his return was questioned by his red brothers about the white people, and how many there were. "Why," the Indian said, "they are as thick there as our mosquitoes are here"—and Mr. Brick added that the mosquitoes up in his region in June were about as thick as they could be.

There were three Christian denominations at work among the Indians—Methodists Presbyterians and the English Church, all doing good work.

With regard to the rebellion he had taken the trouble to ascertain some of the facts, and he had particularly noticed that there was not a single Protestant Indian under the guidance of the Episcopalian, Methodist or Presbyterian churches who took any part in the rebellion. Those deluded creatures who took up arms against their country were every one Catholics or Pagans. There was, it is true, a small band of the White Fish Indians (Methodists) who tried to make up a rebellion but the ringleader was shot and so the attempt ended in nothing.

There were some very funny things about the Indians. For instance, it is impossible to find out an Indian's name from himself. He won't tell, but the way Mr. Brick got around the difficulty was by going to another one and saying, "Ah, let's see, what's your friend's name?" and it would be told without hesitation. Another peculiarity of the Indians was the names they gave themselves, such as He-hears-the-wind-blow and Ugly-con. In all the Peace River district there were about 30 white persons, of whom only four were ladies. One of the ladies was a very spare woman, and for her they had a name which signified skeleton—a title which she resented.

Another peculiarity of the Indians is that they will never come and ask for a thing, but will, like the Irishman, give pretty broad hints. When they want to beg anything they will come at it in a round-about way that is very amusing.

Indians, too, are very superstitious, and have great

Strictly True.

In every respect and attested by the testimony of thousands that Putman's Painless Corn Extractor is a sure and painless cure for corns. The claim that it is just as good made by those endeavoring to palm off imitations for the genuine only proves the superiority of "Putmans." Use only Putman's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure, safe, painless. 6dw13

Disraeli's Love Story.

When Benjamin Disraeli married Mrs. Wyndham Lewis she was his senior by sixteen years. Yet five years after his marriage he gave her this character: "The most severe of critics, but—a perfect wife." Great men, and small men, too, do not usually take kindly to the criticisms of a wife, even when they are assured of her love and have confidence in her judgment. A man on his return home from an assembly or club, where he has been listened to as an oracle and referred to as a leader, is not usually in the mood to be criticised even by his affectionate wife. That Mr. Disraeli listened with meekness while Mrs. Disraeli told him, after a great debate in the House of Commons, what he ought to have said, and what he should have left unsaid, indicates that she was a woman of exquisite tact, and that he—loved her devotedly.

She was a loved helpmeet, for their union of thirty-three years was one of unbroken harmony, confidence, and affection. She believed in her husband, lived for him, studied his views and wishes, and served him with the zeal of an intelligent companion. The average husband is contented if his wife shows herself a good housekeeper, an attractive hostess, and a wise mother. But Benjamin Disraeli, not being an average man, made his wife his companion and treated her as his intellectual comrade. She became "the most severe of critics" because of her intense love and admiration. She was made a "perfect wife" by her husband placing her on an equality with himself.

When Disraeli delivered his great speech in the Free-Trade Hall at Manchester—a speech which helped the return of the Conservatives to power—she sat in a box immediately opposite the platform whence he spoke. The interest of those seated on the platform was often transferred from the speech to the sympathetic face of the orator's wife, and then to the way which, from time to time, he lifted his head as if seeking her smile of approval.

When the oration was finished she drove rapidly to the house of their host in the suburbs of the city to receive her husband. No sooner were the carriage wheels heard grinding upon the gravel than she hurried to the hall. As he entered she rushed into his arms and exclaimed: "O, Dizzy! Dizzy! This is the greatest night of all! This says for all!" At that moment she knew she could not live out the year—for three months before her physician had pronounced her death warrant—and every step of her movement to the door produced the acutest pain.

A well-known story also illustrates her strength of will and power of self-control when her love made them necessary. When Disraeli, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, rode to the House to introduce his last budget, she accompanied him. On getting into the carriage one of her fingers was crushed between the door and its frame. She maintained her composure, though the pain was excruciating, through the ride, and until she saw him pass through the "members'" entrance, and then fainted.

The man who makes his wife a companion may bear severe criticisms, but he will be "known in the gates."

The Little Girl of To-day.

A handsome, well-formed girl of 12 years, who is elaborately dressed three or four times a day, whose only chaperon seems to be her maid, who walks the verands of a large hotel with the savoir faire of the woman of the world, who sees her bed usually at 12 o'clock, who donates her stocking as a souvenir to her boy lovers, and who, with more self-possession than sweetness, is quite capable of asking for the best place in the dance or at the table, cannot, will not grow into the sort of woman that one would want one's boys to marry; and yet this is the typical small girl. I quite believe that she comes usually of the nouveau riche, for people who are really good form do not cast their children upon the dangerous waters of public parlors in large hotels. Good, strong, hearty, healthy children in picturesque clothes—for they do not need to be ugly to be proper—give pleasure to everybody; but "Froe-Froe" in miniature, like an imitation of a puppet, is to be frowned upon, derided, and eventually driven from position, because she is neither good for the present nor does she promise better for the future.—N. Y. Star.

A Northampton County schoolmarm gives the following sentence from the pen of her youngest and brightest scholar, given in answer to the request: "Write in twenty words a definition of 'Man.'" It read thus: "Man is an animal that stands up; he is not very big, and he has to work for a living.—Allentown (Pa.) Register.

"Oppress not nature, sinking down to rest,
With feasts too late, too solid, or too full."

Armstrong, when he wrote these lines, gave good scientific advice. Half of our people suffer from dyspepsia in some of its many forms. Life becomes a burden, and business worries and annoys. He Asked Too Much of it.

Marvelous as is the telephone its utility has made it as common as grocers' sugar, and in consequence it does not get the credit it justly deserves. People have ceased to wonder, and fill their selves unconsciously depending more than the little instrument can. This was the case of a well-known architect the other day when telephoning to the stone-yard about a certain piece of work. He had asked the stone-yard boss if he knew the exact shape of the stone that had been ordered, and on receiving a negative answer had promptly replied, "It is just this way," drawing the shape of the stone on the wall alongside of his telephone. He looked silly when he discovered his mistake, and quickly told the stone man he would call down and tell him about the stone.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

SEVEN MILLIONS INVOLVED.

A Will Case in Detroit Which Promises a Great Contest.

DETROIT, March 28.—Judge Thomas M. Cooley appeared in the Wayne Circuit Court [illegible] for Miss Clotilde Palms, [illegible] heir with her brother, [illegible] of the estate of the late [illegible]. The latter left property [illegible] to his children. The will provides for a trust to be held until maturity is attained by the children for either heir.

This is as near as the testator could come to entailing his vast possessions, and the lawyers say this will not stand the test of our laws. A provision in the will disinherited either heir who should contest the will. On the face, therefore, this case is merely a friendly discussion on the part of counsel to settle what the provisions of the will mean.

Under this disguise lurks what will probably prove the greatest will contest in the history of the state, and is likely to give Miss Palms more notoriety, she being known to the public now as the lady with whom Senator Jones of Florida was smitten. As Miss Palms has no children, the estate, in case she does unmarried and childless, would revert to her brother or his children. Besides Judge Cooley there is an eminent array of legal talent in the case.

SUN

LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA.

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 23rd, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,130.70, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Sumner were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit produced about sanity support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand the positive proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. MCLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance with six per cent. per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. PIERCE thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

LOCAL NEWS.

A Cool Fumine.

The sudden cold snap of yesterday caught a good many of the prudent householders of Peterborough napping. They were fondly doting on warm, sunny weather to relieve them of the necessity of keeping their coal bins full; but "the best laid plans of men and mice gang aft agley," so they were totally unprepared for the emergency which came suddenly, like a thief in the night, and upset all their precious calculations. Yesterday and to-day there has been a perfect rush of shivering householders to the coal yards, whose disbursing capacities have been weighed in the scales and found wanting, so to speak. Their teams were insufficient to fulfil the numerous orders which flowed in so rapidly as almost to overwhelm the dealers. Those who could not be supplied in the regular way and were unable to wait their turn, undertook to be their own beasts of burden, and toiling along the streets in all directions could be seen men drawing baskets, barrels or boxes full of coal on handsleighs to their homes. This will be a warning to them in future to not place such implicit trust in the weather indications or probabilities, as no reliance can be placed upon the promises of the fickle weather clerk.

Bishop Warren.

Who is he? A graduate of the Wesleyan University, Conn. U. S., a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States since 1855, in 1864 appointed by the Massachusetts State Senate to preach the election sermon, for two terms of three years each pastor of the largest Methodist church in Philadelphia, in 1880 elected to the Episcopic of the great church to which he belongs; an extensive traveller in Europe and Asia, a popular contributor of crisply written articles to several influential journals, author of a captivating work on astronomy, a splendid looking man, and an eloquent speaker. Bishop Warren comes to Peterborough on Friday night, then fills engagements in the Metropolitan and Elm street churches, Toronto, next week. His subject on Friday night in George street church will be "Forces in a Sunbeam." Such a theme will call into exercise the very best powers of this distinguished speaker

Yesterday Mr. T. Cavanagh shipped to New York, via Belleville, the finest team of horses he has handled for a year. They were mares, 4 and 5 years old respectively, jet black with white spots on the foreheads, weighing 2900 lbs., which Mr. Cavanagh purchased from Mr. John White, Rice Lake Plains, Durham Co., at a cost of $470.

On Monday next Mr. Dan. Coughlin will ship a carload of horses from Norwood to New York. Some of the horses were purchased from Mr. T. Cavanagh and the remainder at Norwood.

The goods are owned by Messrs. Black and Staples, of Fleetwood, Durham Co., who with their families leave for their western home to-night.

The Love of Christ for the Fallen.

Rev. Mr. White Discourses to the George Street Church—A Large Audience had Successful Services.

The George street Methodist church was well filled last night. Rev. Mr. White conducted the services, assisted by Rev. Mr. Tovell. These gospel temperance meetings are bound to be successful, not only on account of the interest manifested in the work by the Christian people of Peterborough, but largely because of Mr. White's popularity as an evangelist. Last night's services consisted of the usual addresses and songs, one of which he sang by special request, "Twas Rum that Spoiled My Boy." Rev. Mr. Tovell briefly addressed the meeting on the subject of temperance, dealing principally with the Scott Act, which he believed to be a good law if properly enforced.

Rev. Mr. White also referred to the Scott Act, which, he said, though not all that could be desired, was a step in the right direction. Some people, said he, come to us and say, "Oh, the Scott Act is no good. Why don't you come out for prohibition straight, and we will support you?" All very well, but if the Scott Act was abandoned, the temperance people would have neither it nor prohibition. The speaker was glad to see liquor men being fined for breaking the law; if this money was spent on the poor of the town and on charitable purposes, who could say that the Scott Act did no good? But he believed the only means to permanently cure the evil, if intemperance was to inculcate Gospel doctrines in the hearts of the people and educate them to the right point, "Let's have the love of Christ for the poor, fallen drunkard; there's nothing like it." Rev. Mr. White explained that he was curbed and restrained in his evangelistic work by the action of the Women's Christian Temperance Union autorities, who, he said, just when he had brought the people to the highest pitch, when their hearts were melting and becoming ready to receive a lasting impression from the Holy Spirit, transferred him to another field of labor before he could consummate his efforts and thus their results durable. He hoped the time would come, though, when he would have perfect liberty to conduct his own meetings as he liked. The ministry also came in for a share of Mr. White's mild unmerited castigation, which Rev. Mr. Tovell accepted with every good grace. Mr. White spoke on the subject of temperance, his vivid word-pictures and apt comparisons striking at the root of every heart, touching a responsive chord in each. He advocated the preaching of the Gospel and the practice of its teachings as the only radical remedy for the accursed evil of intemperance which overspread our land.

The choir also assisted in the services, helping Rev. Mr. White with several choruses.

The services will be conducted in the George street church again this evening.

Electing Their Officers.

Preparations for the Summer's Sports by the Athletic Association.

At a meeting of the Directors of the P. A. A. A. last evening, the following officers and committees were elected:—

PRESIDENT.—————.

FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT.—Mr. R. B. Rogers.

SECOND VICE-PRESIDENT.—Mr. G. W. Hatton.

SECRETARY.—Mr. F. E. Bell.

TREASURER.—Mr. A. St. A. Smith.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE.—Messrs. James Morris, W. Sallsbury and G. A. Schofield.

GROUND COMMITTEE.—Messrs. A. St. A. Smith, G. W. Hatton and R. B. Rogers.

COMMITTEE ON SPORTS.—Messrs. James Morris, W. Sallsbury, G. A. Schofield, R. B. Rogers, and Dr. Brennan.

The election of a President was deferred till another meeting, in order to give time for the amendment of a by-law which enacts that no member shall hold the office of President for more than two years. Dr. Burnham, the now President, has held the position for the the allotted time, and it is contemplated giving him a still further term of office. The Doctor has ably and satisfactorily fulfilled the duties of the position, nor has his being a merely perfunctory regard for the duties his position imposes. He has manifested so active and intelligent an interest in the development of a healthy taste for respectable athletic sports, and taken so practical, energetic and liberal a part in promoting their successful practice that the directors feel themselves warranted in making such arrangements as will admit of his serving a third term, and their action will, no doubt, receive the hearty endorsation of all those having the interest of the club at heart.

Some new members were admitted to the Association.

Arrangements have been made by which it is hoped to get the best ball-tossers in town into the Baseball club. It is intended, if possible, to have a crack amateur club in connection with the P. A. A. A.

Personal.

Mr. Albert Griffin, Post-office Inspector, of London, Ont., is in town to-day.

Mr. D. J. King, of Lindsay, was in town to-day.

Mr. R. H. Henderson, of the C. P. R. station, was in Toronto a couple of days this week.

Mr. W. J. Wallace, of Lakefield, left here last night for California, where he intends remaining for the ensuing year for the benefit of his health.

Miss Lillie Dixon left this morning for Chicago, where she will reside for a year or two, or perhaps permanently—"it may be for years, it may be forever." Miss Dixon will be greatly missed by her many warm friends in Peterborough, who assembled in force at the G. T. R. station this morning to wish her a safe journey and speedy return.

Information Wanted.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

In your issue of the 15th inst., you say that a patent has been granted to Mr. J. McAndrew for an improvement on a boiler. It has not appeared on the patent office record. Will you please furnish me with number of the patent, date of issue, and what improvement is claimed.

Yours truly,
GEO. BOLTON.

LO! THE POOR INDIAN.

dian goes out hunting and is not very successful. He applies to McKinley, who, on receipt of a [illegible] sends him a dozen deer; on the collar a man sticking a gun on a moose, under which he wrote some red ink to represent blood, and with this the Indian goes off filled with confidence and a determination [illegible]—and sure enough out of the dozen, through and through they went! The Indian is paralyzed with astonishment at the success of his own will and perseverance, buoyed up by hope and confidence. They have a peculiar superstition that the thunder is made by the screaming of a great bird in the sky, which, when it stretches out its wings, makes thigh grow dark.

In regard to the days and months, they are named very prominently. Sunday is the good day, Monday the day after the good day, Tuesday the second, and so on till Friday is reached, which is two days before the good day, and Saturday the day before the good day. The moons or months are named after [illegible] or animals, prominent [illegible] calling [illegible] moon, the [illegible] moon, etc. Then the Indians count by their toes and hands—45 would be two men's hands and so many toes. There were numberless peculiarities among the Indians, and the ones above mentioned were only a few.

As a rule, the Indians are very honest, though no doubt there are some dishonest ones. Mr. Brick said he never yet had anything stolen, though his house was constantly open, and they often called while the occupants were out. He instanced a case where, whilst on a journey, he had and it was returned to him a few or three weeks by the Indian who found it. If an Indian finds anything on the regular trail he sticks it up in a prominent place and there it remains till the rightful owner appears.

The Indians have their amusements. Card-playing is very little indulged in, but they have a game in which there is a good deal of gambling—a game of guessing at which hand a certain article is in.

Indians have frequent "sprees" after successful hunts, or other jubilee occasions. They go to some settler and get a large pot, put in it some tea, cut up some nigger head tobacco and fling that in, and then pour several bottles of pain killer, and from this mixture they have a good strong drink.

The Indians also dance, which accomplishment he believed they learned from the prairie chickens. Mr. Brick said he once had the privilege of watching a prairie chicken dance. Between 50 and 75 chickens were assembled on a knoll, and they went through a regular Irish jig, making an awful noise for such little birds. The Indians always took advantage of these chicken dances to secure a good supply of small game, as the chickens were easily snared.

Money is not an article of trade in the North West. From the time Mr. Brick left civilization till he again passed the borders he said he NEVER SAW A DOLLAR BILL.

Barter is carried on by skins. The Indian sells his furs for skins and with them buys his provisions from the Hudson Bay Company and other traders. Furs were cheap there, but provisions brought high prices. Tea was only a couple of skins or $1 a pound; a cake of soap, a handkerchief, ten needles, two spools of cotton, two yards of common print or cloth—cost a skin each, or 50c.

Rev. Mr. Brick said he had witnessed scenes in the North West during times of starvation which would hardly bear repeating. He hoped the government would grant aid for the purpose of curing for them properly, civilizing and instructing them. The C. P. R. was a useful road, but it needs extension. The road run through about the worst part of the North West. The lies to the north, and a railway branching north-west from Brandon and Portage la Prairie through the north district was one of the coming necessities. There was an excellent chance for a limited number of good settlers to go to his diocese and band together to help themselves and the Indians.

Rev. Mr. Brick closed by urgently appealing to the people in behalf of the missionary cause in general, and his diocese of Athabasca in particular. He again referred to his hopes of establishing an industrial school there, which he felt sure of being able to do.

Rev. Mr. Bradshaw announced that as Mr. Brick would be in this diocese for over a year yet, he had secured a promise from him to appear here again and give the people another delightful lecture on the North West and its Indian inhabitants.

At the close a collection was taken up, half of which was given Mr. Brick. The meeting was concluded by singing and prayer.

WAR ON PRIESTHOOD.

A THIRD ARREST MADE BY ORDER OF JUDGE BOYD.

DUBLIN, March 29.—At Thurles yesterday Father Ryan, in a short speech, said "that his prison would be a palace, and that had Justice Boyd power to erect a gallows it would not intimidate him." The Herbertstown tenants have vowed that they will not pay rent until Father Ryan and Farmer Maroney are released.

Ten thousand persons assembled at Thurles to greet Father Ryan. Father Dwyer addressed him on behalf of Archbishop Croke, who fully approved of Father Ryan's action. Similar ovations were tendered Father Ryan along the route. On his arrival at Dublin 2000 Nationalists escorted him in the Lord Mayor's carriage to the Imperial Hotel.

Lodged in Jail.

DUBLIN, March 29.—Father Ryan presented himself to-day before Justice Boyd of the Bankruptcy Court. He persisted in his refusal to tell the court what he knew about the doings of tenants in his parish respecting the transfering of their rents under the "plan of campaign," and was condemned to prison. When Father Ryan emerged from the court a procession was met by a multitude of citizens. They numbered many thousands and cheered the priest enthusiastically, and then followed him in procession to the jail, making his tour a triumphal one. A number of prominent men took part in the procession. Among the more conspicuous were Lord Mayor Sullivan and Archbishop Croke.

Another Priest Committed.

DUBLIN, March 29.—Father Slattery was also summoned by Judge Boyd to give similar information to that demanded of Father Ryan. He refused, and was also ordered to prison. Both priests were removed to jail in a cab. The people hooted and jeered the police, and for a while refused to permit the cab to proceed. A disturbance ensued, and the police, who rode with drawn swords, cleared a lane for the cab. Mr. O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, followed the prisoners to the jail. He, with the Lord Mayor and Archbishop Croke, rode in the Lord Mayor's carriage. The mob threatened the police along the whole route, and the scene at times was very exciting.

THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

The Poet Laureate's Ode in Honor of Her Majesty.

LONDON, March 29.—Tennyson's jubilee ode is published to-day. It is entitled "Carmen Saeculare," and is in alternative three and eight-line blank verse stanzas. The first and second stanzas are as follows:

Fifty times the rose has flowered and faded,
Fifty times the golden harvest fallen,
Since our Queen assumed the globe, the sceptre

She, beloved for a kindliness
Rare in fable or history,
Queen and Empress of India,
Crowned so long with a diadem,
Never worn by a worthier,
Now, with prosperous auguries,
Come, at last, to the bounteous
Crowning year of her jubilee.

Of the next five stanzas the short ones sing the attributes of the Queen and the long enjoin the nation to celebrate the jubilee with illuminations, festivals, charities, etc. The eighth stanza reads as follows:

You, the patriot architect,
Shape a stately memorial,
Make it regally gorgeous—
Some imperial institute,
Rich in symbol, in ornament,
Which may speak to the centuries,
All the centuries after us,
Of this year of her jubilee.

The ode is the subject of general ridicule. It is regarded as a bad imitation of Walt Whitman. Even the conservative Globe gives a sneering parody of it.

THE CHURCH AND THE K. OF L.

Cardinal Gibbons' Report on the Labor Organizations

ROME, March 29—In Cardinal Gibbons' report on the Knights of Labor the Cardinal refers to the fundamental principle of the American existence of that popular power, regulated by a love of order, respect for religion and obedience to laws. He recognizes the great question of the future is not a question of war, commerce or finance, but the social question, touching the amelioration of the condition of the popular masses, especially the workingmen. Therefore it is of sovereign importance that the Church be found always firmly ranged on the side of humanity and justice towards the multitude composing the body of the human family. The conditions of the lower classes at present cannot, and should not, continue.

A Sensation in Court.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 29.—A sensational episode occurred in the Superior Court yesterday. A year ago John A. Lyons was killed by Samuel Morley. Lyons was supposed to be unmarried. He left an estate worth $20,000, to which his relations laid claim, which claim was disputed by a woman who asserted that she had been married to Lyons, the result of the union being a daughter who is 18 years old. Record evidence showing that the marriage was solemnized in St. Louis was ruled out, and the case of Mrs. Lyons seemed hopeless, but yesterday to the great surprise of the defense, the priest who performed the ceremony appeared in court. His testimony completely established the claim made by the dead man's wife and she will probably get the whole estate.

CRIMES BILL DEBATE.

MR. GLADSTONE VIGOROUSLY ASSAILS THE MEASURE.

LONDON, March 29.—In the House of Commons to-day Mr. Gladstone resumed the debate on the Irish Criminal Law Amendment Bill. He was loudly cheered when he arose. He said that in an issue so grave, proposals so extreme as these now put forth by the Government required ample time for consideration. He found himself bound to support Mr. Parnell's amendment because the ground upon which Mr. Balfour based the Government's case was absolutely insufficient and unsatisfactory. The Government's bill, instead of being a cure for Irish ills or even a palliative, was a measure that would aggravate the deepest seated and worst disorders. "With this Coercion Bill," exclaimed Mr. Gladstone, "the prospect of conciliation has vanished into thin air. The Government intend to exclude the Land Bill, which was the main recommendation of the commission which has just completed an exhaustive investigation of the Irish troubles. Nothing remains but the figure of coercion, bare, bald and gaunt, alas! too familiar." The Chief Secretary for Ireland has attempted to excuse the proposals on the ground that crime in Ireland during the last three years has increased, but he has followed an unusual course in refraining from giving the House official information proving his allegations. The statistics of crime in Ireland were against the Government.

It was the first time he (Gladstone) knew of anonymous assertions being imposed on Parliament in support of a demand for legislation. [Cheers.] A demand was made upon the House to commit the most formidable breach of trust that a popular assembly could perpetrate, to relax the conditions upon which alone Parliament should sanction a change in the criminal laws, in order that the law might fall with increased stringency upon a particular portion of the Queen's subjects. The Opposition would insist upon having the fullest opportunity to examine the provisions of the bill. Every Irish and every English member should have the fullest scope for presenting his views coherently and for sifting and scrutinizing the extreme proposals of the Government. Among its most insulting and exasperating proposals—the worst ever submitted to Parliament—was the provision that Irish trials be held in London. He had never known such a blow at the national feeling of Ireland. The Government could have devised nothing more likely to aggravate every existing evil. As to the permanent duration of the bill, the proposals made one's blood boil. To establish what was formerly only a temporary remedy as a permanent rule of existence for society in Ireland would put a brand of infidelity upon Ireland forever, recognizing as fixed principle that force was a remedy. The lesson of many years showed that force was no remedy. Since the election of 1885, since the bulk of the Liberals had judged that it was both right and safe to grant Home Rule Ireland had been free from crime and outrage—a condition long unknown. Why was this? It was because the Irish people knew that a large—though insufficiently large—body of Liberals had adopted their interests, and would abide by them to the last. [Cheers.] If the Liberals acceded to the appeals of the Government the result would be a retrogression. The Irish people would return to ask some things which Liberal efforts had already partly remedied. So long as Ireland continued in her present course of moderation, so long would the Liberals be bound to persevere in endeavors to assist her. The time would soon come when to the many now supporting the cause of Ireland would be added many more, when deplorable proposals such as those of the Government would be no more associated with the name of Ireland, and when it would be seen that in doing what they could now to serve the Irish cause they were also serving the cause of the wide Empire of Great Britain.

It was a Strong Speech.

LONDON, March 29.—Mr. Gladstone's speech is widely commented upon as an effective exposure of the feebleness of the Government's reasons for demanding coercion. The strength of his reasoning is admitted by the Conservatives, and is felt keenly by the Unionist-Liberals, more of whom threaten to secede unless the Coercion Bill be reduced to simple provisions against boycotting and the plan of campaign. The Conservatives already talk of dropping the proposals relating to the transfer of jury trials, especially since Unionist papers in the provinces declare them to be untenable.

A Meeting at Dublin.

LONDON, March 29.—Michael Davitt, presiding at a meeting of the National League at Dublin to-night, said the very stringency of the Balfour measure appeared to him to be a favorable feature. He was not prepared to say what it might be necessary for Irish manhood to do when naked tyranny reigned in Ireland. Under previous Tory Governments despots had been made to feel, when they tried to crush liberty, that they themselves had been crushed. William O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, said he would not pretend to be violently apprehensive of the future. The Irish people had gone through similar trials before as those they would have to endure should the proposed coercion law be adopted. "When Mr. Balfour shall have had experience in the results of coercion," said Mr. O'Brien, "he will find a plank bed a much more tolerable couch than the bed of the Chief Secretary for Ireland."

Parnell's Message to Fitzgerald.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 29.—The following cablegram was received by John Fitzgerald to-day:

HOUSE OF COMMONS, LONDON, March 29.

Hon. John Fitzgerald, Lincoln, Neb.: The Coercion Bill proposed to-night in the House of Commons is the eighty-seventh since the Act of Union, 87 years ago. It is also the most stringent, tyrannical and uncalled for by the state of affairs in Ireland. Never before has a coercion bill been proposed when crime was so rapidly decreasing as compared with previous years. The measure is aimed against all open agitation, and appears to be expressly designed for driving discontent beneath the surface. It places all public speakers, writers and conductors of newspapers absolutely at the mercy of stipendiary magistrates, holding their offices at the pleasure of the Crown. It condemns the Irish-speaking peasant of rack-rented Kerry to the tender mercies of a packed jury of Orangemen or landlords, or to a jury of Englishmen at the Old Bailey in London. The Liberal party, headed by Gladstone, stands as one man against this iniquitous measure and will fight shoulder to shoulder with us in opposing it to the last. It seems impossible to believe that even the present House of Commons will continue to follow the Tory Government in their mad course, and good Judges consider the measure will break and ruin the Cabinet. We must, however, prepare for the worst, and I confidently appeal to the American people for that sympathy and support which they have never withheld from a people struggling for liberty.

(Signed) PARNELL.

This reply was sent:

LINCOLN, Neb., March 29.

Hon. Chas. S. Parnell, M.P., House of Commons, London: The league will redouble its efforts. Ireland is sure of American sympathy and support in the coming crisis. The Nebraska Legislature to-day, by unanimous vote, passed resolutions of sympathy with Ireland, and condemning the Tory policy of coercion. This and similar manifestations throughout this free country give the lie to the slanders of the English press, that true Americans do not sympathize with Ireland. This great liberty-loving people of the United States are entirely in sympathy with Ireland's struggle for Home Rule.

(Signed) JOHN FITZGERALD, President.

McGILL UNIVERSITY.

The Conferring of Degrees in Medicine and Presentation of Prizes.

MONTREAL, March 29.—The conferring of degrees and the presentation of prizes of the medical faculty of McGill University took place this afternoon before a distinguished audience, Hon. Senator Ferrier, Chancellor, in the chair. The total number of students registered in the faculty of medicine during the past year was 281, of whom there were from Ontario 112, Quebec 86, New Brunswick 23, Nova Scotia 19, United States 11, Prince Edward Island 6, Newfoundland 3, Manitoba 1, England 1.

The Holmes gold medal for the best examination in all branches comprised in the medical curriculum was awarded to Edward Evans of Seaforth, Ont.

The prize for the best examination in the final branches was awarded to H. A. Lafleur of Montreal.

The prize for the best examination in primary branches was awarded to Alex. E. Garrow of Ottawa, Ont.

The Sutherland gold medal was awarded to John Creason of Owen Sound, Ont.

The degree of LL.D. was granted to Rev. Prof. Shaw, M.A.; Rev. D. H. Kraus, M.A., New York, and Mr. Robert Ellis, M.A., Ottawa.

The following honors were awarded for gymnastics: Jas. Naismith, fourth year, Wishaw gold medal; W. A. Cameron, fourth year, honorable mention; R. J. Mackenzie, second year, silver medal, and G. A. Brown, bronze medal.

As usual the Y. M. C. A. students of the medical faculty of McGill University have done nobly in recent examinations. In the first, second and third years the Y. M. C. A. men have come prominently to the front, the three students receiving the highest marks in the primary subjects being members of the Association. Although numbering only one in seven of the students in that faculty they have captured five out of the ten prizes awarded at the convocation to-day.

The corporation of McGill University is to send a petition to the Legislature setting forth the encroachments being made on the value of standing in the Protestant universities in connection with entrance into the learned professions in the Province of Quebec. Similar petitions are being signed by representative of Bishops College and by the Protestant Committee of the Provincial Council of Public Instruction.

MONTREAL DETECTIVES.

Investigation into Charges Made Against Them.

MONTREAL, March 29.—The investigation into the charges against the police detectives was continued to-day. Judge Dugas was examined, and said the detectives did not render all the assistance they might, showing great negligence in some cases. He also stated that his belief was that they would rather let prisoners escape than let any other one arrest them. He instanced the case of Racine, for supposed complicity in circulating $3 Dominion notes. Detective Nagle, he said, bought over $600 of the counterfeit notes and went to Ottawa with them as proof against Racine. It was decided not to arrest the latter immediately, but in a short time the Government officials became impatient and demanded Racine's arrest. This was effected at Racine's residence, and he was brought to Judge Dugas' house. Racine admitted his guilt and promised to do all in his power to help to recover the plant. He went out with Nagle, permission being given. An order was given Nagle to detain Racine for three hours and to report at 3 a.m. Witness did not see Racine again. Nagle afterwards told him that Racine had escaped. Racine proceeded from the United States to Paris. Nagle, at least, must have shown too much confidence in Racine in allowing him too much liberty. Nagle took a very grave responsibility on himself in letting Racine escape.

EFFECT AND CAUSE.

The Toronto Mail in its answers to correspondents, sets down the majority of the Dominion Government as a result of the February elections (not counting the post elections) at thirteen. Assuming this to be an approximately correct estimate, it is worth while to consider the causes which contributed to a failure of the Liberal party to carry the country. In his address before the Ontario Reform Club at Toronto, Sir Richard Cartwright gave his explanation. He maintains that the majority, shifty and unreliable as it is, was secured through the effects of the operation of three causes: first, the Gerrymander Act of 1882; second, the Franchise Act; and third, by gross partiality on the part of returning officers or their deputies. Referring to the last he asserts that three seats have been taken from the Liberals in Ontario by the misconduct of these officers. The effect of the Gerrymander carried eleven seats for Conservatives which would have gone Liberal had the boundaries of the constituencies been the same as before the "redistribution." Sir Richard, however, attributes the largest proportion of Conservative success to the Franchise Act. Respecting the revision of the lists he gives the revising judges credit for acting fairly, but he cannot entertain the same opinion of the partizans who prepared the initial lists. He says that these parties so formed them that in numerous cases the candidates of the Liberal party were at "extraordinary disadvantages," and the advantage to the Conservatives were in direct ratio. These advantages to the government party enabled that party to make a much better showing than they otherwise could have done, yet in thirteen Ontario ridings the aggregate of the Conservative majorities was only 440, an average majority of only about 34, and that a change of only 17 votes in these thirteen ridings would have wiped out, according to the Mail's reckoning, the government's majority. These constituencies he specified as follows: Haldimand, Government majority, 1; Kingston, 17; West Peterborough, 16; Lennox, 23; West Huron, 20; West Northumberland, 37; South Victoria, 47; Peel, 43; London, 39; Algoma, 34; South Norfolk, 61; North Grey, 37; Muskoka, 44. In the riding of West Peterborough the local Conservative organ boasted at the conclusion of revision of the lists, that the Franchise Act had resulted in a gain of some 150 Conservative votes. If this claim was well founded, the result of the recent election shows that the factitious gain of 150 votes was only barely enough to save the Conservative candidate from defeat.

Practical deductions from Sir Richard's researches include the advisability of reopening every constituency in which a close vote was had, and where there is reason to believe that unjust means were used on behalf of the Government to influence the electorate. The importance of the Liberals paying increased attention to the revision of the voters' lists is also apparent, and in this connection it may not be out of place to subjoin the Globe's advice on the subject, as follows:

"Reformers should begin at once to prepare for the proper revision of the electoral lists. The late elections showed them the immense importance of a careful and thorough revision, as the proceedings at the Revision Courts last year showed what is to be expected of the Revising-officers. It is of especial importance that the original lists should be properly prepared. And that a partisan Revising-officer may have no excuse for preparing a list thoroughly partisan, full information should be furnished to him in every case. The Liberal committees know now what names of Liberals were omitted from the lists prepared last year, and what names of minors and other Tories not legally qualified were on those lists. They should also the Provincial electoral lists to assist them in ascertaining what names should be put on and what should be struck off. A central committee can, without much difficulty, obtain from those who took an active part in the canvass of each polling division, lists of the names improperly omitted and of those improperly put on, and such evidence in support of the applications to add or strike off names as even the most shameless partisan officer can not reject. This preparatory work can probably be done, and while the recollection of all that the late elections revealed is still fresh. In every case the Provincial lists should be carefully compared with the Dominion lists."

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO.

Sixth Parliament--First Session.

MONDAY, March 28th.

Several petitions were presented in favour of giving women the legislative franchise, and of introducing temperance text books in the Public schools.

Several private bills received their first reading and others were advanced a stage.

Mr. FREEMAN asked whether anything has been done by the Minister of Agriculture for the past two years towards retaining in the province the surplus stock disposed of at the annual sales at the Agricultural farm.

Hon. A. M. ROSS said nothing had been done further than the regulation approved of providing that the expenses of the transport of animals purchased by citizens of the province should be paid to any part of Ontario. The regulation had been effective in preventing animals from going out of the province.

Mr. IRELTON moved for a return showing the number of lunatics in the county gaols of the province for each month from the 1st day of March, 1886, to the 1st day of March 1887, and showing also the number of days each lunatic was detained in the gaol; the number of buildings now under construction for the accommodation of the insane; the number they are expected to accommodate, and when the buildings will will be ready for use. He called attention to the disgraceful practice of confining lunatics in the county gaols owing to the asylums being full.

Hon. A. S. HARDY said the subject was one of great importance. The difficulty was that there were in the asylums a number of harmless chronic patients who ought to be provided for in their own localities, as was the custom in the United States. These people took up the accommodation which ought to be given to violent patients. He did not know whether the Government should not erect a large central asylum for the chronic harmless cases, of which there were about one thousand; or the Government could convert one of the present institutions into a retreat of the kind. There were now 3,190 patients in the various asylums of the Province. There was accommodation for only twenty-eight additional patients. There were confined in county gaols 96 insane persons and there are 326 other applications for asylum accommodation. Two cottages were in course of erection at Orillia, which would accommodate 100 patients each, and accommodation for 300 patients was in course of construction at Hamilton. Mr. Hardy was not satisfied that the pressure upon the gaol could be immediately lessened.

Mr. Balfour's bill to give county councils power to assess owners of unoccupied lands for line fences was read the second time.

The bill for consolidating and amending the Acts respecting insurance companies (the Attorney-General) was read the second time.

Hon. Mr. PARDEE moved the second reading of the bill respecting land surveyors and the survey of lands. He stated it embodied the recommendations of a recent meeting of sixty surveyors. Read a second time.

Hon. Mr. Mowat's bill respecting the custody of documents relating to land titles was read the second time.

"Military Horses."

(Montreal Star.)

An article in the St. James Gazette shows why the English officers were not very successful last summer in purchasing horses for the British service in Canada. They say in the report that "the great proportion of horses to be met with in Canada are unsound, or blemished, from having been overworked or uncared for when young; that the great bulk of horses for sale in the ranches are only three years old and under; and that a very large number of the Canadian horses are too small for our cavalry, while many are too heavy for our artillery. At present Canada contains few horses fit for our cavalry and artillery, and few draught animals suitable for military service, but the ranches boast of some promising three-year-olds and young stock which very possibly may be available in future years." Col. Ravenhill, one of the commissioners, in an address to British horse-breeders, which he delivered in the beginning of the present month, says that the military horse most important and most difficult to procure in any quantity is that required for riding purposes, "with lengthy rein, good shoulders and forehead, good back and loins, as well bred as we can get them; they must walk freely and well, and at five years old should stand not less than 15 hands 2 inches high; of these we should have at least three-quarters of the whole supply, 1,100 to 2,000 required in peace time annually for the army, or about 1,500 horses." The second kind wanted for military purposes is the draught horse. This, Col. Ravenhill says, should be "a compact, short-legged, quick-walking, good-going van horse, between 15 hands 2 inches to 16 hands high."

When Canadian horse breeders know exactly the kind of horses that are required for the British army—and after all what is wanted is only a good general purpose horse, well bred and perfectly sound—they will be at some pains to raise animals that shall be in every respect up to the requirements of the service. Such horses, we are satisfied, can easily be raised in every one of the provinces, but after a time the ranches of the North West will, no doubt, be the chief source of the Canadian horse supply to meet the foreign demand. The St. James Gazette says that Great Britain "draws from all sources abroad annually 16,000 horses, and we should unquestionably buy many more if we could only get them." Such an extensive market as that is well worth looking after by Canadian breeders.

HE IS THE FIRST.

A Colored Catholic Priest Makes His Debut in New York.

A New York telegram of recent date to the Cincinnati Times Star says: For a long time the colored Catholics of this city have been waiting to hear mass celebrated by a priest of their race, and yesterday their wishes were gratified at the church of St Benedict the Moor, at the corner of Bleecker and Downing streets. It was announced that the services would begin at 11 A. M., but long before that time every seat in the church was filled. Colored people, old and young, came from all parts of the city. Rev. Father Augustus Tolton, the first and only colored Catholic priest in this country, celebrated mass, assisted by Rev. Father Burke, pastor of the church, and Rev. Father Burtsall.

When the colored priest appeared all eyes were turned toward him and his every action was watched. He was perfectly at ease and made a few remarks in an eloquent manner. He sang the mass in a powerful voice that filled the whole church. He is a fine looking man, nearly six feet in height, and has the typical head and face of his race. He was born in Ralls county, Missouri, in 1854. His father and mother were slaves, and he was born in serfdom. His early life during those dark days was one of hardship and suffering.

At nights, when others were at rest, he picked up what learning he could from such stray books as came into his possession. In 1860 he, with his mother and father, escaped and went to Quincy, Ill., where, in 1861, they obtained their freedom. Augustus obtained work in a tobacco factory, and after working all day would spend a greater part of the night in his studies. In 1879 he announced his intention to Father Michael, the principal of St. Francis' college, of studying for the priesthood.

Father Michael was pleased, and wrote to the vicar general of the Roman Catholic church at Rome. The vicar replied, and in an interesting letter said: "Augustus Tolton is accepted in the Propaganda college." This was happy news to Tolton, and Feb. 15, 1880, he left Quincy, where, in addition to his studies, he had become a teacher of the catechism in a Catholic Sunday school, and went to Rome, entering the Propaganda college March 12, 1880. His studies there were characterized by earnestness and exceptional industry.

Two years were spent in the study of philosophy and four years in the study of theology. On the 24th of last April he was ordained by Cardinal Parocchi, who advised him to meet his first congregation in this city. Father Tolton arrived here last Tuesday, and at once went to see his old friend Father Corrigan. He appeared in Father Corrigan's church at mass several times last week.

"It is, of course, gratifying to me to know that I am the first of my race to be an ordained Catholic priest of this country," he said to your reporter yesterday. "I have no doubt, however, that in a few years there will be many of us. I sincerely hope so. There is a young man, James Parcell, now studying in the Propaganda with the intention of becoming a priest in this country. He is a native of Jamaica, West Indies. I shall probably say mass at Father Corrigan's church to-morrow morning, and shall most likely leave on Tuesday for Quincy, my old home, where I shall preach next Sunday and shall have a parish. This afternoon I attend the Church of the Epiphany, at Second avenue and Twenty-first street, with Father Burke. The kindness with which I was received this morning is very encouraging."

Young man in search of a place—"Do you need any hands, Mr. Hayseed?" Farmer Hayseed—"Need 'em? Certainly I do. Pull off your coat and pitch right in." "How about the—er—eight-hour rule? Do you believe in that?" "That's the rule on this farm young man. You go to work at 4 in the morning and knock off at noon. Then you go on again at 1 o'clock and work till 9. Eight hours at a time is enough for me, I tell you."—Philadelphia Call.

LIFE ASSURANCE CO. OF CANADA.

Gross Life Business for 1886, - - - $3,540,000.

EXTRACT FROM MONTREAL WITNESS, DATED DECEMBER 31st, 1886:—

THE LATE MR. McLACHLAN.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

We have been asked by Mr. McLachlan to publish the following, and do so in view of the exceptional public interest taken in the case mentioned:—

To R. Macaulay, Esq., Managing Director of the Sun Life Assurance Company:—

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in acknowledging the payment by you of $17,430.00, being the amount due under the policies held by your Company on the life of my brother, the late John S. McLachlan. A company's character is tested when an opportunity arises in which it has the power to take advantage of a technicality or inability (as in the present case) to comply with every condition and requirement, so as to occasion delay and expense, and perhaps finally defeat a just and honest claim. There is no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that my brother and Mr. Bethune were unhappily drowned, and the affidavit produced abundantly support this; but although a careful search has been made, the bodies may never be recovered owing to the swiftness of the current and the low temperature of the water. It would, indeed, be a hardship if any company were, under the circumstances, to demand technical proofs which, from the very nature of the case, it is impossible to furnish. I have great pleasure in certifying to the honorable and liberal manner in which your Company has acted in regard to the claim. As soon as your board of directors was aware that the accident had really happened, you gave every facility for a prompt settlement. You have been the first of the companies interested to pay, and I thank you for the kind and satisfactory manner in which you have met me.

W. McLACHLAN.

The Dominion Safety fund, we understand, has also paid its policy of $2,000. The Sun Life has taken from the executors of Mr. McLachlan a personal bond to refund the amount of insurance with six per cent per annum compound interest, should he ever turn up alive. Mr. J. S. McLachlan had in all $42,130.70 insurance on his life, and other companies resist the claims.

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. PIERCE thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

The Bachelors' Assembly.

Tuesday Night Gathering of the Elite of the Town and District.—The Young Bachelors Entertain Their Lady Friends.

There was a sound of revelry by night. And Bradburn's Opera House had gathered [illegible] merry and the chivalry, and bright [illegible] shone o'er fair women and brave [illegible]; [illegible] hearts beat happily, and when [illegible] Johannsen's music rose with spirit [illegible] the dancing began, and the bachelor's ball was fairly opened. It was indeed a pretty scene—the hall beautifully decorated with bright streamers of bunting, flags, banners, pictures and flowers. The stage was fitted up as an elegant drawing room, whence those not caring to whirl in the dizzy dance could view the whole scene from a point of vantage. Brilliancy and variety were given the scene by the beautiful dresses, of the ladies many of them conspicuous for elegance and taste.

On a large dias at the rear of the hall were the musicians, Marciano's Italian orchestra from Toronto, comprising eight pieces, and the sweet strains they evolved filled the hearts of the merry waltzers with mirth and joyousness. Professor Doucet had a general supervision over the musical part of the programme. Almost the whole floor of the Opera House was cleared for dancing, seats being ranged along the walls and under the gallery, giving ample space for tripping the light fantastic. The entire internal arrangements were perfect, and the young men who had the matter in hand did themselves credit. Every care was taken to render the assembly a success, and those who attended were apparently enjoying themselves to the utmost.

There were in all over fifty couples present, many of whom were from surrounding towns and villages. Dancing was kept up unremittingly till nearly four o'clock, by which time the programme of thirty numbers was exhausted.

At the witching hour of midnight a general adjournment was made to the concert hall, adjacent, where Mr. Harry Long, the popular caterer, had spread a recherche repast, to which the young men and maidens fair, with appetites sharpened by several hours of terpsichorean exercise, did ample justice. Harry deserves a large meed of praise for having carried out his important part of the proceedings in such excellent manner.

Taken all in all, the bachelors' assembly was a brilliant success, and the young men have every reason to feel highly elated over the favorable issue of their efforts, in repaying the debt of hospitality to the several ladies of the town, a recognition being practicable in no other form.

The Bachelors' Ball.

To the Editor of the Daily Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—Though my dancing days are over, I can sympathise with the paternal desire of the youngsters to enjoy themselves in the many movements of the dance, though the dancing of the present day—a pompous prance in quadrille—is nothing compared to the dancing that was dancing—not a sort of dead march—in the days when my heels were young. I have nothing but praise for the independent spirit of the bachelors in their determination to balance the debt of entertainment and amusement they owe to the married ladies of the town, by giving an assembly under their own auspices. Their course is very commendable, and though they may think they know just how to manage an affair like that of last night, I can give them a pointer—they will never be perfect till they get the advice of a wife on the subject, which means that the bachelors should get married and get houses of their own. If they do this, and furnish it with Belleghem's furniture, they will be in a position to give a party without "hiring a hall." This advice is given by one who knows, especially in regard to the furniture, which is the most important part to remember. Good wives are as abundant as good advice, but first-class furniture is scarce as following good advice, unless it is got at Belleghem's. Bear this in mind and accept the best wishes and blessing of

AN OLD STAGER.

Peterborough, March 30th.

CHILDREN should not be allowed to go with wet feet, because a pair of solid kip boots from Kidd's new store costs only 70 cents.

Peterborough 1886—Toronto 1887.

Since the year 1, when Adam's pomological indiscretion, made the wearing of clothing de rigeur in good society, no greater benefactor has arisen than Gough, the Wonderful Cheap Man. His arrival in Peterborough has made a total revolution in the ready-made clothing trade. The era of wonderful cheap prices which came in with Gough, has not only enabled the man of limited means to don the attire of a gentleman, but his clothing is of such superior style, material and fit as to commend itself to habilimentary exquisites, and our bankers, merchants, lawyers etc., may be now seen proudly walking our streets arrayed in Gough's clothing. Gough's clothing and stylish goods have made ready-made clothing popular—in the bright lexicon of Gough there is no such word as—"store clothes," used as a word of reproach. Gough's wonderful success in Peterborough has led his restless spirit of enterprise to carry the war into Africa—he has opened at 420 Queen street west, Toronto, a shop stocked with $20,000 worth of superb ready-made goods. His Peterborough establishment is here to stay, nevertheless. His advent to the Queen City will wake up the high priced clothers from their dream of cent per cent profits, and in placing the best of goods within the reach of the humblest as well as catering to the tastes of the highest, Gough has before him in Toronto the same career as a public benefactor which has distinguished him in Peterborough. And his going thither will be a benefit to the newspapers for Gough is a live man, in the widest application of that term, and deals in printer's ink by the keg. Great is Gough and cheapness is his profit.

Return of the Erring One.

A despatch from Hamilton, March 29th, says:—"The Peterborough girl, Bertha Hunt, who was led away by a young man some after she came to this city and was captured in a raid on a house of ill-repute, and who professed a desire to go home and reform, was taken home to-day by a relative."

Razed to the Ground.

The frame house opposite Snowdon's hotel, Simcoe street, occupied by Dr. Beattie, Veterinary Surgeon, is no more—it lies in a fragmentary heap of boards, lath and plaster. Mr. Snowdon intends erecting in its stead a handsome brick block. The Doctor has removed to the opposite side of the street a few doors west.

Gazetting.

Commodore Rogers, of the Northern Division A. C. A., has received several congratulatory letters from prominent canoe men of the A. C. A. and of the Central Division, of which the Northern Division is a branch, all favouring the Stony Lake meet in August, and promising their assistance and attendance. New members are constantly joining the new Northern Division, which will soon be in tip-top condition financially and numerically.

Generously Rewarded.

Monday afternoon a poorly dressed and wearied looking woman called at the house of Mr. Walter Paterson, Hunter street, and after telling a pitiable widow-with-eleven-children story, asked for charity. One of Mr. Paterson's daughters had answered the bell, and she generously went into another part of the house to get some change, returning and handing it to the applicant. Shortly afterwards a fine new pair of kid mitts, which Mr. Paterson had left on the hall table, were missed. There can be no doubt that they were stolen by the woman. There is a moral in this, obvious to all.

In Memory

OF THE LATE MRS. WILLIAM LEARMOUTH, OF OTONABEE, WHO DIED MARCH 25TH, 1887, AGED 77 YEARS.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

Another of those old settlers gone! A kind-hearted and loving neighbor she was to both rich and poor, and she was loved by all that knew her.

Her body, we have laid it low
In Norwood's sandy land,
And there we know that it will be
Till God doth it demand.

Her spirit it hath fled to heaven
To sing his praise forever,
And there we knew that she has gone.
Beyond the stream forever.

The boat that carried her across
Will soon be back again,
To take another from the shore
Across the living stream.

A loving husband she has left
To wander here alone,
But, by and by, we know they'll meet
Where parting is unknown.

An honest-hearted wife she was,
While on this earth below,
But now she's gone, we may be sure,
We all have soon to go.

P. G. WALKER.

Westwood, March 30th, 1887.

DIED.

PENGELLY.—At the residence of A. St. A. Smith, north end of George street, Helen, relict of the late James Pengelly, Peterborough.
